CODE INTRODUCTION TO THE CRIMINAL PROCEDURE.

THE importance of supplementing the Penal Code by wise rules r preventing offences and bringing offenders to justice appears om the following considerations 1:-

First, expense, delay or uncertainty in applying the best laws r the prevention and punishment of offences would render those ws useless or oppressive:

Secondly, the law relating to criminal procedure is more conantly used, and affects a greater number of persons, than any other The offender and the individual injured are, as a rule, the aly persons immediately affected by the commission and punishent of a crime. But in the measures prescribed for preventing times and prosecuting criminals any one, however unconnected with given offence, may find himself involved. As a judge, a magisate, a soldier, a volunteer, a policeman, or even a private citizen, very one is liable to become an active party in preventing the ommission of crimes, in stopping the progress of crimes continuous their nature, or in arresting foffenders. In India, moreover, rivate persons are liable to serve in trying cases as jurors or ssessors.

For these reasons the Government of India has laboured long and History of salously to produce a code of Criminal Procedure which should the codifie easily understood, cheap, expeditious and just. So long ago as criminal be 20th March, 1847, the President in Council instructed the procedure. ndian Law Commissioners to prepare a scheme of pleading and cocedure with forms of indictment adapted to the provisions of he Penal Code; and such a scheme, together with several forms, as prepared by Messrs. Cameron and Eliott, and submitted Ath a report dated 1 Feb. 18482. Their draft was examined ad considered by a new set of Commissioners appointed in 554 under 16 & 17 Vic. c. 95. sec. 28, and comprising Sir John

See Livingston's introductory report the Code of Procedure prepared for e State of Louisiana, Works, i. 331. ² There was a previous repost dated 4 Nov. 1843 regarding the qualifications, summoning, and challenging assessors and jurors. This I have not seen.

Romilly M.R., Sir John Jervis C.J., Sir Edward Messrs. Cameron, Ellis, Lowe (now Lord Sherborne), and stilled These Commissioners produced a draft Code which was presented to Parliament in 1856, and was in the following year introduceinto the Legislative Council by Mr. (now Sir Barnes) Peacock. ultimately was passed by the Legislative Council as Act XXV This Code came into force on 1 Jan. 1862: it applied in the first instance only to the territories subject to what were called the general regulations, but was gradually extended to the rest of British India except the Presidency-towns. It we amended by Acts XXXIII of 1861, XV of 1862, VIII of 1866, and (very largely) by Act VIII of 1869. Three years after, the priscipal Code and its amending Acts were repealed and replaced by Act X of 1872, drawn partly by Mr. (now Sir Fitzjames) Stepha (who tells us that he framed the sections corresponding wr sections 221-240 of the present ('ode); partly by Mr. H. 3 Cunningham; but chiefly by the late Captain Newbery, person. Assistant to the Inspector General of the Panjáb police. The Code, like its predecessors, was not applicable to the Cours established by Royal Charter in Calcutta, Madras and Bombay.

The High Courts.

For these Courts, as well as for the High Court at Allahabad and the Chief Court at Lahore, provision was made by Act X of 187 (to regulate the procedure of the High Courts in the exercise of the original criminal jurisdiction), which reduced the number of jures to nine and the number of peremptory challenges to eight, dispense with the necessity of an unanimous verdict, codified the law relating to habeas corpus, provided a simple substitute for the will of certiorari, and repealed and re-enacted in an improved for: the seven Acts 2 by which the Legislature had from time to time amended the criminal procedure of the Supreme Courts, or their successors the High Courts. This Act 3 was drawn by the writer and carried by Mr. (now Lord) Hobhouse.

1 History of the Criminal Law, iii. 337 n. Captain Newbery informed me that Mr. Stephen also drew Chapters II-VII, XXIII (chiefly) and XXXVI, and that Mr. Cunningham drew sec. 90, most of Chap. XIX, and Chap. XXXIV.

² Acts XXXI of 1838, XXII of 1839, IV of 1849, XVI of 1852, XVIII of 1862 (except secs. 26-35, 47-53), and Act XIII of 1865, a useful measure, carried by Sir H. Maine, which (inter alia) abolished grand juries. Certain other provisions relating to the criminal procedure the Supreme Courts were contained in 9 Geo. IV. c. 74, which was repealed by Act X of 1875, with the exception of sees. 1, 7, 8, 9, 25, 2% and 56. It also repealed certain en actments (in Acts XXIV of 1866 and XIII of 1860) relating to the High Court for the N.W. Provinces Except secs. 97 and 98 (= Act) of 1881, sec. 305), which were draw by Mr Hobhouse.

1872 was also inapplicable to the Magistrates' The ar Calcutta, Madras, and Bombay. For these, provision Presidency Magisade by Act IV of 1877 (to regulate the procedure and increase trates. risdiction of the Courts of Magistrates in the Presidency Tomes). This Act, which increased the jurisdiction of the Presilend Magistrates, assimilated their procedure to that of the pro-Magistrates, and made many other improvements, was drawn writer and carried by Mr. (now Sir Theodore) Hope.

thus appears that, before the present Code of Criminal Procedure was passed, no less than three such Codes were in operation in British India: Act X of 1872, amended by Act XI of 1874, which was in force throughout the Mufassal; the High Courts' Act, X of 1875, which was in force in the Presidencytowns. Allahabad and Lahore; and the Presidency Magistrates' Let, IV of 1877, which, also, was in force in the Presidency-towns.

Many of the provisions of these Codes merely repeated one another; many of their rules, though dealing with the same subjects, unnecessarily varied in language; and the result was that the bulk of the Indian Statute-book was far greater than it needed to be, and that the Courts when construing one Code were often deprived of the guidance of prior decisions on another.

The primary object of the present Code, which was framed by the Objects of writer 1 at the suggestion of the Secretary of State in his despatch the present (Legislative), No. 44, dated 26th October, 18762, was to recast

¹ In framing his draft he was aided chiefly by the decisions of the High Courts on Act X of 1872, but also by many of Livingston's remarks. In revising the draft he was aided by Mr. Justice Straight, who suggested (inter alia he insertion of sec. 310, by F. R. Cockerell and B. Colvin of the Bengal Civil Service, and by Mr. stzpatrick, Secretary, and Mr. R. J. Crosthwaite, Acting Secretary, Government of India in the live Department. The Draft Code of Criminal
The prepared by the Indian Law Sioners in 1856 was intended for use in all the Courts, and for use in all the Courts, and h it was not deemed advisable y out the whole of this design when the Code of Criminal Procedure was enacted in 1861 for the Mufassal only, I think that circumstances are now more favourable to its completion. In the preparation of the High Courts Criminal Procedure Act, 1875, and of the present Bill [the Presidency Magistrates Bill, afterwards Act IV of 1877] the whole of the Code of Criminal Procedure has been carefully reviewed and freely amended. and it seems desirable that the Mufassal districts should not continue under a less perfect law than the Presidency-towns, but that they should enjoy the benefit of the latest corrections and improvements; and that whatever rules are intended to be observed by all the Courts alike should be placed before all in the same language, care being taken at the same time to define the special duties and procedure of each. This is the Code of 1872, combining with it the substance Courts' Act and the Presidency Magistrates' Act, and incorporating in it the numerous 1 reported decisions on its wording, and thus at last give to India a single and complete Code of Criminal Procedure, and carry out, so far, the policy of providing a simple and uniform system of law for that country. The language and arrangement of Act X of 1872 were, for obvious reasons, departed from only so far as was necessary for the main purpose of the Code. But it was obviously impossible to reproduce the inartificial wording of many of the sections, and an arrangement according to which, for example, the provisions for the prosecution of crimes came before the provisions for their prevention, and the charge (i. e. the written accusation of an offence) was dealt with after trials, appeal and execution.

Consolidation. Though many of the outlying Acts and Regulations dealing with Criminal Procedure had been repealed and re-enacted by Act X of 1872, many more were still untouched, and the secondary object of the present Code was to consolidate these enactments, which were seven in number: namely, Acts XXIII of 1840 (Execution of process): V of 1861, section 6, part of sections 24 and 35 (Police): the unrepealed portions of XVIII of 1862 (Administration of Criminal Justice in the High Courts): II of 1869 (Justices of the Peace): XXII of 1870, sections 2 and 4 (Application to European British subjects of Acts giving summary jurisdiction): XXI of 1879, Chapter III (Inquiries in British India into crimes committed abroad by British subjects); and Bengal Regulation XX, 1825 (Jurisdiction of Courts Martial).

The result of consolidating the Acts and the Regulation above specified was to substitute a single Code of 568 sections for eleven enactments containing 1020 unrepealed sections.

Arrangement of the present Code.

The present Code is divided into nine Parts, the first containing the usual preliminary matter; the second dealing with the constitution and powers of the Criminal Courts and offices; the third containing some general provisions; the fourth treating of the prevention of offences; the fifth, of information to the Police and of their powers to investigate; the sixth, of proceedings in prosecuthe best safeguard against conflicting rulings.

'I request, therefore, that your Excellency in Council will direct your attention to the question whether the Criminal Procedure Code of 1872 might not now be recast so as to combine with it the substance of the High Courts Act, 1875, and of the present measure [the Presidency Magistrates Act, IV of 1877], and thus at length to give to India a complete Code of Criminal Procedure.'

I.—PRELIMINARY.

Part I consists of a single chapter containing the usual pre-Local liminary matter. The Code is declared (sec. 1) to extend to the extent. whole of British India; and it has been applied, by executive orders, to many places outside the empire. It contains no clause Personal relating to personal application; but Act XXI of 1879, sec. 8, declares that the law relating to criminal procedure for the time being in force in British India shall, subject to modification by the Governor General in Council, extend (a) to all European British subjects in the dominions of Princes and States in India in alliance with Her Majesty, and (b) to all Native Indian subjects of Her Majesty in any place beyond the limits of British India.

The wording of some of the definitions in Act X of 1872 has Definibeen amended; and definitions of 'public prosecutor,' 'pleader,' tions. 'offence,' 'chapter,' 'schedule,' 'place,' and 'police station' have been added. The definition of 'complaint' has been amended so as to exclude the report of a police-officer and information given to a police-officer; and the definition of 'investigation' has been extended so as to comprise the proceedings of persons authorised by a Magistrate under section 160 or 203 to make local investigations. The definition of 'cognisable offence' Cognisa a somewhat ill-chosen name 2 for an offence for which a police-offence. officer may arrest without warrant-has been amended so as to connect it with the second schedule. 'Warrant-case' is defined Warras as a case relating to an offence punishable with death, transportation, or imprisonment for a term exceeding six months, and 'summons-case' as a case relating to an offence not so punish-Summo able. A clause has been added to the definition of 'High Court' so case. as to enable the Governor General in Council to appoint in outlying territories where no such Court is established by law, an officer to perform its functions under the Code. Expressions such as 'special law' and 'local law,' defined in the Penal Code, have the meanings attached to them respectively by that Code.

II.—CRIMINAL COURTS.

Part II, as to the constitution and powers of the Criminal Courts and offices, consists of two chapters, of which the first deals (a) with the five classes of Criminal Courts other than the K and other Courts created by special enactments 2, (b) with territorial divisions, (c) with Courts outside the Presidency-towns, (d) with the Courts of the Presidency Magistrates, (e) with Justices of the Peace, and (f) with the suspension and removal of Judges, Magistrates and Justices of the Peace. The provisions of the Police Act (V of 1861), section 6, have been incorporated in othis chapter, section 14. The Local Government has been empowered (sec. 16) to make rules for the guidance of Magistrates' Benches. will result in uniformity of practice wherever such uniformity is desirable. Assistant Sessions Judges have been declared (sec. 17) subordinate to the Sessions Judge in whose Court they exercise jurisdiction. This precludes a doubt which had been raised on the subject.

Powers of Magistrates.

The second chapter treats of the powers of Judges and Magistrates. Judges and the description of offences cognisable by each Court, the sentences which may be passed by Courts of various classes, and the mode of conferring powers on the latter. The changes of the law here made are little more than verbal, save that Magistrates of the first class are forbidden (sec. 29) to try offences under special or local laws which are punishable with imprisonment for more than seven years: such grave cases should be tried by a higher Court.

It is desirable that the police powers which magistrates can exercise in investigating offences should be clearly defined. section 40 (=Act X of 1872, section 56), as to the continuance of powers of an officer transferred to another local area, words have been introduced to show that powers conferred by one Local Government do not accompany an officer when he is transferred to a province under another Local Government (2 Cal. 117).

In connection with section 33, as to power to sentence to imprisonment in default of payment of fine, the Council passed simultaneously with the Code a short Act amending section 67 of the Penal Code. by inserting a declaration that such imprisonment shall be simple.

Section 35 declares, in accordance with a decision of the Bombay High Court (1 Boin. 223), that, for the purpose of confirmation or appeal, a combined sentence, in case of simultaneous convictions for several offences, shall be deemed to be a single sentence.

² Courts Martial (44 & 45 Vic. c.

58: Act V of 1869: the Vice-Admiralty Courts (26 & 27 Vic. c. 24, etc.): the Court for the trial of Bengal pilots (Act XII of 1859): and the Bombay Court of Petty Sessions (Rule, Ordinance and Regulation I of 1834, title 2, articles 1, 2, 5, 6, 7, 8).

III.—GENERAL PROVISIONS.

Part III contains certain general provisions which it seemed convenient to group together and which, to avoid forward references, must stand near the beginning of the Code. They relate to the following matters: aid and information to the Magistrates, the police and persons making arrests: arrest, escape and retaking: processes to compel appearance, processes to compel the production of documents, etc., and processes for the discovery of persons wrongfully confined. Here, again, the changes in the law are little more than verbal. But to the offences which the public are Aid and in bound to assist in preventing, have been added (sec. 42) attempts to for bound injure public property, railways, canals, and telegraphs. The section (45) requiring village-headmen, etc., to report, has, for obvious reasons, been extended to escaped convicts and proclaimed offenders, and (to provide for villages in hill-passes through which bands of dacoits habitually proceed) also to cases where the criminal merely goes through the village. Nothing in the whole course of criminal procedure is so produc- Arrests.

ive of vexatious proceedings and serious consequences as Arrests.

The utmost care therefore has been taken in framing the sections on this subject so as to make them clear and precise. The wording of section 178 of the Code of 1872, which empowered the police to use 'all means necessary to effect the arrest' of a person forcibly resisting or attempting to escape, was dangerously wide. present Code (sec. 46) accordingly explains that this power does not give the right to cause the death of an arrested person who is not accused of an offence punishable with death or with transportation for life. In England, if the offence with which the runaway is charged is a treason or a felony (which includes manslaughter, robbery, rape and even larceny), or a dangerous wound given, the homicide is justifiable, and so under the New York Code of Criminal Procedure, section 174. In Scotland, however, the killing is justifiable only when he is charged with a capital offence1. The Code here, as settled by the Select Committee, followed the law of Scotland, which, in Mr. Mayne's opinion, is in India the safer rule. words 'or with transportation for life' were afterwards introduced in Council chiefly to enable the police to cope with the well-armed and desperate bands of dacoits who from time to time infest some of the districts of the North-Western and the Central Provinces. These outlaws will not surrender unless the only alternative be that of death, and if the police are not allowed to meet them on at least equal terms, the attempt to arrest them may be abandoned.

See Alison's Principles of the Criminal Law of Scotland, pp. 36, 37.

The section (46) authorising, in the case of forcible relief to meet the use of necessary means to effect arrests, has been extended to meet the case of attempts to evade them. Power has been given (sec. 49) to break open the doors of a house for the purpose of liberating persons who have lawfully entered for the purpose of making arrests therein. Persons making arrests have been expressly empowered (sec. 53) to take from the person arrested any offensive weapons which he may have about him. The police have been authorised (sec. 54) to arrest, without warrant, deserters from the Navy; and sections (66, 67), equivalent to Act XXV of 1861, section 112, have been inserted to provide for the retaking of persons escaping or rescued from lawful custody.

The period for which a person arrested without warrant may be detained by the police is carefully limited by section 61.

The power to arrest without warrant persons against whom a hue and cry has been raised is omitted, as that obsolete common-law process is unknown in India. The section authorising masters and mates to arrest deserters from ships is also omitted, as the matter is sufficiently provided for by the Merchant Shipping Act².

Service of summons.

Under the Code of 1872, section 153, summonses issued by Magistrates were ordinarily served 'through a police-officer': the present Code (sec. 68) provides that, subject to rules to be made by the Local Government, they may also be served by an officer of the Court. Provision is made (secs. 73, 74) for the service of a summons outside the local jurisdiction of the Magistrate who issues it, and for the proof of such service.

Warrant of arrest.

Section $5 requires that all warrants of arrest, whether issued in the Presidency-towns or the Mufassal, shall be sealed. Act IV of 1877, section 56, did not in such cases require a seal. Warrants of arrest issued by a Bench of Magistrates may be signed by any member of the Bench. This legalises what probably was the practice.

Sub-divisional Magistrates have been empowered (sec. 78) to direct warrants to landholders, etc., for the arrest of escaped convicts. This extension is in harmony with the large powers generally possessed by Magistrates in charge of subdivisions.

Section 87 clears up a doubt as to the commencement of the period provided in the corresponding section (171) of Act X of 1872, for the appearance of a person absconding against whom a warrant has been issued.

Attachment. The Code of 1872 did not provide how attachment of debts and moveable property is to be effected. Provision has, therefore, been made (sec. 88) for this purpose; and the powers, duties and liabilities of receivers have been declared by reference to the Code of Civil Procedure.

A person required merely to produce a document will (as Productio under the Civil Procedure Code, section 164) be deemed to have of docucomplied with the requisition, if he causes the document to be produced instead of attending personally to produce it (sec. 0.4). This amendment obviously tends to save time and expense, and thus to diminish the unpopularity of our Courts.

Section 100 gives Presidency Magistrates, Magistrates of So Athe first class, and Sub-divisional Magistrates, power to issue warrants. warrants to search for persons wrongfully confined. No such power, though needed, was supposed to exist in India, except, of course, in the Presidency-towns, where the High Courts issued, under Act X of 1875, directions of the nature of a habeas corpus.

Provision is made (sec. 103) for making a list, signed by witnesses, of things found in execution of a search-warrant beyond the jurisdiction of the Court issuing it. The requirement of the signature of the witnesses tends to check the irregularities which sometimes occur in the course of searches.

IV.—PREVENTION OF OFFENCES.

Part IV, which relates to the prevention of offences, comes, it is considered, properly before Part VI, which relates to their prosecution. It comprises six chapters dealing respectively with security for keeping the peace and for good behaviour; the dispersion of unlawful assemblies; suppression of nuisances; disputes as to immoveable property; and, lastly, the preventive action of the police. Nothing is here said as to the prevention of intended offences by personal resistance. For the Penal Code (secs. 96-106) contains rules as to the cases in which such resistance is lawful and the degree to which it may be carried.

Chapter VIII. In the chapter relating to security for keeping Security the peace, and for good behaviour, the section (106) dealing with for keepi security for keeping the peace on conviction has been extended to cases in which the accused is convicted of criminal intimidation by threatening injury to person or property. This is an offence of the same nature as taking unlawful measures with the intention of committing a breach of the peace, and should therefore, as regards the taking of security, be placed on the same footing. When the conviction is set aside on appeal or otherwise, the bond will become void. On this the Code of 1872 was silent.

In section 110 (=sections 505, 506 of the Code & words which give the Magistrate power to demand security from persons of notoriously bad livelihood or of a 'dangerous character' have been omitted. It was objected that these words were vague. and that the powers which they placed in the hands of the police were liable to great abuse,

In 1882, there was in the North-Western Provinces a class of bad characters who habitually extorted money from respectable persons by threatening to insult or beat them. Section 110 contains a provision (inserted at the suggestion of the Local Government) enabling Magistrates to protect the public against such a system of extortion. It should also be extended so as to apply to habitual protectors or harbourers of thieves and to habitual aiders in the concealment or disposal of stolen property.

The Magistrate is empowered (sec. 112) to make an order as to the character and class of the sureties required. This, it is hoped, will prevent certain persons making a trade of becoming The object of the law is not merely to provide a moneysecurity, but also to obtain respectable persons as guarantees for the good behaviour of the criminal concerned.

For the purposes of the section (117) as to enquiring into the truth of the information upon which a Magistrate has acted under this chapter, the fact that a person is an habitual offender may be proved by evidence of general repute.

The Code of 1882 contains no provision corresponding to sections 400 of the Code of 1872 and 211 of the Presidency Magistrates' Act. If, before the expiration of the term of the original bond, it appears to the Magistrate unsafe to release the obligor at the end of that term, in justice to the obligor fresh proceedings should be instituted.

Security for good behaviour.

Some change has been made (sec. 117) in the manner of conducting inquiries regarding security for good behaviour, They are under the present Code made as in warrant-cases, instead of as in summons-cases, which was formerly the practice. Where the person who would otherwise be ordered to give security is a minor, the bond (section 118) will be executed only by his It has been made clear in section 126 that a Presidency Magistrate, District Magistrate, Sub-divisional Magistrate, and Magistrate of the first class can cancel a bond on the application of a surety. Sub-divisional Magistrates are empowered (sec. 109) to require security for good behaviour.

Dispersion

Chapter IX, on dispersion of unlawful assemblies, contains the of unlawful rules for calling out and employing the military, in aid of the

They were first enacted in the Code of 1872, and embody (according to Sir Fitzjames Stephen 1) the principles laid down in the charge of Tindal C.J. to the grand jury of Bristol in 1832, as to the duty of soldiers in dispersing rioters. rules carry the law somewhat further than it has yet been carried in England, as they expressly indemnify all persons acting in good faith in compliance with requisitions under sections 128 and 130, and forbid prosecutions of magistrates, soldiers, and police officers, except with the sanction of the Governor-General in Council. this chapter volunteers enrolled under the Indian Volunteers Act, 1860, are placed on the same footing as soldiers of Her Majesty's Army.

In Chapter X, as to Public Nuisances, section 133 has been Suppresextended to cases of keeping goods or merchandise (for example, sion of damaged rice) injurious to the public health, and of carrying on occupations offensive to the religious feelings of any considerable section of the community. The latter alteration is intended to meet such cases as that of a butcher exercising his trade in a Hindú town so as to cause risk of breach of the peace, Chapter XI deals with temporary orders in urgent cases of nuisance. The power conferred by section 518 of the Code of 1872 was intended to be exercised only in urgent cases where a speedy remedy is desirable. The present Code (sec. 144) provides that no orders under Chapter XI shall remain in force for more than two months, unless in case of danger to human life, health or safety, or a riot or affray, the Local Government directs otherwise. Where time allows, the procedure must be under Chapter X.

Chapter XII empowers Magistrates to interfere in disputes as Disputes to immoveable property likely to cause a breach of the peace, to as to immoveable decide whether any of the parties is then in actual possession of property. the subject of dispute, and if so, to declare him entitled to retain possession until evicted in due course of law, and has been expressly restricted to cases in which the property is tangible. It is founded on Act IV of 1840 and the seven Regulations ementioned in that Act, and is of great use in India, where disputes as to boundaries, water-courses, alluvion and diluviated land are frequent and sometimes sanguinary. The section seems to require amendment so as to render it impossible to decide (as the Calcutta High Court has decided 2) that a dispute as to the right to collect rent is a dispute concerning tangible immoveable property.

Doubts had been raised as to whether the report of the person deputed (under section 148) to make a local inquiry has as evidence in the case. The Code settles this in the affirmative. Chapter XIII treats of the action of the police in preventing the Preventive action of commission of cognisable offences, injury to public property, and pelice. the use of false weights and measures.

V.—Information to the Police, and their power to INVESTIGATE.

Part V consists of a single chapter (XIV) relating to information to the police concerning the commission of offences, and their power to investigate cases. It corresponds with Chapter X of Act X of 1872, and sections 379 and 380 of the same Act. It deals with the examination of witnesses by the police, searches, and sending cases to the Magistrate when the evidence is sufficient. Precautions are taken (sees. 162, 163) against abuse by the police of their powers under this chapter.

The words 'or that immediate arrest is not necessary,' which were contained in section 117 of Act X of 1872, have been omitted from section 158 of the present Code, as it is not apparent why a police-officer should be debarred from investigating a case of a cognisable offence because he does not at starting feel himself justified in arresting any person.

Section 164 makes it clear that confessions to Magistrates shall not only be 'taken,' but signed and certified, like examinations of accused persons. In the form of memorandum relating to confessions words have been introduced to show that the confession was taken in the Magistrates' presence and hearing, and that it contains a full and true account of the statement.

Searches.

In sections 165 and 166, dealing with searches by the police, the law has been amended so as to meet difficulties which had arisen in practice. In section 167 it has also been amended. On the one hand, there is strong objection to allowing an accused person to be detained at a police-station longer than is necessary, and, on the other, to insist on his being forwarded to the Magistrate, when his presence on the spot may be indispensable for tracking out crime or recovering property, might be a serious impediment to justice. Under proper precautions, the detention of the accused for sufficient reasons is allowed, but the period of detention has been limited to fifteen days in the whole.

Inquiries into deaths.

Part V also requires (sec. 174) the police to inquire and report on suicides and deaths caused by another person, an animal, machinery or an accident. Power resembling that conferred on Coroner Act IV of 1871, section 11, has been given (sec. 176) to Magistrates authorised to hold inquests to disinter and examine corpses in order to discover the cause of death.

VI.—Proceedings in Prosecutions.

Having thus dealt with the means of preventing inchoate offences and arresting the course of such as are in operation, having also dealt with information to the police of offences and the consequent preliminary investigation, the Code next sets forth the mode of conducting prosecutions for consummated offences.

Part VI treats of proceedings in prosecutions up to appeal, and is divided into sixteen chapters, arranged as follows:—

XV. Jurisdiction of Criminal Courts in Inquiries and Trials; XVI. Complaints to Magistrates; XVII. Commencement of Proceedings before Magistrates; XVIII. Inquiry into cases triable by the Court of Session or High Court; XIX. The Charge; XX. Trial of Summons-Cases by Magistrates; XXII. Trial of Warrant-Cases by Magistrates; XXII. Summary Trials; XXIII. Trials before High Courts and Courts of Session; XXIV. General Provisions as to Inquiries and Trials; XXV. Evidence; XXVI. The Judgment; XXVII. Submission of Sentences for Confirmation; XXVIII. Execution; XXIX. Suspensions, Remissions, and Commutations of Sentences; XXX. Previous Acquittals or Convictions.

It will be seen that the above-mentioned chapters are arranged, as nearly as may be, according to the chronological order of the events in a prosecution.

Chapter XV (as to the jurisdiction of the Courts in inquiries and Jurisdictrials) deals, first, with the place of inquiry or trial. Here the tion of Courts in general rule is (sec. 177) that every offence shall be inquired into inquiries and tried by a Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction it and trials was committed. But there are special provisions for cases where the act has been done in one local area and the consequence has ensued in another (sec. 180): where the act, e.g. an abetment, is an offence by reason of its relation to another act which is also an offence: where it is uncertain in which of several local areas an offence has been committed: where an offence is committed partly in one local area and partly in another: where the offence is a continuing one and continues to be committed in more local areas than one: where it consists of several acts done in different local areas (sec. 182): where it is committed on a journey (sec. 183). There are also special rules as to inquiry into and trial of the offences of thuggee, daceity, escape from custody, criminal misappropriation, criminal breach of trust and theft (sec. 182), and as to offences against the laws relating to railways, telegraphs, the post office, and arms and ammunition (sec. 184).

Sections 9 and 10 of the Foreign Jurisdiction Act (XXI of 1879), which deal respectively with the liability of British subjects for offences committed out of British India, and with the reception in evidence of depositions made before Political Agents, have been transferred to this part of the Code (sections 188 and 189), which is obviously their proper place.

To the provisions contained in the previous law regarding the transfer of cases the present Code adds a clause (sec. 192), providing that, when any Magistrate of the first class, specially empowered in this behalf by the District Magistrate, has taken cognisance of any case, he may transfer it for inquiry or trial to any other competent Magistrate in such district. This enables such Magistrates to distribute the work in their Courts, when it is necessary to do so, with less delay than was formerly unavoidable.

Chapter XV deals, secondly, with the conditions requisite for the initiation of proceedings,—the receipt of a complaint: a police-report: information from any other person: the Magistrate's own knowledge or suspicion; or, in the case of a contempt, the sanction or complaint of the public servant concerned or of his official superior.

Section 195 requires that the sanction to entertain complaints of contempts and certain offences against public justice or relating to documents given in evidence shall, so far as practicable, specify the place in which, and the occasion on which, the offence complained of was committed. The sanction may be revoked or granted by any authority to which the authority giving or refusing it is subordinate. And in order to remove doubts which had been felt on the point, it is declared that, for the purposes of this section, every Court shall be deemed to be subordinate to the Court to which appeals from the former Court ordinarily lie. Sanctions or complaints are also required in the case of prosecutions for acts done in dispersing unlawful assemblies (sec. 132), for state-offences (sec. 196), for acts committed by judges and public servants as such (sec. 197), and for breach of contracts of service, defamation, and certain offences relating to marriage and married women (secs. 198, 199).

Limitation of prosecutions.

No sanction under sec. 195 shall remain in force for more than six months from the date on which it was given; but of course it may be renewed.

The Code contains no other rule for the limitation of prosecutions.

All other offences under the Penal Code, even mere attemptseven those offences which are compoundable without the permission of the Court—may be prosecuted after any lapse of time. because allowing such prosecutions to be barred would (to use the words of Livingston) 'hold out a reward to ingenious villainv and address in concealment.' But in the absence of a law of limitation there is danger that innocent men may be convicted owing to the death of their witnesses or the destruction of their documentary evidence; and sundry special and local laws have prescribed periods within which offences against their provisions must be prosecuted. Of these laws the chief are as follows: they are here classified according to the periods which they respectively prescribe :-

Complaints to Magistrates.

Chapter XVI, of complaints to Magistrates, corresponds to sections 144 to 147 of Act X of 1872, but adds (sec. 201) a provision that a complaint in writing made to a Magistrate not competent to entertain it shall be returned for presentation to the proper tribunal.

The present Code makes it clear that the power (sec. 202) to postpone the issue of process cannot be exercised by a Magistrate of the third class.

Commencement of proceedings.

Ł

Chapter XVII treats of the commencement of proceedings before Magistrates: shows when a summons or a warrant should issue, and enables the Magistrate in certain cases (sec. 205) to dispense with the personal attendance of the accused.

¹ For similar limitations in England, see Archbold, 79, 80. In Scotland there seems to be a vicennial prescription for all crimes where no sentence of fugitation has been pronounced and no step has been taken to bring the offender to trial. In the case of wrongous imprisonment there is a triennial prescription. Acc ding to the New York Code of Criminal Procedure, §§ 141, 142, a prosecution for murder (or abetment of murder, 4 Wend. 229) may be commenced at any time; but an indictment for every other crime must be found within five years after its commission, except where a less term is prescribed by statute.

In Chapter XVIII—of inquiry into cases triable by the Court Inquiry of Session or High Court—power is given (sec. 209) to the into ca Magistrate to discharge the accused at any stage of the case if, for Session reasons to be recorded, the Magistrate considers the charge to be Court. groundless. This chapter also contains provisions as to the framing of the charge (sec. 210), the witnesses for the defence (secs. 211, 212, 216, 217), and the custody of the accused pending trial (sec. 220).

The accused should have full notice of the offence charged against The him. Chapter XIX, therefore, deals with the form of the charge charge (secs. 221-224): the effect of the absence of a charge or of errors in one (secs. 225, 232): alterations in charges (sec. 227): joinder of charges (sec. 233); and the trial at one trial for several offences (secs. 234, 235, 236, 239). It extends to the whole of British India the amendments in Act X of 1872, sections 439 to 459, made in the Presidency Towns, Allahabad and Lahore by Act X of 1875; and with reference to Mr. Justice West's observations in 11 Bomb. H. C. 241, on the corresponding section (457) of the Code of 1872, section 238 of the present Code has been confined to offences consisting of several particulars, a combination of some only of which constitutes a complete minor offence.

From the section (235), corresponding with section 454 of the Code of 1872, have been omitted all provisions as to the amount of punishment. They obviously belong to substantive law, not to procedure, and find their proper place in the Penal Code as amended by Act VIII of 1882. The illustrations have also been amended.

Provision has been made in section 238 for the case where a person charged with an offence proves circumstances which reduce it to a minor offence. He may then be convicted of the minor offence, though he is not charged with it.

Chapter XX prescribes a simple procedure for the trial by Trial of Magistrates of summons-cases. No formal charge need be framed. Summon The Magistrate states to the accused the particulars of his alleged offence, and asks him if he has any cause to show why he should not be convicted. If he admits his guilt he is convicted. If he does not, evidence is taken—a mere memorandum of its substance being made (sec. 355)—and he is acquitted or sentenced according to its effect. This chapter should expressly provide, in sec. 244, for cross-examination of witnesses. When the complaint is frivolous Frivolou or vexatious, the Magistrate may order the complainant to pay the complain accused compensation not exceeding rs. 50. To the section (250) giving this power a clause has been added, providing that, when awarding compensation in any subsequent civil suit relating to the same matter, the Court shall take into account any sum paid or recovered as compensation under this section.

Trial of warrant-CASAS

Chapter XXI deals with trials of warrant-cases by Magistrates. The chief distinction between this procedure and that provided for the trial of summons-cases is that under Chapter XXI the Magistrate first hears the complainant (if any) and takes the evidence for the prosecution, and then, if there is ground for presuming the guilt of the accused, frames a written charge to which he is required to plead. Moreover, the evidence of each witness is taken down in writing (sec. 356): it is not enough (as in trying a summons-case) to make a memorandum of its substance. Here, as in Chapter XVIII, has been inserted a clause (sec. 253) authorising the Magistrate to discharge the accused at any stage of the case if, for reasons to be recorded, the Magistrate considers the charge to be groundless. Under the Code of 1872 (sec. 215), no matter how groundless the charge might be, the Magistrate was compelled, before discharging the accused, to take the evidence of the complainant and of all the witnesses whom the prosecution might bring forward. The provision in the same Code, sec. 218, that the accused shall, while making his defence, be allowed to recall and cross-examine the witnesses for the prosecution, has been expressly confined (sec. 256) to cases where these witnesses are present in the Court or its precincts. The power to recall witnesses for the prosecution after they had left the Court was often abused for the purpose of harassment and delay.

Summary trials.

Chapter XXII deals with summary trials of the minor offences specified in sec. 260. Here the Local Government is authorised to confer on Benches invested with second or third class powers jurisdiction to try abetments of, and attempts to commit, the offences which they may now try summarily. The omission in the Code of 1872 to provide for these abetments and attempts was obviously per incurium. The offences of retaining stolen property not exceeding rs. 50 in value, and assisting in the concealment or disposal of stolen property not exceeding rs. 50 in value, have been added to the list of those triable in a summary way; and the offence of receiving stolen property will not be so triable where its value exceeds that amount. The limit of imprisonment under this chapter is three months (sec. 262). Where no appeal lies, the Magistrate or Bench neither records the evidence nor frames a formal charge; but merely enters certain particulars in such form as the Local Government directs (sec. 263). No reasons are given except in case of conviction.

Trials before High

Chapter XXIII provides a common procedure for the High Courts and Courts and the Courts of Session in trials before those tribunals.

But all trials before a High Court must be by a jury of nine; all Courts trials before a Court of Session must be either by a jury of an Session.

uneven number, not more than nine nor less than three, or with the aid of assessors; and prosecutions before the Court of Session must be conducted by a public prosecutor (sec. 270). Sections 271, 272 deal with the plea of guilty (which there is no power to withdraw). refusal or omission to plead, and 'claim to be tried.' The pleas of previous conviction and previous acquittal are dealt with in another part of the Code (sec. 403). There is no plea of insanity. this matter being provided for by Chapter XXXIV. also special rules (secs. 274, 275) as to juries, challenges (secs. 277-270), foremen (sec. 280), swearing jurors (sec. 281), discharging juries (sec. 282), assessors (secs. 284, 285), the procedure to the close of the case, the charge (sec. 297), the respective duties of the judge and the jury (secs. 298, 299), and, lastly, the verdict (secs. As to this the rules are peculiar:— 301-307).

In the High Court.

When the nine jurors are unanimous, or when as many as six are of one opinion and the judge agrees with them, the judge gives judgment accordingly.

When the jury are satisfied that they will not be unanimous, but six are of one opinion, the foreman so informs the judge, and if the judge disagrees with the majority he at once discharges the jury.

If there are not so many as six who agree, the judge, after such interval as he thinks reasonable, discharges the jury.

In the Court of Session.

When the judge does not think it necessary to express disagreement with the verdict of the jurors or of a majority (two, three, four, or five) of the jurors, he gives judgment accordingly. If the accused is acquitted, the judge records judgment of acquittal. If he is convicted, the judge passes sentence.

But if the judge disagrees so completely that he considers it necessary for the ends of justice to submit the case to the High Court, he submits it accordingly, recording the grounds of his opinion.

Where the Sessions Judge disagrees with a verdict of acquittal and submits the case to the High Court, he is required (sec. 307) to state the offence which he considers to have been committed, and the High Court is empowered to acquit or convict the accused of any offence of which the jury could have convicted him upon the charge framed and placed before it. This, it is believed, was the intention of the corresponding clause of section 263 of Act X of 1872. The change was suggested by the decision of Markby J. in 3 Cal. 189.

To prevent jurors and assessors from being biassed against the Offence accused by the knowledge that he is an old offender, section 310 commit provides that 'the part of the charge stating the previous conviction previou shall not be read out . . unless and until he has either pleaded convict guilty to, or been convicted of, the subsequent offence.' There is a similar rule in England (6 & 7 Wm. IV. c. 111).

General provisions.

plices.

Chapter XXIV contains general provisions as to inquiries and trials. The subject of tendering pardons to accomplices is first dealt Pardons to with. Such tender can only be made in cases triable exclusively by the Court of Session or High Court. In cases where a pardon is tendered to and accepted by a person, and such person gives evidence before a Magistrate in a preliminary inquiry, he should not be forced to adhere to that evidence in a subsequent trial, through fear of being prosecuted on an alternative charge of giving false evidence either before the Magistrate or the Judge. It might happen that he was wrongly induced or coerced into giving evidence before the Magistrate. Section 330 accordingly provides that no prosecution for giving false evidence in a statement made under promise of pardon shall be entertained without the sanction of the High Court.

Examination of the accused.

Sec. 342 gives the power to examine the accused for the purpose, only, of enabling him 'to explain any circumstances appearing in the evidence against him.' The section assumed its present form partly owing to a judgment of the High Court of Bengal (6 Cal. 102), partly owing to the following words of Edward Livingston 1: 'An unrestrained right of interrogating is also very apt to produce insidious and catching questions. Instead of a cool and impartial attempt to extract the truth, the examination becomes a contest, in which the pride and ingenuity of the magistrate are arrayed against the caution or evasions of the accused; and every construction will be given to his answer that may fix upon him the imputation of guilt.' It may be added that badgering by the judge is apt to arouse undue sympathy for the prisoner.

Compounding offences.

Much doubt existed as to the offences which may lawfully be compounded. The Exception to section 214 of the Penal Code (in which the law on the subject was contained) was in 1882 excessively obscure, and this obscurity was increased rather than diminished by the illustrations annexed to that section. Criminal Procedure Code of 1882 repeals these illustrations; and section 345 declares in unmistakeable language that certain specified offences, and no others 2, may be compounded. These are-

The offences of voluntarily causing hurt or grievous hurt, and those of causing hurt or grievous hurt by an act which endangers life, which are punishable under the Penal Code, sections 324, 335, 337 or 338, are compoundable with the permission of the Court, and by the person to whom the hurt has been caused.

Simultaneously with the new Code the Indian Legislature passed Act VIII of 1882, section 6 of which, for the Exception to section 280 of the Penal Code, substituted the following:—

'Exception.—The provisions of sections 213 and 214 do not extend to any case in which the offence may lawfully be compounded.'

Section 349 prescribes a procedure in cases where a second or third class Magistrate finds that he cannot pass a sentence sufficiently severe. Section 350 provides for convictions or commitments on evidence partly recorded by one Magistrate and partly by his successor, and should be modified so as to make it clearly applicable to inquiries under section 107.

Chapter XXV contains rules as to the mode of taking and re-Taking cording evidence in inquiries and trials (secs. 353-360), and as to evidence the interpretation of evidence to the accused or his pleader (sec. 361). The evidence must, as a rule, be taken down by the Magistrate or Judge, or in his presence and hearing. The provisions as to this subject do not apply to the High Courts or the Chief Court of the Panjáb. The Presidency Magistrates are provided for by section 362. It is hardly necessary to say that the Indian, like the English, system of criminal procedure does not permit evidence to be taken in secret.

The judgment.

Chapter XXVI deals with the judgment, the time and place of delivering it (sec. 366), its language and contents (sec. 367). Provision is made (sec. 371) for explaining it to the accused and giving him a copy or translation of it.

Confirma-

Chapter XXVII treats of the confirmation of sentences. This is necessary (a) where a Sessions Judge, Additional Sessions Judge, or Joint Sessions Judge passes a sentence of death, and (b) where an Assistant Sessions Judge or a specially empowered District Magistrate passes a sentence of imprisonment for a term exceeding four years, or any sentence of transportation (secs. 31, 34). In case (a) the sentence is submitted for confirmation to the High Court: in case (b) to the Sessions Judge. The confirming authority may make further enquiry or direct it to be made (secs. 375, 380), and may alter the sentence or acquit the accused.

Execution.

Chapter XXVIII, Execution .- Here the Code deals with the execution of sentences of death (sec. 381): with the postponement and, if the High Court think fit, commutation of such sentences in the case of pregnant women (sec. 382): with the execution of sentences of transportation and imprisonment (secs. 383-385): the levy of fines (secs. 386-388): the infliction of whipping (secs. 390-395); the execution of sentences on escaped convicts and on offenders already sentenced for another offence (secs. 390-398); and the confinement of youthful offenders in reformatories (sec. 399). In section 395 (= section 313 of the Code of 1872) the imprisonment which may be inflicted in lieu of whipping has been limited to twelve months. But on the other hand, the proviso that the whole period of imprisonment to which the offender is sentenced shall not exceed that to which he was liable by law, or that which the Court is competent to award, has been cancelled, and the power to imprison is thus extended.

Persons sentenced to transportation. There are no sections in this chapter corresponding with sections 319, 320 of the Code of 1872. The reason for this omission is that the matter with which they deal does not belong to criminal procedure, but falls within the scope of the Prisoners' Act, 1871; and simultaneously with the passing of the present Code, Act IX of 1882 was passed, substituting for section 33 of the Prisoners' Act a section equivalent to the Code of 1872, sections 319, 320.

Chapter XXIX treats of suspensions, remissions and commutations Suspens of sentences. Where application is made for the suspension or and rem sion of remission of a sentence, the Government is empowered (sec. 401) sentence to require the presiding Judge of the Court before or by which the conviction was had or confirmed, to state his opinion as to whether the application should be granted or refused, together with his reasons for such opinion.

The power of the Government to commute punishment (sec. 402) Commut has been so worded as to authorise a sentence of rigorous, to be tion. commuted to one of simple, imprisonment. This could not be done under the Code of 1872.

No person should be subjected to a second prosecution for a crime Previou for which he has once been prosecuted and duly convicted or acquitted. acquitta

Chapter XXX consists of a single section dealing with the effect of a previous acquittal or conviction by a Court of competent jurisdiction in (it is presumed) British India 1. Sir Fitzjames Stephen 2 justly says that this section seems misplaced 3. He thinks it should follow the provisions as to charges. A better place for it would be in the preliminary chapter, where the New York Code places the corresponding section, or after section 271, as to the plea of guilty, where there might be a section dealing with other pleaswant of jurisdiction, previous acquittal, previous conviction, and (in proceedings under certain special laws) limitation.

VII.—Appeal, Reference and Revision.

Part VII deals with appeals, references, and the revisional jurisdiction of the High Court.

Chapter XXXI begins by declaring that no appeal shall lie from Appeal any judgment or order of a Criminal Court except as provided by the Code or by any other law for the time being in force. It expressly declares (sec. 412) that there shall be no appeal, except as to the extent or legality of the sentence, where the accused has pleaded guilty and been convicted by the Sessions Court or a Presidency Magistrate, and that there shall be no appeal by the accused in the petty cases and from the summary convictions mentioned in sections 413 and 414. Sentences on European British subjects are excepted from the latter provision (sec. 416). An appeal may lie on a matter of fact as well as a matter of law, except where the trial was by jury, in which case the appeal lies on matter of law only (sec. 418). For the purposes of appealing, the alleged severity of a sentence is deemed a matter of law (sec. 418). The power to appeal was liberally bestowed by the Code of 1872, and only three new cases are provided for by the present Code. An appeal has been given (sec. 405) from orders rejecting applications for delivery of attached property. Appeals are also given from convictions in contempt-cases by Courts of Small Causes in the Presidencytowns, and by Registrars and Sub-registrars being also Civil Courts.

The nine appeals given by the present Code are as follows:-

- 1. From a conviction on a trial by a Magistrate of the second or third class, or by a Bench of Magistrates invested with second or third class powers.
- 2. From a sentence under section 349 by a Sub-divisional Magistrate of the second class.
- 3. From a conviction on a trial by an Assistant Sessions Judge, a District Magistrate, or other Magistrate of the first class.
- 4. From a conviction on a trial by a Sessions Judge or an Additional or a Joint Sessions Judge.
- 5. From a sentence by a Presidency Magistrate to imprisonment for a term exceeding six months or to fine exceeding rs. 200.
- 6. From an original or appellate order of acquittal passed by any Court other than a High Court.
- 7. From the rejection of an application under section 89 for delivery of attached property or its proceeds.
- 8. From the order of a Magistrate (other than the District Magistrate or a Presidency Magistrate) to give security for good behaviour (secs. 118, 126.)
- 9. From a sentence under section 480 or section 485 by Section 408 provides that the appeal from a District Magistrate exercising the enhanced powers conferred under section 34 and passing any sentence requiring confirmation by the Court of Session shall lie to the High Court, but shall not be presented until the case has been disposed of by the Court of Session. This puts the appeals in question on the same footing as appeals from an Assistant Sessions Judge. There seems to be no reason for making any distinction between the two.

Section 417 empowers the Local Government to direct the public Appeals prosecutor to appeal to the High Court from orders of acquittal from acpassed by any inferior Court 1. Such a power is desirable in two cases: where there has been, as occasionally happens in India, a gross miscarriage of justice, and where fresh and credible evidence has been brought forward after the acquittal.

In the case of all appeals under the Code, the Limitation Act Limitation ixes periods within which they must be presented. In the case of of appeals. in appeal from an acquittal, the period is six months from the late of the judgment appealed against.

Section 423, as to the powers of Appellate Courts in disposing of appeals, does not, as was done by the Code of 1872, empower such a Court to enhance any punishment inflicted by the sentence appealed against. Such an enhancement can now be effected only by the High Court on revision (sec. 439).

 1 So far as regards appeals on matter of law from an acquittal, there were precedents for such a proceeding in the English Statute-book. Under 20 & 21 Vic. c. 43, and 42 & 43 Vic. c. 49, sec. 33, 'an appeal from a Court of summary jurisdiction by special case' may be brought by the complainant on the grounds that the order etc. of the Court is erroneous in point of law or is in excess of jurisdiction. Under the New York Cr. Proc. Code, § 518, there is an appeal (I) upon a judgment for the accused on a demurrer to the indictment, and (2) upon an order of the Court arresting the judgment.

In the case of an appeal from an acquittal, section 427 expressly authorises the High Court to order the accused to be arrested and brought before it, and to commit him to prison pending the disposal of the appeal, or admit him to bail. In the absence of this power, cases had occurred in which criminals, afraid of the result of the appeal, escaped, and thus made the appeal on behalf of the Government of no avail.

Abatement of appeals.

A section (431) suggested by a decision of the Bombay High Court (2 Bom. 564) provides that appeals by persons required to give security for good behaviour or by convicted persons abate on their death, and that appeals against acquittals abate on the death of the accused. The power of revision conferred by section 439 enables the High Court, where justice to the family of the convicted person so requires, to alter his sentence even after the appeal has abated.

Chapter XXXII—of reference and revision—empowers Presidency Magistrates and High Court Judges exercising original criminal jurisdiction to refer questions of law (secs. 432-434). This was suggested, according to Sir Fitzjames Stephen, by the English procedure as to reserving cases for the Court for Crown Cases Reserved. Chapter XXXII also enables certain Courts to call for the records of inferior Courts (sec. 435); and, though they cannot reverse acquittals, they may order persons improperly discharged to be committed (sec. 436), or further inquiries to be made (sec. 437). And it gives the High Courts (sec. 439) ample powers of revision, in exercising which they may enhance sentences. Subdivisional Magistrates empowered by the Local Government in this behalf are authorised (sec. 435) to call for records of inferior Courts. This is in accordance with the powers of control in other respects which they exercise.

Revision.

Where, in the opinion of the Court of Session or District Magistrate, an accused person has been improperly discharged by an inferior Court, the accused should not be committed without having had an opportunity of showing cause why the committal should not be made. Provision to this effect is made by section 436.

Section 437 enables the High Court, Court of Session, or District Magistrate, on examining any record, to direct 'further inquiry' into any complaint which has been dismissed under section 203, or into the case of any accused person who has been discharged. The section should be amended so as to show clearly that the 'further inquiry' may be directed even when further evidence has not been disclosed.

When the Court of Session or District Magistrate reports for the orders of the High Court the results of examining any proceeding, and recommends that a sentence be reversed, the Court of Session or District Magistrate may order (sec. 438) its execution to be suspended, and the accused, if in confinement, to be released on bail or on his own bond.

Section 439 (corresponding with the Code of 1872, section 297) has been framed so as to allow the High Court, when exercising its revisional jurisdiction, to interfere with improper acquittals. It cannot, however, convert an acquittal into a conviction; and no order will be made to the prejudice of the accused, unless he has had an opportunity of being heard.

VIII.—Special Proceedings.

Part VIII, as to special proceedings, deals with the procedure relating to the following matters:—criminal proceedings against Europeans and Americans: lunatics: contempts of Court and other offences affecting the administration of justice: maintenance of wives and children: proceedings in the nature of habeas corpus.

Chapter XXXIII contains the special rules applicable to criminal Europeans proceedings against Europeans and Americans. The Code of 1872 and (sec. 72) and that of 1882 (sec. 443) conferred on European British subjects in the Mufussal a right to be tried exclusively by men of their own race, who were either (4) Sessions Judges or (b) subjects in the Mufussal a right to be tried exclusively by men of their own race, who were either (a) Sessions Judges or (b) Magistrates of the first class being also Justices of the Peace. These Magistrates might in such cases pass sentences of imprisonment for not more than three months or fine not exceeding a thousand rupees, or both. This was part of the personal law of Anglo-Indians, just as the rules about searches in zanánás¹, parda women², and natives of rank were (and still are) part of the personal law of the Hindús and Muhammadans. It worked well, and the disreputable Europeans, to whom alone it applied in practice, were unable to hamper justice by claiming a jury. In February 1883, however, Lord Ripon (having previously sought and obtained the permission of the then Secretary of State for India) caused a Bill to be introduced into the Governor General's Council, which became law as Act III of 1884. This measure enables District Magistrates and Sessions Judges, though Natives, to exercise jurisdiction over European British subjects: and empowers District Magistrates, though Natives, to sentence such subjects to imprisonment for six months, fine extending to Rs. 2000, or both. On the other hand, it enables European British subjects, when tried by a District Magistrate, to claim a jury; and has thus, it is to be feared, practically exempted from punishment the class of offenders to whom it applies. When the Code is next altered section 443 should be expressly applied to cases under section 107.

Section 451 removes some unnecessary differences which formerly existed between the procedure of the High Courts and Courts of Session in cases in which European British subjects are concerned. In particular, it provides that, in the Court of Session as well as in the High Court, the requisite moiety of the jury or assessors may be made up by Americans as well as Europeans. Under the Code of 1872 (sec. 78), the trial of a European British subject before the Court of Session need not be by jury. But under the same Code (sec. 234) an European or American, not being a British subject, had an absolute right to be so tried. The present Code omits the latter provision.

Chapter XXXIV deals with cases (sec. 464) in which the accused appears to be of unsound mind, and with cases (sec. 469) in which, though sane at the time of inquiry or trial, he appears to have been insane at the time of committing the act of which he is accused. Section 466 must be read with the provision in 14 & 15 Vic., cap. 81, as to the removal to England of a lunatic found to be such in India, The power given by sections 433 and 434 of the Code of 1872, to discharge from custody or make over to his relative a person acquitted on the ground of insanity, has been extended, in sections 474 and 475, to the case of persons who, being found to be insane at the time of trial, are committed to custody. Two useful sections, added by Act X of 1886, empower the Government of India to order criminal lunatics, confined by order of a Local Government, to be removed from one province to another, and enable any Local Government to relieve its Inspector General of Prisons from his functions under sections 472, 473, 474.

Chapter XXXV deals with proceedings in cases of certain offences affecting the administration of justice. This chapter (secs. 476, 478, 479, 480, 482) has been expressly made applicable to Revenue Courts.

Section 477 has been framed so as to allow a Court of Session to charge a person for giving false evidence before itself,—a power of which such Courts were unintentionally deprived by section 472 of the Code of 1872.

Section 480 provides a procedure in certain cases of contempt—omission to produce documents, refusal to take an oath or affirmation, to answer questions, or to sign a statement, and intentional insult or interruption.

Where the Local Government so directs, Sub-registrars will (sec. 483) be 'Civil Courts' within the meaning of the section. position and qualifications of Sub-registrars vary in different provinces; but in some parts of India they are Natives of good family and education, well fitted for the exercise of the powers conferred by sections 480 and 482.

Section 486 gives an appeal to the High Court from a conviction in a contempt case by a Court of Small Causes in a Presidency-town.

Section 487 has been redrawn so as to avoid a difficulty which is felt in determining the meaning of the words 'offence committed in contempt of its own authority,' which occur in the corresponding section (473) of the Code of 1872.

Chapter XXXVI, as to the maintenance of wives and children, Maintenseems out of place in a Code of Criminal Procedure¹, and is here ance of inserted only because corresponding provisions were placed in the children. Codes of 1861 and 1872. Sir Fitzjames Stephen thinks that this chapter should be placed in Part IV, as to the Prevention of Offences, 'as,' says he, 'it is a mode of preventing vagrancy, or at least of preventing its consequences.' Unfortunately for this argument, though vagrancy is an offence in England, it is not, and never has been, an offence in India3.

Chapter XXXVII, as to directions of the nature of a habeas corpus, Habeas empowers the Presidency High Courts to suppress offences against corpus. personal liberty. They were first enacted in Act X of 1875, sec. 148. A somewhat similar jurisdiction is, as we have seen, given, by section 100, to Presidency Magistrates, Magistrates of the first class, and Subdivisional Magistrates, and in the case of certain females, by section 551 to Presidency Magistrates and District Magistrates.

IX.—Supplementary Provisions.

Part IX contains certain provisions supplementary to the general rules of procedure contained in the Code. It deals, first, with the public prosecutor, bail, commissions for the examination of witnesses, and special rules of evidence. It then contains certain provisions relating to bonds to keep the peace, for good behaviour, for appearance, etc.: the disposal of property regarding which an offence has been committed: the transfer of criminal cases: irregular proceedings, and, lastly, certain miscellaneous matters.

² Hist. Crim. Law, iii. 342.

Chapter XXXVIII, Public Prosecutor.—No private person can conduct a prosecution without the permission of the Magistrate inquiring into or trying the case (sec. 495). This section, as amended by Act X of 1886, section 13, enables any such Magistrate to permit the prosecution to be conducted by any person other than an officer of police below a rank to be prescribed by the Local Government in this behalf, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council. But no officer of police is permitted to conduct the prosecution if he has taken any part in the investigation of the offence with respect to which the accused is being prosecuted. The entire exclusion of the police from such a function is, in the opinion of many authorities, inexpedient. With the limitations above described, there will be no fear of intimidation of witnesses or undue influence.

The Advocate General, Standing Counsel, Government Solicitor and any other officer empowered by the Local Government are exempted from the necessity of obtaining permission to conduct prosecutions.

Prosecutions before the Court of Session must (as we have seen) be conducted by a public prosecutor.

Bail.

Chapter XXXIX, Bail.—The Indian law on this subject is contained in the Code, chapter XXXIX, in the second schedule thereto, in Act XXI of 1879, sec. 17 (as to persons arrested in anticipation of extradition), and in special or local laws making certain offences bailable. It states when bail may be taken in case of a non-bailable offence (sec. 497), declares that the amount of the bail bond shall not be excessive (sec. 498), provides for cases in which insufficient sureties have been accepted (sec. 501); and lastly, deals with the discharge of sureties (sec. 502). The powers here given to police-officers have been expressly confined to officers in charge of police-stations.

Commissions. Chapter XL, Commissions for Examination of Witnesses.—The Code, unlike the English criminal law, here provides for the taking of evidence on commission. Such commissions, as Straight J. has observed², should be issued only in extreme cases of delay, expense or inconvenience². The provisions of the former law have here been amended in four respects. Where the witness resides in a Native State, power has been given (sec. 503) to issue the commission to the Political Agent or other local officer representing the British Government. Section 505 requires that the interrogatories shall be thought relevant by the Magistrate or Court directing the commission. Where a subordinate Magistrate wishes for a commission, he will (sec. 506) apply to the District Magistrate, and not (as formerly) to the Sessions Judge: this relieves the Court of Session of a duty which can be more conveniently performed hy the District Magistrate. And power is expressly given (sec. 508) to stay the inquiry or trial for a specified time reasonably sufficient for the execution and return of the commission.

Chapter XLI contains some special rules as to evidence, supple-Special menting those in the Evidence Act. The report of any Chemical rules of Examiner or Assistant Chemical Examiner to Government may now be used in evidence (sec. 510) in any proceeding under the Code, not merely, as under the Code of 1872, in any criminal trial. in proving a previous conviction or acquittal, the new Code (sec. 511) requires evidence as to identity of the accused person with the person so convicted or acquitted.

Chapter XLII contains some provisions generally applicable to Bonds. bonds executed under the Code. The procedure for recovering the penalty from the principal in the case of security to keep the peace provided by $\operatorname{Act} \operatorname{X}$ of 1872, sec. 502, is now applicable to all such bonds.

Chapter XLIII, Disposal of property. When an inquiry or Disposal of trial is concluded, the Court is empowered (sec. 517) to make such property. order as it thinks fit for the disposal of any document or other property produced before it regarding which an offence appears to have been committed, or which has been used to commit an offence. In partial accordance with a rule of the High Court at Bombay, section 517 declares that, when a High Court or Court of Session makes such an order, and cannot through its own officers conveniently deliver the property to the person entitled thereto, the Court may direct the order to be carried into effect by the District Magistrate, not the 'committing Magistrate,' who might have been transferred before the order was made.

Orders under section 517 made in appealable cases will not (except where the property is live-stock, or is subject to speedy and natural decay) be carried out until the time allowed for appealing has expired, or, if an appeal is presented in due time. ntil the appeal is disposed of.

Where an innocent purchaser buys stolen property and restores t to the lawful possessor, provision is made (sec. 519) for payment it might be examined by selected local officers. This was done, and the result of the examination is contained in a thick folio volume. The Bill was then revised with reference to this mass of criticism, and to the cases reported since it was framed; and it might almost be said, in the form in which it was referred to a Select Committee, to be the work of the whole body of Indian Judges and Magistrates rather than of any individual or Department.

Amendments made by Self-Committee.

Examination of accused. The Select Committee, which consisted of Mr. (now Sir Rivers) Thompson, the late Mr. Gibbs, Mr. H. Reynolds, Jotindra Mohan Tagore, Mr. Louis Forbes, Mr. C. T. Crosthwaite, and the writer, made eighty-five amendments of the substance of the law; but of these only three are sufficiently important to require special mention here.

First, the Committee thought that the then law gave too great latitude to the Courts with regard to the examination of an accused person. The object of such examination is, or ought to be, to give the accused an opportunity of explaining any circumstances which may tend to criminate him, and thus to enable the Court, in cases where he is undefended, to examine the witnesses in his interest. It was never intended that the Court should examine the accused with a view to elicit from him some statement which would lead to his conviction. The Committee therefore limited the power of interrogating the accused by prefixing to the first paragraph of section 342 the words 'for the purpose of enabling the accused to explain any circumstances appearing in the evidence against him.' The accused should always have the opportunity of explaining, and the Code therefore requires the Court to question him generally for that purpose before he enters on his defence.

Whipping.

Secondly, the Committee amended the law as to whipping. It provided in section 32 that no Magistrate of the second class should pass a sentence of whipping unless specially empowered in that behalf by the Local Government: that whipping should be inflicted with a light ratan not less than half-an-inch in diameter; and that it should never be inflicted on any person whom the Court considered to be more than forty-five years of age.

Enhancement of sentences on appeals.

Thirdly, the Committee abolished the power, which Appellate Courts had under the Code of 1872, to enhance sentences on appeals presented by accused persons. The existence of such a power tended to deter convicted, but, possibly, innocent persons from presenting appeals, and thus to deprive the lower Courts of the control which could only be effectively exercised over them by means of an unhampered system of appeal.

Number of substantial The Bill as introduced made a hundred and twelve amendments of the substance of the law. The eighty-five amendments just amendmentioned or referred to raised the number to 1071.

The new Code became law on the 6th of March, 1882; but it did present not come into force till 1st January, 1883,-ten years from the date Code. on which the Code of 1872 began to operate. This was five years after the date on which, according to Sir Fitzjames Stephen, the Code should have been re-enacted. 'I should say,' he writes in his minute on the administration of justice in British India, 'that this process ought to be repeated at least once in every five years for every important Act.'

Excluding the special provisions of the Acts relating respectively to Coroners, criminal tribes, inquiries into the behaviour of public servants², and the organisation of the police, the Code is now a complete body of criminal procedure. It combines the merits of the English, or accusatory, system, with some of the facilities for arriving at the truth afforded by the continental, or inquisitorial, systems. No pains have been spared to render its provisions plain and practical; and though it has been thought necessary to pass three amending Acts, the principal changes made thereby are due rather to politico-sentimental considerations than to any difficulty which the Courts have found in working the Code.

Of these Acts, the first (No. III of 1884) has already been noticed. Act III of The Bill as introduced (1) made the following persons, being Magis- 1884. trates of the first class, eligible for the office of justice of the peace, The soviz. covenanted civilians, members of the Native Civil Service constituted under 33 Vic. c. 3, Assistant Commissioners in non-regulation Bill. provinces and Cantonment Magistrates, (2) made Sessions Judges and District Magistrates ex officio justices of the peace, (3) repealed in sec. 443 of the Code the words and an European British subject,' (4) repealed the provision in sec. 444 that no Judge presiding in a Court of Session should exercise jurisdiction over an European British subject unless he himself was an European British subject, (5) repealed sec. 450 and the last sixteen words of sec. 450. But the only important changes made by the Act as passed were the repeal of the section (450) which provided for the case where the Judge of the Sessions division within which a European British subject was ordinarily triable was a Native, and the substitution for section 451 of three sections enabling a European British subject—

1 It is difficult, therefore, to understand how Sir Fitzjames Stephen could have written thus of the Code of 1882: 'It differs from the Act of 1872 principally in the circumstance that it does apply to the High Courts as well as the other criminal Courts in India, and that certain alterations have been made in the arrangement of the Act of 1872, besides some few alterations in its substance; History of the Criminal Law, iii. 324.

- (a) in a trial before the Sessions Court with the aid of assessors, to require that not less than half their number shall be Europeans or Americans, or both Europeans and Americans; and
- (b) in a trial before a District Magistrate, to claim that the trial shall be by a jury similarly composed.

Act X of 1886.

The second of these Acts, No. X of 1886, amended the drafting of sections 31, 34, 110, 162, 266, 269, 398, 401 and 510. It extended sections 55 and 56 to the police in the towns of Calcutta and Bombay. It extended to Chief Presidency Magistrates the provisions as to endorsement in sections 88 and 514. It allowed the Local Government to regulate the practice of submitting final police reports through a superior officer of police. It also allowed the Local Government, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, to prescribe the rank of the police officer who may conduct prosecutions. It empowered the Governor General in Council to direct criminal lunatics confined by order of the Local Government to be removed from one province to another. empowered the Local Government to relieve the Inspector General of jails of his functions under sections 472, 473 and 474. It provided for the removal to a criminal jail of accused or convicted persons who are in confinement in a civil jail and their return to the civil jail. And it forbade officers concerned in sales under the Code to purchase or bid for the property sold. There is a corresponding section (292) in the Code of Civil Procedure. All these changes are improvements.

Act V of 1887.

The third Act, V of 1887, merely amends the definition of 'Officer in charge of a police station,' and in section 312 substitutes the word 'four' for the word 'two.' The object of the latter change is to increase the number of names in the special jurors' list in each Presidency-town. It is to be hoped that the result will not be to lessen seriously the number of respectable and intelligent persons available as common jurors.

Suggested amendments of the Code. When the Code is next altered, it would be well to repeal and re-enact, as a separate law, the chapter on the maintenance of wives and children; to insert sections as to the mode of pleading the defences of want of jurisdiction, previous acquittal, previous conviction, and limitation; to alter the place of section 403; to make in sections 110, 145, 244, 350, 406, 437, and 443 the amendments above suggested; to explain and illustrate the expression 'presumed or actual partiality' in section 278; and to correct the clerical errors, ment of the clerical errors, ment of the clerical errors and 552.

An order under this section may, in cases of emergency or in cases where the circumstances do not admit of the serving in due time of a notice upon the person against whom the order is directed, be passed ex parte.

An order under this section may be directed to a particular individual, or to the public generally when frequenting or visiting a particular place.

Any Magistrate may rescind or alter any order made under this section by himself or any Magistrate subordinate to him or by his predecessor in office.

No order under this section shall remain in force for more than two months from the making thereof²; unless, in cases of danger to human life, health or safety, or a likelihood of a riot or an affray, the Local Government, by notification in the official Gazette, otherwise directs.

DISPUTES AS TO IMMOVEABLE PROPERTY.

Procedure where dispute concerning land etc. is likely to cause breach of peace.

145. Whenever a District Magistrate, Sub-divisional Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class is satisfied from a police report or other information that a dispute 3 likely 4 to cause a breach of the peace 5 exists concerning any tangible immoveable property 6, or the boundaries thereof, within the local limits of his jurisdiction, he shall make an order in writing, stating the grounds of his being so satisfied 7, and requiring the parties concerned in such dispute to attend his Court, in person or by pleader, within a time to be fixed by such Magistrate, and to put in written statements of their respective claims as respects the fact of actual possession 8 of the subject of dispute.

² To obtain a perpetual injunction recourse must be had to the Civil Courts.

There must be a substantial dispute (not a mere discussion or verbal altercation, 5 Cal. 197) between parties who have each some semblance of right or supposed right, 6 Cal. 841 (on sec. 530 of the Code of 1872).

7 Cal. 385.

⁵ There must be a reasonable apprehension that a disturbance of the peace is likely to occur rendering it necessary that the Magistrate should take immediate steps to prevent it (7 Calc. 385), and he must be satisfied that the suggestion of this apprehension is not merely colourable, made to induce him to deal with matters properly cognisable by the civil courts, 10 Cal. 78.

Local inquiry. 148. Whenever a local inquiry is necessary for the purposes of this chapter, any District Magistrate or Sub-divisional Magistrate may depute any Magistrate subordinate to him to make the inquiry, and may furnish him with such written instructions consistent with the law for the time being in force as may seem necessary for his guidance, and may declare by whom the whole or any part of the necessary expenses of the inquiry shall be paid.

The report of the person so deputed may be read as evidence in the case.

When sanction is given in respect of any offence referred to in this section, the Court taking cognisance of the case may frame a charge of any other offence so referred to which is disclosed by the facts.

OF THE CHARGE.

Form of Charges.

Charge to state offence.

221. Every charge under this Code shall state the offence with which the accused is charged.

Specific name of ficient description.

If the law which creates the offence gives it any specific name of offence suf- name, the offence may be described in the charge by that name only.

How stated

If the law which creates the offence does not give it any specific name, so much of the definition of the offence must be stated as to give the accused notice of the matter with where ofwhich he is charged.

The law and section of the law against which the offence name. is said to have been committed shall be mentioned in the charge 1.

The fact that the charge is made is equivalent to a state-What imment that every legal condition required by law to constitute plied in the offence charged was fulfilled in the particular case².

In the Presidency-towns the charge shall be written in Language English; elsewhere it shall be written either in English or of charge. in the language of the Court.

If the accused has been previously convicted of any offence, Previous and it is intended to prove such previous conviction³ for the conviction when to be purpose of affecting the punishment which the Court is com-set out. petent to award, the fact, date and place of the previous conviction shall be stated in the charge. If such statement is omitted, the Court may add it at any time before sentence is passed.

Illustrations.

- (a) A is charged with the murder of B. This is equivalent to a statement that A's act fell within the definition of murder given in sections 299 and 300 of the Indian Penal Code; that it did not fall within any of the general exceptions of the same Code; and that it did not fall within any of the five exceptions to section 300, or that, if it did fall within Exception 1, one or other of the three provisos to that exception applied to it.
- (b) A is charged, under section 326 of the Indian Penal Code, with voluntarily causing grievous hurt to B, by means of an instrument for shooting. This is equivalent to a statement that the case was not provided for by section 335 of the Indian Penal Code, and that the general exceptions did not apply to it.
- (c) A is accused of murder, cheating, theft, extortion, adultery or criminal intimidation, or using a false property-mark. The charge may state that A committed murder, or cheating, or theft, or extortion, or adultery or criminal intimidation, or that he used a false property-mark, without reference to the definitions of those crimes contained in the Indian Penal Code; but the sections under which the offence is punishable must, in each instance, be referred to in the charge.

³ See sec. 310, infra.

(d) A is charged, under section 184 of the Indian Penal Code, with intentionally obstructing a sale of property offered for sale by the lawful authority of a public servant. The charge should be in those words.

Particulars as to time, place and person.

222. The charge shall contain such particulars as to the time and place of the alleged offence, and the person (if any) against whom, or the thing (if any) in respect of which, it was committed, as are reasonably sufficient to give the accused notice of the matter with which he is charged ¹.

When makner of committing offence must be stated.

223. When the nature of the case is such that the particulars mentioned in sections 221 and 222 do not give the accused sufficient notice of the matter with which he is charged, the charge shall also contain such particulars of the manner in which the alleged offence was committed as will be sufficient for that purpose.

Illustrations.

- (a) A is accused of the theft of a certain article at a certain time and place. The charge need not set out the manner in which the theft was effected.
- (b) A is accused of cheating B at a given time and place. The charge must set out the manner in which A cheated B.
- (c) A is accused of giving false evidence at a given time and place. The charge must set out that portion of the evidence given by A which is alleged to be false.
- (d) A is accused of obstructing B, a public servant, in the discharge of his public functions at a given time and place. The charge must set out the manner in which A obstructed B in the discharge of his functions.
- (e) \overline{A} is accused of the murder of B at a given time and place. The charge need not state the manner in which A murdered B.
- (f) A is accused of disobeying a direction of the law with intent to save B from punishment. The charge must set out the disobedience charged and the law infringed.

Words in charge taken in sense of law under which offence is punishable.

- 224. In every charge words used in describing an offence shall be deemed to have been used in the sense attached to them respectively by the law under which such offence is punishable.
- Accuracy and certainty in stating the offence are more especially required where the accused is sought to be implicated for acts not committed by himself, but by others with whom he was in company, 11 Cal. 108, 11 Cal. 106: and see 6 All. 204, per Straight J.

225. No error in stating either the offence or the par-Effect of ticulars required to be stated in the charge, and no omission errors. to state the offence or those particulars, shall be regarded at any stage of the case as material, unless the accused was misled by such error or omission 1.

Illustrations.

(a) A is charged, under section 242 of the Indian Penal Code. with 'having been in possession of counterfeit coin, having known at the time when he became possessed thereof that such coin was counterfeit,' the word 'fraudulently' being omitted in the charge. Unless it appears that A was in fact misled by this omission, the error shall not be regarded as material.

(b) A is charged with cheating B, and the manner in which he cheated B is not set out in the charge, or is set out incorrectly. A defends himself, calls witnesses, and gives his own account of the transaction. The Court may infer from this that the omission to set out the manner of the cheating is not material.

(c) A is charged with cheating B, and the manner in which he cheated B is not set out in the charge. There were many transactions between A and B, and A had no means of knowing to which of them the charge referred, and offered no defence. The Court may infer from such facts that the omission to set out the manner of the cheating was, in this case, a material error.

(d) A is charged with the murder of Khoda Baksh on the 21st January, 1882. In fact, the murdered person's name was Haidar Baksh, and the date of the murder was the 20th January, 1882. A was never charged with any murder but one, and had heard the inquiry before the Magistrate, which referred exclusively to the case of Haidar Baksh. The Court may infer from these facts that A was not misled, and that the error in the charge was immaterial.

- (e) A was charged with murdering Haidar Baksh on the 20th January, 1882, and Khoda Baksh (who tried to arrest him for that murder) on the 21st January, 1882. When charged for the murder of Haidar Baksh, he was tried for the murder of Khoda Baksh. The witnesses present in his defence were witnesses in the case of Haidar Baksh. The Court may infer from this that A was misled, and that the error was material.
- 226. When any person is committed for trial without Procedure a charge², or with an imperfect or erroneous charge, the Court, ment withor, in the case of a High Court, the Clerk of the Crown, out charge or with may frame a charge, or add to or otherwise alter3 the charge, imperfect Court may alter charge.

227. Any Court may alter 1 any charge at any time before judgment is pronounced, or, in the case of trials before the Court of Session or High Court, before the verdict 2 of the jury is returned or the opinions of the assessors are expressed.

Every such alteration shall be read and explained to the accused.

When trial may proceed immediately after alteration.

228. If the charge framed or alteration made under section 226 or section 227 is such that proceeding immediately with the trial is not likely, in the opinion of the Court, to prejudice the accused in his defence or the prosecutor in the conduct of the case, the Court may, in its discretion, after such charge or alteration has been framed or made, proceed with the trial as if the new or altered charge had been the original charge.

When new trial may be directed, or trial suspended.

229. If the new or altered charge is such that proceeding immediately with the trial is likely, in the opinion of the Court, to prejudice the accused or the prosecutor as aforesaid, the Court may either direct a new trial or adjourn³ the trial for such period as may be necessary.

Stay of proceedings if prosecution of offence in altered charge require sanction.

CHAPTER XX.

OF THE TRIAL OF SUMMONS-CASES BY MAGISTRATES.

Procedure in summonscases.

Substance of accusation to be stated.

- 241. The following procedure shall be observed by Magistrates in the trial of summons-cases 2.
- 242. When the accused appears3 or is brought before the Magistrate, the particulars of the offence of which he is accused shall be stated to him, and he shall be asked if he has any cause to show why he should not be convicted; but it shall not be necessary to frame a formal charge.

Conviction on admission of truth of accusation.

243. If the accused admits that he has committed the offence of which he is accused, his admission shall be recorded as nearly as possible in the words used by him 4; and if he shows no sufficient cause why he should not be convicted, the Magistrate shall convict him accordingly.

Procedure when no such ad. mission is made.

- 244. If the accused does not make such admission, the Magistrate shall proceed to hear the complainant (if any), and take all such evidence as may be produced in support of the prosecution⁵, and also to hear the accused and take all such evidence⁶ as he produces in his defence⁷.
 - 1 Compare sec. 424.
- 2 i. e. cases relating to offences not punishable with death, transportation, or imprisonment for more than six months, sec. 4, cl. (t). Where there are two distinct charges against the same person arising out of the same facts, and one is a summons-case and the other a warrant-case, the mode of trial should be that applicable to the greater of the two charges, i. e. the case should be tried as a warrant-case, 11 Cal. 92, per Wilson J.
- 3 As to excusing his personal attendance, see sec. 205.

- ' Where he tenders a written defence the Magistrate need not examine him personally, 16 Suth. Cr. 63.
- ⁵ As to the duty of the prosecution to call witnesses able to give material evidence, and the inference which may be drawn if they are not called, see 8 Cal. 121: 10 Cal. 1070.
- ⁶ A conviction by a Magistrate who has refused to examine a witness formally tendered by the accused is illegal, 4 Ben. Appx. 77.

The Magistrate may, before summoning any witness on such application, require that his reasonable expenses, incurred in attending for the purposes of the trial, be deposited in Court¹.

245. If the Magistrate upon taking the evidence referred Acquittal. to in section 244 and such further evidence (if any) as he may, of his own motion, cause to be produced, and (if he thinks fit) examining the accused, finds the accused not guilty, he shall record an order of acquittal ².

If he finds the accused guilty, he shall pass sentence upon Sentence. him according to law 3.

- 246. A Magistrate may, under section 243 or section 245, Finding convict the accused of any offence triable under this chapter not limited by comwhich from the facts admitted or proved he appears to have plaint or committed, whatever may be the nature of the complaint or summons.
- 247. If the summons has been issued on complaint ⁴, and Non-apupon the day appointed for the appearance of the accused of comor any day subsequent thereto to which the hearing may be plainant. adjourned the complainant does not appear ⁵, the Magistrate shall, notwithstanding anything hereinbefore contained, acquit the accused ⁶, unless for some reason he thinks proper to adjourn the hearing of the case to some other day ⁷.

¹ Where the complainant fails to make such deposit, the Magistrate deals with the case on the evidence before him, 5 Mad. 160.

² As to making an order for compensation against the complainant, see sec. 250, infra, 5 Mad. 381; 10 Bom. 100.

³ He must pass some sentence, if only a nominal one, 4 Mad. H. C., Rulings, lxvi.

³ As to dismissal where he does appear and is examined, see sec. 203, supra.

or to a later hour on the same day, 7 Mad. 356. The order for adjournment should ordinarily be made in the presence and hearing of the parties, and if the complainant does not appear on the day or at the hour to which the case is adjourned, the Magistrate may acquit the accused, 22 Suth. Cr. 40.

Withdrawal of complaint. 248. If a complainant 1, at any time before a final order is passed in any case under this chapter, satisfies the Magistrate that there are sufficient grounds for permitting him to withdraw his complaint 2, the Magistrate may permit him to withdraw the same 3, and shall thereupon acquit the accused.

Power to stop proceedings when no complainant. 249. In any case instituted otherwise than upon complaint, a Presidency Magistrate, a Magistrate of the first class, or, with the previous sanction of the District Magistrate, any other Magistrate, may, for reasons to be recorded by him, stop the proceedings at any stage without pronouncing any judgment either of acquittal or conviction, and may thereupon release the accused.

Frivolous or vexatious complaints. 250. If, in any case instituted upon complaint 4, a Magistrate acquits the accused under section 24,5 or section 247, and is of opinion that the complaint was frivolous or vexatious 5, he may, in his discretion, by his order of acquittal, direct the complainant 1 to pay to the accused, or to each of the accused

In cases of contempt of the lawful authority of a public servant the 'complainant' must be deemed the public servant whose authority has been resisted, and without whose sanction the offender cannot be prosecuted, and not the person injured by the resistance, 2 Bonn. 653. Of course where a judge acting judicially is 'complainant' he is not subject to the penalty provided by sec. 250; I Bom. 176.

² It will be remembered that this chapter refers only to summons-cases, 6 Mad. 316. As to compounding offences, see sec. 345 and 10 Cal. 551.

³ And the District Magistrate cannot revive a charge which a Deputy Magistrate has allowed to be withdrawn, 25 Suth. Cr. 64: 10 Cal. 551.

A case instituted by the police on a complaint to them is not 'instituted upon complaint' within the meaning of this section, 6 All. 96: 7 Mad. 563. And as the chapter refers only to summons-cases, compensation under this section cannot be given in warrant-cases: see 1 Bom. H. C. 181: 6 Mad. 316: 7 Suth. Cr. 11, 12. O course the power conferred by sec. 250 is not confined to complaints of offences under the Penal Code, 4 N. W. P. 94. As 'complaint' means an allegation that some person has committed an 'offence' (sec. 4, cl. a, supra) no compensation can be given under this section for an act, such as illegal seizure of cattle under colour of the Cattle Trespass Act, 1871, which has not been made an 'offence' by that Act or otherwise, 9 Mad. 102.

Where the complaint is well-founded as regards the accused A and frivolous as regards the accused B, compensation may be directed to be paid to B, 5 Mad. 381. Where the complaint is both frivolous and false, the award of compensation for its frivolity does not preclude the Magistrate from sanctioning a prosecution for making a false complaint, Mad. H. C. Pro., 12 Nov.1875, cited by Henderson, p. 238.

The sum so awarded shall be recoverable as if it were a fine ³: Recovery provided that, if it cannot be realised, the imprisonment to be sation. awarded shall be simple, and for such term, not exceeding thirty days, as the Magistrate directs ⁴.

At the time of awarding compensation in any subsequent civil suit relating to the same matter, the Court shall take into account any sum paid or recovered as compensation under this section.

CHAPTER XXI.

OF THE TRIAL OF WARRANT-CASES BY MAGISTRATES.

- 251. The following procedure shall be observed by Magis-Procedure in warrantes in the trial of warrant-cases 5.
- 252. When the accused appears or is brought before a Evidence Magistrate, such Magistrate shall proceed to hear the complainant (if any) and take all such evidence as may be produced in support of the prosecution.

The Magistrate shall ascertain, from the complainant or otherwise, the names of any persons likely to be acquainted with the facts of the case and to be able to give evidence for the prosecution, and shall summon ¹⁰ to give evidence before himself such of them as he thinks necessary.

Charge to be framed when offence appears proved.

254. If, when such evidence and examination have been taken and made, the Magistrate is of opinion that there is ground for presuming that the accused has committed an offence³ triable under this chapter, which such Magistrate is competent to try. and which, in his opinion, could be adequately punished by him, he shall frame in writing a charge against the accused.

255. The charge shall then be read and explained to the accused, and he shall be asked whether he is guilty or has any defence to make.

If the accused pleads guilty4, the Magistrate shall record the plea⁵, and may in his discretion convict him thereon.

- ¹ The following list of grounds of challenge, taken from the New York Code of Criminal Procedure, § 377, with some slight omissions and verbal changes, illustrates the presumed partiality here mentioned:—
- I. Consanguinity or affinity, within the ninth degree, to the person alleged to be injured by the crime charged, or on whose complaint the prosecution was instituted, or to the accused.
- 2. Bearing to him the relation of guardian or ward, attorney or client,... master or servant, landlord or tenant,... or being in his employment on wages.
- 3. Being a party adverse to the accused in a civil suit, or having complained against, or been accused by him, in a criminal prosecution.
- 4 Having served on a coroner's jury which inquired into the death of the person whose death is the subject of the charge.
- 5. Having served on a jury which has tried another person for the crime with which the accused is charged.
- 6. Having been one of a jury formerly sworn to try the same charge and whose verdict was set aside, or which was discharged without a verdict.

- 7. If the crime charged be punishable with death, the entertaining of such conscientious opinions as would preclude his finding the accused guilty.
- 'Actual partiality' is such a state of mind on the part of the juror, in reference to the case or to either party, as satisfies the Court, in the exercise of a sound discretion, that he cannot try the issue impartially and without prejudice to the substantial rights of the party challenging. But the previous expression or formation of an opinion or impression with reference to the guilt or innocence of the accused, or a present opinion or impression in reference thereto, is not a sufficient ground of challenge for actual partiality, to any person otherwise legally qualified, if he declare on oath that he believes that such opinion or impression will not influence his verdict, and that he can render an impartial verdict according to the evidence, and the Court is satisfied that he does not entertain such a present opinion or impression as would influence his verdict. F.—Conclusion of Trial in Cases tried by Jury.

Charge to jury.

297. In cases tried by jury, when the case for the defence and the prosecutor's reply (if any) are concluded, the Court shall proceed to charge the jury, summing up the evidence for the prosecution and defence¹, and laying down the law by which the jury are to be guided ².

1 The Judge should give a full and detailed statement of the evidence on both sides; he should point out the legal bearing of it, 3 Suth. Cr. 69; and what weight the jury ought to attach to the several parts. His omission to do so, if the accused is thereby prejudiced, amounts to such an error in law as would justify a Court of Appeal in setting aside the verdict, 5 Bom. H. C., Cr. Ca. 85, 04; and see 9 Suth. Cr. 51. He should tell the jury what are the principal points in the evidence, and how they bear for or against the prisoner, 6 Suth. Cr. 72: 25 Suth. Cr. 54. He may warn them not to disbelieve a mass of otherwise consistent evidence because in minor and immaterial points the witnesses made different statements, I Suth. Cr. 17. Of course, where there is no legal evidence for the prosecution, the judge should direct the jury to acquit, 7 Suth. Cr. 39. If it be necessary to refer to a previous conviction of the accused, he should tell them to try the present case on its own merits, and warn them not to allow the previous conviction to influence their minds, 6 Suth. Cr. 64, per Norman J. He should not give a positive opinion as to the guilt or innocence of the prisoner, as Native juries are too apt to follow it, without paying any attention to the facts of the case, 1 Suth. Cr. 26, per Glover J.; but see Suth. 1864, Cr. 5, per Jackson J. Nor should he tell the jury that the prisoner had previously been of bad character, 10 Suth. Cr. 39. Nor should he suggest that the prisoner be recommended to mercy, 14 Suth. Cr. 46. Nor should he say that a witness is deserving of credit when there is no evidence on the subject. 10 Suth. Cr. 58.

dence on the subject, 10 Suth. Cr. 58. 2 so far as to make them understand the law as bearing on the facts, 8 Cal. 751, per Field J. For instance, where the prisoner is charged under sec. 304 of the Penal Code, the Judge should point out the distinction between the two classes of culpable homicide mentioned in that section, and direct them to find specially under which, if either, the prisoner was guilty, 6 Ben. Appx. 86. So on the trial of prisoners for the offence of belonging to a gang of persons associated for the purpose of habitually committing thefts (Penal Code, sec. 401), the Judge should point out clearly, I. the necessity of proof of association, and, 2. the need of proving that that association was for the purpose of habitual theft, and that habit is to be proved by an aggregate of acts, 6 Mad. H. C. 121. So where the evidence of an accomplice is uncorroborated, the Judge should tell the jury that it is unsafe and contrary both to prudence and practice to convict on such evidence, 6 Bom. H. C., Cr. Ca. 57: see, too, I Mad. 394: 1 Bom. 475: 21 Suth. Cr. 69; and, where the accomplice 298. In such cases, it is the duty of the Judge—

Duty of Judge.

- (a) to decide all questions of law arising in the course of Judge. the trial, and especially all questions as to the relevancy of facts which it is proposed to prove, and the admissibility of evidence or the propriety of questions asked by or on behalf of the parties; and, in his discretion, to prevent the production of inadmissible evidence, whether it is or is not objected to by the parties;
- (b) to decide upon the meaning and construction of all documents given in evidence at the trial 2;
- (c) to decide upon all matters of fact which it may be necessary to prove in order to enable evidence of particular matters to be given ³;
- (d) to decide whether any question which arises is for himself or for the jury, and upon this point his decision shall bind the jurors 4.

The Judge may, if he thinks proper, in the course of his summing up, express to the jury his opinion upon any question of fact, or upon any question of mixed law and fact, relevant to the proceeding ⁵.

(a) It is proposed to prove a statement made by a person not being a witness in the case, on the ground that circumstances are proved which render evidence of such statement admissible.

speaks as to two or more persons having been concerned in the same offence, that his testimony should be confirmed as to all the prisoners, not only as to the circumstances of the case, but also as to the identity of the prisoners, 3 Bom. H. C., Cr. Ca. 57.

But the Judge should not argue and dispose of legal objections raised by the prisoner's counsel, 8 Suth. Cr. 88, col. 1. He should 'lay down' the law, but not discuss it. See 8 Cal. 739.

As to setting aside a verdict where the Judge has misdirected the jury, see secs. 423, cl. (d), 537. The question for the Appellate Court to consider is whether the tendency of the charge has been upon the whole to give a correct or an incorrect direction to the mind of the jury. It would be wrong to criticise the direction of a Judge in a Mufassal Court as if it were the charge of a Judge in an English Court of Assize, 12 Suth. Cr. 80, per Jackson J.

¹ As e. g. whether a communication is privileged or not, 10 Suth. Cr. 14.

There is no exception in case of a libel or a threatening letter; see in England, Taylor, §§ 46, 47.

3 as, for instance, when the question is whether a confession should be excluded on account of some previous threat or promise, Taylor, § 23.

⁴ See more as to the duties of a Judge, 20 Suth. Cr. 41, per Markby J.

But where the jury say they are uncertain as to the section of the Penal Code applicable to the case of one of the prisoners, the Judge ought not to hand them a copy of the Code leaving them to decide under what section the offence fell, 14 Cal. 164.

It is for the Judge, and not for the jury, to decide whether the existence of those circumstances has been proved.

(b) It is proposed to give secondary evidence of a document the original of which is alleged to have been lost or destroyed.

It is the duty of the Judge to decide whether the original has been lost or destroyed.

Duty of jury.

299. It is the duty of the jury-

- (a) to decide which view of the facts is true, and then to return the verdict which under such view ought, according to the direction of the Judge, to be returned;
- (b) to determine the meaning of all technical terms (other than terms of law) and words used in an unusual sense which it may be necessary to determine, whether such words occur in documents or not 1;
- (c) to decide all questions which according to law are to be deemed questions of fact 2 ;
- (d) to decide whether general indefinite expressions do or do not apply to particular eases, unless such expressions refer to legal procedure, or unless their meaning is ascertained by law, in either of which eases it is the duty of the Judge to decide their meaning.

Illustrations.

(a) A is tried for the murder of B.

It is the duty of the Judge to explain to the jury the distinction between murder and culpable homicide, and to tell them under what views of the facts A ought to be convicted of murder, or of culpable homicide, or to be acquitted.

It is the duty of the jury to decide which view of the facts is true, and to return a verdict in accordance with the direction of the Judge, whether that direction is right or wrong, and whether they do or do not agree with it 3.

(b) The question is whether a person entertained a reasonable belief on a particular point,—whether work was done with reasonable skill or due diligence.

Each of these is a question for the jury.

1 Taylor, § 45.

² e. g. whether a provocation was grave and sudden enough to prevent the offence from amounting to murder (Penal Code, sec. 300), II Cal. 412. The jury decide whether the accused has been previously convicted, 21 Suth. Cr. 40.

3 When the existence of a specific intention is essential to the commission of a crime, it is probable (though the law nowhere says so) that the jury, in deciding whether an offender had that intention, should take into account the fact that he was drunk when he did the act which, if coupled with that intention, would constitute such crime. 1 7 Ben. 63. The object of this provision is to enable the Sessions Judge in long or intricate cases to place the evidence in an intelligible form so as to assist the assessors in arriving at a reasonable conclusion, o Cal. 876. Although there was and is no provision requiring the Judge to charge the assessors or lay down the law, the High Court of Madras (4 Mad. H. C., Rulings, vii) thought that, in cases turning on the evidence of an accomplice, the Judge should inform the assessors, first, that there is no rule of law prohibiting the conviction of an offender upon the uncorroborated evidence of an accomplice; secondly, that, as a general rule, it is considered unsafe to convict upon such evidence; and, thirdly, to point at any circumstances in the particular case which, in the opinion of the Judge, afford a sufficient reason for relying upon the evidence in that case. So in capital cases, the Judge should explain the difference between culpable homicide and murder, 3 Suth. Cr. 18. So where the prisoner pleads not guilty, and the Public Prosecutor does not offer evidence in support of the charge, the Judge ought to instruct the assessors that they are bound to find the prisoner not guilty, 4 Mad. H. C., Rulings, xxxix. And he should call their attention to gross discrepancies and impossible misstatements made by witnesses, if the assessors failed to notice them, 5 Suth. Cr. 70, 71, col. 1.

² The Court should not receive the opinion of all the assessors combined, as delivered through one of them.

3 He must record the grounds of each assessor's opinions, 3 Suth. Cr. 6, whether the prisoner is acquitted or convicted. Secus 7 Bom. H. C., Cr. Ca. 82 (1870).

- (b) If he pleads guilty to, or is convicted of, the subsequent offence, he shall then be asked whether he has been previously convicted as alleged in the charge.
- (c) If he answers that he has been so previously convicted the Judge may proceed to pass sentence on him accordingly; but, if he denies that he has been so previously convicted, or refuses to, or does not, answer such question, the jury or the Court and the assessors (as the case may be) shall then inquire concerning such previous conviction, and in such case (where the trial is by jury) it shall not be necessary to swear the jurors again 1.

¹ A Hindú marriage of a man reverting from Christianity to Hindúism is not void in consequence of a previous Christian marriage, 4 Mad., H. C. Rulings, iii. The Hindú as well as the Christian wife of such a person is therefore entitled to maintenance under this section.

As to the High Court's power to revise orders made under this section, see 20 Suth. Cr. 58, 5 Bom. H. C., Cr. Ca. 81.

refer the applicant to a Magistrate having jurisdiction under section 490; 4 Mad. 230.

3 The order does not deprive a Muhammadan husband against whom it is made of his right to divorce his wife, and after such divorce the order cannot be enforced (7 Bom. 180), except as to the interval between the date of the order and the divorce (19 Suth.  - (f) that the body of a defendant within such limits be brought in on the Sheriff's return of cepi corpus to a writ of attachment¹.

Each of the said High Courts may, from time to time, frame rules to regulate the procedure in cases under this section².

Saving of laws relating to State prisoners.

Nothing in this section applies to persons detained under Bengal Regulation III of 1818, Madras Regulation II of 1819 or Bombay Regulation XXV of 1827, or the Acts of the Governor General in Council No. XXXIV of 1850 or No. III of 1858.

¹ As to the power of the late Supreme Courts to grant writs of habeas corpus, see I Knapp, I. This chapter seems not to affect the English prerogative writ of habeas corpus ad subjiciendum, which runs into all parts of British India. If it appears to such officer or Court at any stage of the investigation, inquiry or trial, as the case may be, that there are not reasonable grounds for believing that the accused has committed such offence, but that there are sufficient grounds for further inquiry into his guilt, the accused shall, pending such inquiry, be released on bail, or, at the discretion of such officer or Court, on the execution by him of a bond without sureties for his appearance as hereinafter provided.

If, through mistake, fraud or otherwise, insufficient sureties have been accepted, or if they afterwards become insufficient, the Court may issue a warrant of arrest directing that the person released on bail be brought before it and may order him to find sufficient sureties, and on his failing so to do may commit him to jail.

THE UNREPEALED PART OF ACT X OF 1875.

Advocate General may exhibit informations.

144. The Advocate General may, with the previous sanction of the Governor-General in Council or the Local Government, exhibit to the local High Court, against persons subject to the jurisdiction of the said Court, info mations for all purposes for which Her Majesty's Attorney-General may exhibit informations on behalf of the Crown in the Court of Queen's Bench or Exchequer 1.

Such proceedings may be taken upon every such information as may lawfully be taken in case of similar informations filed by her Majesty's Attorney-General in England, so far as the circumstances of the case and the course and practice of proceeding in the said High Courts respectively will admit.

All fines, penalties, forfeitures, debts and sums of money recovered or levied under or by virtue of any such information shall belong to the Government of India.

Power to enter nolle prosequi.

146. At any stage of any proceeding under this Act, before the return of the verdict, the Advocate General may, if he think fit, inform the Court on behalf of Her Majesty that he will not further prosecute the defendant upon the information or charge; and thereupon all proceedings on such information or charge against the defendant shall be stayed, and he shall be discharged of and from the same. But such discharge shall not amount to an acquittal ².

² So in England the party discharged remains liable to be re-indicted, Archbold, p. 115.

INTRODUCTION TO THE CODE CIVIL PROCEDURE.

It is obvious that, in every system of jurisprudence professing to provide for the due administration of public justice, some forms of proceeding must be established, to bring the matters in controversy between the parties, who are interested therein, before the tribunal by which they are to be adjudicated. And for the sake of the despatch of business, as well as for its due arrangement with reference to the rights and convenience of all the suitors, many rules must be adopted to induce certainty, order, accuracy, and uniformity in these proceedings1.

The Anglo-Indian Courts have always tried to do justice between man and man. But no one can say that their procedure was formerly characterised by certainty, order and accuracy; and its want of uniformity is equally incontestable.

Before the 1st July, 1859, there were no less than nine Multiformdifferent systems of civil procedure simultaneously in force in ity of old Bengal: four in the Supreme Court, corresponding to its commonlaw, equity, ecclesiastical and admiralty jurisdictions; one for the Court of Small Causes at Calcutta; one in the military Courts of Requests; and three in the Courts of the East India Company, one for regular suits, a second for summary suits, and a third applicable to the jurisdiction of the Deputy Collector in what were called resumption-suits2. The procedures, as well as the Procedures jurisdictions, of the Supreme Court were all founded on the charter of Supreme Courts. of George III, dated 26th March, 1774. These jurisdictions were technically termed 'sides' of the Court, and the procedure on each 'side' was similar to the procedure of the corresponding Court in England, with this difference, that the viva voce examinations of ² Also called lá-khiráj suits. All land in India is assumed to be subject to khiráj (the tax imposed by Muhammadans on the land of conquered countries), unless the right to it has been granted away by the sovran; and lé-khiráj suits were instituted to try the question whether lands held without payment of revenue were so held by a legal title or not.

They were called 'resumption-suits,' because by reason of them the Government is said to 'resume' the right illegally withheld from it, First Report of Commissioners appointed to consider the reform of the judicial establishments etc. of India, p. 200. Procedure of Company's Courts. witnesses were taken down in writing and the depositions were signed by the witnesses. The source of the procedure of the Small Causes Court I have not been able to ascertain. There were no written pleadings in this Court. Procedure in the military Courts of Requests was regulated by Act XI of 1841. In these Courts also there were no written pleadings. The civil procedure of the Company's Courts originated in a code of regulations passed by Lord Cornwallis, in 17931. That code was applicable chiefly to regular suits, the practice of the Courts being more similar to that of the Courts of equity than of common law 2, and there was only one class of cases for which it was then considered necessary to provide a more summary procedure. These were suits for the forcible dispossession of disputed land and crops. But, a few years later, the summary procedure was extended to cases connected with the collection and exaction of rent. The summary jurisdiction in cases of forcible dispossession was transferred to the Magistrates by Act IV of 1840; and the summary jurisdiction in cases of rent, which had gradually increased so as to embrace almost every question between the zamindar and raiyat, was transferred by Ben. Reg. 8 of 1831 to the collector of land-revenue.

Written pleadings. In suits in the Company's Courts there were written pleadings, which consisted of a plaint, an answer, a reply and a rejoinder. The parties were not restricted to any particular form, but each told his story in his own way. The pleadings were in consequence argumentative and sometimes very voluminous, and full of irrelevant matter and repetition; and they often failed to bring the parties to direct issue. A regulation passed in 1814³, no doubt, required the Judge, after the close of the proceedings, to settle the issues, or rather fix the points to be determined. But this 'most whole-

The Sadr Court might, under Reg. 25 of 1814, sec. 5, cl. 1, call up from any subordinate Court and determine any original suit amounting to Rs. 50,000 and upwards; but this jurisdiction appears never to have been exercised.

some regulation' (as it was called by the Judicial Committee) was much neglected by the lower Courts, and the parties were allowed to bring in from time to time as might be convenient their exhibits and lists of witnesses, with a petition stating the point to prove which they were adduced. No particular course was prescribed to be followed at the final hearing. The Judge either himself perused the pleadings and depositions, or listened to them as read by a corruptible Native officer. 'The parties were then heard, and the general practice in this case was for the Judge to put a question to the vakil of one of the parties, which was answered by the opposite vakil to the best of his ability, and then a good deal of wrangling sometimes followed between the opposed pleaders '.' The Judge, as he does still, determined both fact and law, but his judgment was often reversed by the appellate Court on merely technical grounds, not affecting the merits of the case or the jurisdiction 2.

Mutatis mutandis, it may be said that in the other parts of British India the systems of civil procedure were equally numerous, and, it may be added, equally imperfect 3.

The evils arising from this state of things had long been felt; First Law and in 1834, the statute 3 & 4 Wm. IV, c. 85, sec. 53, provided Commisthat certain persons styled the Indian Law Commissioners should inquire into all existing forms of judicial procedure in force in any part of British India, and should suggest such alterations as might in their opinion be beneficially made in those forms.

These Commissioners recommended extensive alterations, and appear to have drafted a Code of Civil Procedure. This I have never seen. It is certain, however, that in or about 1853, Mr. A. J. Moffatt Mills (a judge of the Sadr Díwání Adálat) and Mr. (afterwards Sir H. B.) Harington were appointed 'special Commissioners for revising the Code of Civil Procedure;' and that the result of their labours, a draft entitled 'The Code of Civil Procedure of the Courts of the East India Company 4,' was printed in rules as to procedure were in Bom. Regs. 2 of 1827, sec. 10, 4 of 1827, and 17 of 1827, secs. 32, 34. The procedure of officers appointed to try small suits in military bazárs in Bombay is unaffected by the Code. The jurisdiction of the provincial Courts depended on Bom. 4 This draft contains 1026 sections distributed among 36 chapters, the arrangement and drafting of which are very faulty. As to its substance, it 1854 and laid before another body of Commissioners in England appointed under 16 & 17 Vic. c. 95, sec. 28. These Commissioners were thus instructed by Sir Charles Wood, then President of the Board for the affairs of India:—

'It is obviously most desirable that a simple system of pleading and practice, uniform, as far as possible, throughout the whole jurisdiction, should be adopted, and one which is also capable of being applied to the administration of justice in the inferior Courts of India. The embarrassment will thus be avoided which a diversity of procedure throws in the way of an appellate jurisdiction; and the proceedings in the new Court¹ will be a pattern and guide to the inferior tribunals in the Mufassal.

'Your first duty, therefore, should be to address yourselves to the preparation of such a code of simple and uniform procedure.'

Four draft codes.

The Commissioners accordingly produced and submitted to Her Majesty in their first report a draft code of procedure for all ordinary civil courts in the Lower Provinces of Bengal, with the exception of the Court of Small Causes in Calcutta. In their third and fourth reports, dated the 20th May, 1856, they submitted similar codes for the civil courts in the North-Western Provinces and the Presidencies of Madras and Bombay. Four Bills founded on these drafts were in 1857 introduced into the Legislative Council by Mr. (now Sir Barnes) Peacock, and referred to Select Committees. These Bills were amalgamated and became law as Act VIII of 1859. The principal improvements which it made were, according to Sir Barnes Peacock², these: (a) it enabled the Civil Courts to grant injunctions to restrain a defendant from committing waste, injury or breach of contract; (b) it enabled Civil Courts to appoint receivers or managers for the preservation or the better management or custody of property in dispute; (c) it provided that the parties to a suit might, where they were at issue on some question of law or fact, state a case to the Judge in the form of an issue and agree among themselves in writing to abide by the finding of the Judge upon such issue, such finding to be enforceable as if it were a judgment in a contested suit; and (d), as introduced, it dispensed with the necessity of going through all the tedious and technical forms of pleading in the Supreme Courts. But the Code as passed did not apply to those Courts, or to the Presidency Small

The day after the Code had taken effect in Bengal, and before it Amendl come into force in Madras and Bombay, Mr. Harington, nil ments of Act VIII um reputans dum quid superesset agendum, moved the first reading of 1859. a Bill (afterwards Act IV of 1860) to amend one of its rules reing to appeals to the Sadr Court, and the process of amendment nt on to the end of 1863-Acts XLIII of 1860, XXIII of 1861. of 1863, and XVIII of 1863 being passed in swift succession. In the meanwhile the Code had been extended to almost the ole of British India1, and it was also made applicable to the gh Courts in the exercise of their civil, intestate, testamentary, d matrimonial jurisdictions 2.

1871, the Evidence Act of 1872, the Oaths Act of 1873, all had this effect to a greater or less extent. Moreover, Act V of 1866 had provided a summary procedure on bills of exchange, and Act X of 1867 dealt with references by provincial Courts of Small Causes.

Again, the Code of 1859 was unquestionably ill-drawn, ill-arranged and incomplete, and there had been a large number of decisions, which showed either some inconvenience in the rules of the Code or some ambiguity of expression, or absence of direction, which had given rise to disputes. To a certain extent these matters were settled by judicial decisions; but the decisions, however well they might interpret the language of the Code, did not always lay down the rule most beneficial to suitors, and even in the more frequent instances, when the decision laid down the best rule, it was often convenient to embody it in the written law.

Lastly, the Government of India had decided to make sundry amendments in the law relating to the execution of decrees, and to render more efficient the provisions of the Code as to execution-debtors unable to pay their debts.

Under these circumstances, the Government of India, with the advice of Mr. (now Lord) Hobhouse, who was then law-member, and the sanction of the Secretary of State, determined to proceed with Mr. Harington's Bill, and the writer, who was then Secretary to the Government of India in the Legislative Department, with the permission of Mr. Hobhouse, recast Mr. Harington's draft. In doing so he attempted a clearer and more methodical arrangement of the different parts and clauses of the Code than was then the case: he embodied in it a number of judicial decisions, some incorporated in the substance of the enactments, some by way of explanation: in a few instances he proposed rules more generally convenient than those which had been decided to result from the then wording of the Code: he supplied several forms of proceeding which he thought might be useful to suitors; and he added certain provisions as to joinder of parties, lis alibi pendens, foreign judgments, interrogatories, affidavits, admission of documents, administration suits, suits by and against minors and lunatics, suits relating to charities, interpleader, etc., some of which were borrowed with necessary modifications from the orders and rules made in England under the Judicature Acts, others from the rules of the High Court of Calcutta, and others from the New York Code of Civil Procedure. Of these new provisions, one, the chapter on interpleader, was wholly drawn by Mr. Hobhouse; the chapter on payment into court and the section on set-off were either wholly or chiefly from his pen; and the other chapters, especially those on execution of decrees and appeals to the Queen in Council, owe much to his skill and industry.

The re-arrangement of the Code was made on the following Arrangeprinciples. First, the course of an ordinary suit is followed, from ment of the new the moment that the plaintiff determines to sue until he obtains Code. execution of his decree. Incidental proceedings (as, for example, when either party dies or becomes insolvent, or a female party marries, or a local investigation is required) are then separately dealt with. Thirdly, we have suits in particular cases, as, for example, when the plaintiff is a pauper, a lunatic, or a mere stakeholder: or the defendant is a corporation, a minor, or a military Fourthly, the Code deals with provisional remedies (such as arrest and attachment before judgment, and interlocutory iniunctions), which are wanted to prevent the plaintiff absconding or property disappearing or being wasted pending litigation. Fifthly, we have special proceedings not of the nature of regular suits-such as references to arbitration and summary suits on negotiable instruments. These five divisions exhaust the subject of procedure in the exercise of original jurisdiction. If, then, an unsuccessful litigant wishes to present an appeal, or to have a judgment reviewed, he will find the law on these subjects in Parts dealing respectively with appeals and reviews. References of points of law to the High Courts are also separately dealt with: the special rules relating to the Courts established under 24 & 25 Vic. c. 104 in the Presidency-towns and at Allahabad are placed in a Part by themselves; and the body of the draft is completed by a few sections comprising some miscellaneous matters which could not conveniently be placed under any of the other heads. The new Code was thus divided into ten Parts, relating respectively to-

I. Suits in general.

II. Incidental proceedings.

III. Suits in particular cases.

IV. Provisional remedies.

V. Special proceedings.

VI. Appeals.

VII. Review of judgment.

VIII. References to the High Court.

IX. Special rules relating to the chartered High Courts.

X. Certain miscellaneous matters.

The draft, with a preliminary report dated March 8, 1875, was presented to the Council, published in the Gazette of India, and circulated to the Local Governments. A further report, dated 13th September, 1876, describing many improvements in the draft suggested by the criticisms of Messrs. Pitt Kennedy, Belchambers, Plowden and others¹, was presented to the Council with the revised Bill in September, 1876. And a final report, describing many further improvements due to Sir R. Garth, Sir Charles Turner, Mr. Justice Ainslie, and Pandit Lakshmí Náráyana, was presented to the Council in the spring of 1877. After a memorable speech by Sir Arthur, now Lord Hobhouse, the Bill became law on the 30th March in that year, and it came into force on the following 1st of October.

Amendments of Code of 1877.

Nine months' experience, however, showed that several amendments, both formal and substantial, were desirable. Local laws prescribing a special procedure for suits between landlord and tenant had not been sufficiently saved by section 4, and the result was that the local legislatures were debarred from making any law dealing with that matter. Section 229 did not provide for Courts, such as that of the Resident at Mandalay, which were then outside British India. And there were other difficulties as to the rules for the payment of subsistence-money of imprisoned judgment-debtors: as to appeals against orders for the sale of attached property or rejecting applications to set aside ex parte decrees, and as to the power of Judicial Commissioners to regulate their own procedure. The chapter on Insolvency did not extend to persons against whose property orders of attachment had issued in execution of money-decrees, and it required amendment in other respects. The section (622) as to revision by the High Court did not provide for the case where the lower Court appeared to have acted in the exercise of its jurisdiction illegally or with material irregularity. And there were several slips in the drafting, of which perhaps the most important was in the first clause of the section (113) on res judicata. The writer, who had succeeded Sir Arthur Hobhouse as law-member, therefore introduced into the Viceregal Council a Bill which became law as Act XII of 1879, and amended about 130 sections of the Code.

The Code of 1882.

In the beginning of 1882 another Bill was introduced to exempt from attachment the whole of the salaries of public officers and railway servants when not exceeding rs. 20 per mensem, extending section 539 (as to suits relating to public charities) to suits relating to religious endowments, and applying sections 434 and 650 A to Revenue as well as to Civil Courts. The Select Committee to which this Bill was referred added some ten or twelve less important amendments of other parts of the Code; and as the Code had been already amended, thought that the convenience of the courts, the bar and the public required that Act X of 1877 and its amending Act (XII of 1879) should be repealed and re-enacted with the amendments proposed by the amended Bill, but without any change in the order and numbering of the parts, chapters and sections of the Act of 1877. The Council agreed to this, and the present Code, Act XIV of 1882, accordingly became law.

The Code begins with a short preamble and nine sections containing certain definitions and other preliminary matter. The portions of the Code which extend to the provincial Courts of Small Causes are declared by section 5 and schedule II. The portions extending to the Presidency Small Cause Courts are declared by Act XV of 1882, sec. 23 and its second schedule. The few portions which do not apply to the High Courts in the exercise of original jurisdiction are declared by the Code itself, section 638.

PART I. OF SUITS IN GENERAL.

This Part deals with litigation in the simplest case, from the time that the plaintiff decides on suing and has to select his forum to the time when, having obtained a decree, he proceeds to execute it. It assumes that the plaintiff is a sane adult British subject, and neither a pauper, a military man, or a mere stakeholder. It assumes that the defendant is another sane adult British subject, that he is not a military man, and that he does not attempt to abscond or to waste the subject-matter of the suit. It also assumes that the suit is not compromised, and that in the course of the litigation neither party dies, becomes insolvent, marries, or requires a commission to issue. It is divided into eighteen chapters relating to the following subjects:—

- I. The jurisdiction of the Courts and res judicata.
- II. The place of suing.
- III. Parties, their appearances, applications and acts.
- IV. The frame of the suit, and the form of the plaint.
 - V. The institution of suits.
- VI. Service of summons on the defendant.
- VII. The appearance of the parties, and the consequence of non-appearance.
- VIII. Written statements.
 - IX. The examination of the parties at the first hearing.

- X. The admission, inspection, production, and impounding of documents.
- XI. The settlement of issues.
- XII. The disposal of the suit at the first hearing.
- XIII. Adjournments.
- XIV. Summoning witnesses.
- XV. Examination of parties and witnesses.
- XVI. Judgment and decree.
- XVII. Costs.
- XVIII. Execution of decrees.

Chapter I. Of the Jurisdiction of the Courts and Res Judicata.

The first question for a person seeking judicial relief is, whether his suit can be brought; whether, in other words, the Courts have jurisdiction to grant the desired relief.

Here the Code first declares generally that no person shall by reason of his descent or place of birth be in any civil proceeding exempt from the jurisdiction of any of the Courts ¹. This had been the law in the Bengal Presidency since the year 1836 in regard to all the civil courts except the Munsif's ². But this declaration does not affect special laws, such as have been provided for the care of the property and persons of minors ³, and for privileged persons, such as the late King of Oudh, and the families of the Nawáb of the Carnatic ⁴ and the Nawáb of Surat ⁵.

The Code then declares the jurisdiction to try all suits of a 'civil nature,' excepting suits of which their cognisance is barred, by any law for the time being in force; such, for instance, as the Limitation Act, or Act XVIII of 1850, which bars suits against judges for acts done by them in good faith in the discharge of their judicial duties, or the Code of Criminal Procedure, sections 133, 140, 142, which prevent the civil Courts from interfering with the orders of magistrates for the removal of public nuisances, or the Code of Civil Procedure itself, sec. 244. to try such cases, see Bourke, Rep. O. C. p. 273. For the English common law on this subject see Dimes v. Grand Junction Canal Co., 3 H. L. Ca. 793: Serjeant v. Dale, L. R., 2 Q. B. D. 566, 567. We may leave this subject of jurisdiction with the remark that the so-called merger of torts in felony does not exist in India. A Hindú or Mahomedan therefore whose civil rights have been infringed by an act which is also a non-compoundable offence is not bound to prosecute the offender before bringing his civil suit. Nor is his right to sue suspended until the offender is brought to justice. The Code should have contained rules, either by way of express enactment or of illustration, as to each of these matters.

Lis alibi pendens. Section 12 then provides for the plea of lis alibi pendens, the exceptio litis pendentis of the civilians. It bars suits only where the matter in issue is also directly in issue in a previous suit between the same parties for the same relief in a British Indian Court having jurisdiction to grant it; and explains that the pendency of a suit in a foreign Court does not preclude the Courts in British India from trying a suit founded on the same cause of action. It is founded on three English cases: Foster v. Vassall, 3 Atk. 589: Devie v. Lord Brownlow, 2 Dick. 611: Behrens v. Sieveking, 2 My. & Cr. 602.

Res judicata. Section 13 treats of res judicata, a plea founded on the two maxims Nemo debet bis vexari pro eadem causa and Interest rei publicae ut sit finis litium, and a subject of which the importance in a country inhabited by a litigious population is only equalled by the difficulty of dealing with it clearly, concisely and accurately in a legislative enactment.

As res judicata is a plea in bar, not a plea to the jurisdiction, the place of this section may be objected to; but the circumstance that the corresponding section 2 of Act VIII of 1859 stood in the forefront of that Code, and the convenience of having so important a clause in a prominent position seemed in this instance to outweigh considerations of logical arrangement. The principal clause and its first Explanation are founded on the definition in Livingston's code of evidence for the State of Louisiana, § 192. judicata is whatever has been finally decided by a Court of competent jurisdiction-proceeding according to the forms of law-by a valid sentence—on a matter alleged, and either desired or expressly or impliedly confessed by the other; and it is conclusive evidence of that which it decides, between the same parties or those that represent them, litigating for the same thing, under the same title and in the same quality.' But the Indian Code provides that in the former suit the matter in issue must have been not only substantially, but directly in issue. The second, third, fourth and fifth Explanations rest on decisions of English or Indian Courts. But the second Explanation extends to matters which might or ought to have been made ground of attack in the former suit. The third declares that any relief claimed on the plaint, which is not expressly granted by the decree, shall be deemed to have been refused. The fourth declares that a decision is 'final' when it is such as the Court making it could not alter (except on review) on the application of either party or reconsider of its own motion. An appealable decision may be 'final' until the appeal is made. The fifth lays down that when persons litigate bona fide in respect of a private right claimed in common for themselves and others, all persons interested in such right shall be deemed to claim under the litigants. The sixth is taken from Livingston's code, just mentioned, § 198, and should be transferred to the Evidence Act. The section is not exhaustive as to the effect of res iudicata. It does not deal with the case of judgments in rem, nor with that of parties represented by, though not claiming under, the parties to the former suit 1.

Section 14 declares, in general accordance with the rules pre-Foreign vailing in England 2, when a foreign judgment shall not bar a suit judgments. in British India. This section provides by implication that a foreign judgment shall be a bar in certain cases to a suit on the same cause of action, but not to a suit upon the judgment3. Whether such suits will lie in India, when the judgments sued on are made by Courts situate in Native States, has not yet been settled 4. The Madras High Court holds that such suits will lie; while the Bombay High Court infers, from the power given to the Government of India by section 434 to declare that the judgments of Native Courts may be executed as if they had been passed by British Courts, that the Legislature did not intend that suits should be brought on the judgments of Native Courts. It is hard to see how such an inference can fairly be drawn. The Code makes no distinction between the Courts of Native States and other foreign Courts, except that the former Courts are or may be treated more favourably. As regards suits on other foreign judgments, the Indian Courts would follow the English rules, which have recently been stated by Fry J. as follows¹:—

The Courts of England consider the defendant bound-

- (a) Where he is the subject of a foreign country in which the judgment has been obtained:
- (b) Where he was resident in the foreign country when the action began:
- (c) Where the defendant in the character of plaintiff has selected the forum in which he is afterwards sued:
 - (d) Where he has voluntarily appeared:
- (e) Where he has contracted to submit himself to the forum in which the judgment was obtained:
- (f) And possibly, if Becquet v. MacCarthy, 2 B. & Ad. 951, be right, where the defendant has, within the foreign jurisdiction, real estate in respect of which the cause of action arose while he was within that jurisdiction.

Moreover, in a case reported in 2 Mad. 400, Turner C.J. decided the following points:—

- (1) Where a defendant sued in a foreign tribunal takes no objection to the jurisdiction, he cannot afterwards question that jurisdiction.
- (2) Mere irregularity of procedure on the part of a foreign tribunal, which ordinarily proceeds in accordance with the recognised principles of judicial investigation, is not sufficient ground for refusing to give effect to its judgment.
- (3) Where the limitation-law bars the remedy but does not extinguish the right, a foreign judgment in a suit on a contract is not open to the objection that the suit was time-barred in the country where the contract was made.

The judgments of all Courts situate in England, with the exception of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, are 'foreign judgments' within the meaning of the Code; and the Bombay High Court has treated as a foreign judgment the call-order of the Court of Chancery on a contributory of a company registered in England and being wound up under the authority of the latter Court ².

The Limitation Act (Sched. II, art. 117) provides a six-years limitation for suits on foreign judgments.

Chapter II. Of the Place of Suing.

Assuming that his suit can be brought, the next question for a person seeking judicial relief is, to which Court he ought to resort. The Code answers this by declaring (sec. 15) that 'every suit shall be instituted in the Court of the lowest grade competent to try it.' The competence here referred to is determined by the actual value of the plaintiff's claim or its subject-matter (the Suits Valuation Act, VII of 1887, the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act, IX of 1887, the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act, XV of 1882), and the local laws regulating the jurisdiction of the Courts. These laws are now as follows:-

In Bengal, the North-Western Provinces and Assam, Act XII of 1887, secs. 18-25.

In Madras, Act III of 1873, amended by Act XXI of 1885: Madras Reg. IV of 1816, sec. 5.

In Bombay, Act XIV of 1869: Act II of 1864 (Aden): Bom. Act XII of 1866 (Sind).

In the Panjáb, Act XVIII of 1884.

In Oudh, Act XIII of 1879.

In the Central Provinces, Act XVI of 1885.

In Coorg, Reg. II of 1881.

In Ajmer and Merwára, Reg. I of 1877.

Section 16 specifies the suits whose forum is fixed with reference Forum to the subject-matter. Such are suits relating to immoveable pro-depending perty and suits for moveables which have been distrained or attached. subject-But suits to obtain compensation for wrong to immoveable property matter. may be optionally instituted in the Court within whose jurisdiction the defendant resides. Exceptions are made in the cases of suits to obtain relief respecting land where, as in the case of a specific performance of a contract of sale, the relief sought can be obtained by the personal obedience of the defendant. Such suits, as well as suits for compensation for wrongs to immoveable property, may be brought either in the Court which has jurisdiction over the land or in the Court which has jurisdiction over the person of the defendant.

Section 17 deals with the suits which must be instituted where Forum the defendant resides, carries on business, or personally works for depending on defengain, or where the cause of action arose. Where there are several dant's residefendants, only some of whom reside etc. within the local limits of dence etc., the Court's jurisdiction, the suit cannot be instituted in the Court where without either (a) the leave of the Court, or (b) the acquiescence of cause of the non-residents.

Section 18 provides for suits for compensation for wrongs t_0 person or moveable property where the wrong is done in one juris. diction and the defendant resides in another.

Section 19 provides for suits for immoveable property situate in a single district but within the jurisdiction of different Courts, and for the case where the property is situate in different districts. Power is given by section 20 to stay proceedings where all the defendants do not reside within the jurisdiction.

Transfer of suits in subordinate Courts.

Section 25 provides for the transfer by the High Court or District Court of suits pending in a subordinate Court of first instance or of appeal. This applies to suits in Courts of Small Causes which are declared by section 2 to be 'subordinate' to the High Court and District Court.

Chapter III. Of Parties and their Appearances and Acts.

Parties.

Having ascertained the Court to which he must resort, the third question for the person seeking judicial relief is, for and against what parties such relief must be claimed.

The first eight sections of this chapter are taken, with some modifications, from the orders framed in England under the Supreme Court of Judicature Act, 1875, and give a wide latitude as to the persons who may be made parties. Section 30 declares that when there are numerous parties having the same interest in one suit, one or more of them may, with the permission of the Court, sue or be sued, or may defend, in such suit on behalf of all parties so interested. A caste, for instance, may be represented by a group of its members1. Any person on whose behalf a suit is so instituted or defended may apply to the Court to be made a party (sec. 32), and the Court is empowered to give the conduct of the suit to such plaintiff as it thinks fit. A like power exists in England under 15 & 16 Vic. c. 86, s. 42, rule 7. Save upon the application of either party on or before the first hearing, the Court cannot order the name of any party to be struck out. But it may at any time, with or without such application, add parties and order any plaintiff to be made a defendant, or any defendant to be made a plaintiff (sec. 32). It often happens that a nonjoinder or misjoinder is not discovered till after issues are settled and the evidence is gone into; and the Judge should have full power to correct the mistake whenever it is found out. The objections for want of parties, for joinder of parties who have no interest, or for misjoinder, if not taken before the first hearing, will be deemed to have been waived (sec. 34).

Chapter IV. Of the Frame of the Suit.

Section 42 declares that every suit shall as far as practicable be Claims so framed as to afford ground for a final decision upon the subjects ought not to be split. in dispute, and so to prevent further litigation concerning them.

Were the rule otherwise, a man might be sued repeatedly in respect of different parts of the same matter, and conflicting judgments might be pronounced regarding separate portions of the same property, included in the same cause of action. And as the value of the property claimed by the plaint determines the class of judges by which a suit is cognisable and the remedies of the parties in an appeal, a suit might be split up, so that each branch of it should be decided by a judge of a lower class than that by which, with reference to the value of the whole property in litigation, it ought to be decided, and the right of the parties to appeal would be unfairly limited 1."

The suit must include the whole of the claim which the plaintiff is entitled to make in respect of the cause of action upon which he sues; but he may relinquish any portion of his claim in order to bring the suit within the jurisdiction of any Court. If, however, he does so, he cannot afterwards sue in respect of the portion so relinquished. When he is entitled to more than one remedy in respect of the same cause of action, he may sue for all or any of his remedies; but if he omits, except with the leave of the Court obtained before the first hearing, to sue for any of such remedies, he cannot afterwards sue for the remedy so omitted (sec. 43).

After these provisions, the Code contains four sections as to the Joinder of joinder of causes of action and multifariousness, i.e. the joining in causes of action. one suit of several distinct and naturally dissimilar claims upon the same defendant or several defendants2. These sections are taken from the orders framed in England under the Supreme Court of Judicature Act, 1875 (Order xviii, rr. 2 and 5). The rule respecting the claims that may be joined with a suit for the recovery of land places suits to obtain declarations of title to land on the same footing as suits to recover it, and enables a mortgagee to join with either of those suits claims to enforce any of his remedies under the mortgage. This is in accordance with a decision of the Master of the Rolls on the corresponding English rule; see 3 Ch. D. 629: 22 Ch. D. 281. The Code (sec. 44) expressly provides for joining with claims by or against a legal representative, claims which he was personally entitled to, or liable for, jointly with the deceased person whom he represents, e.g. on a promissory note jointly executed by the deceased and the person who becomes his executor.

When causes of action are united, the jurisdiction of the Court as regards the suit depends on the amount or value of the aggregate subject-matter at the date of instituting the suit (sec. 45).

Chapter V. Of the Institution of Suits.

The plaint.

The Code here provides that every suit shall be commenced by plaint, and contains rules as to the language and contents of the plaint, as to its signature and verification, and as to rejecting it, amending it, or returning it for amendment. As to its contents, the Code declares that, if the plaintiff has allowed a set-off or relinquished a portion of his claim, the plaint must show the amount so allowed or relinquished. Where he sues in a representative character, the plaint must show that he has taken the steps necessary to enable him to sue; and if the cause of action arose beyond the period ordinarily allowed for instituting the suit, the plaint must show the ground of exemption from such law (sec. 50).

Copies of plaint.

Concise statements. When the plaint is admitted, section 58 requires the plaintiff to present as many copies of it as there are defendants, unless where the Court, by reason of the length of the plaint, the number of the defendants etc., allows him to present a like number of concise statements of the claim made and the remedy required.

When the plaintiff sues upon a document in his possession, he must produce it in Court when the plaint is presented, and deliver the document or a copy to be filed. The object is to prevent forgery and fraudulent alteration during the trial, and not, as is sometimes supposed, to enable the Court to refer to documents so filed as if they were thereby made evidence without further proof.

Suits on lost bills. Section 61 provides for suits on lost negotiable instruments, and is taken from Act V of 1866, sec. 14, the Indian equivalent of 17 & 18 Vic. c. 125, s. 87=45 & 46 Vic. c. 61, s. 70.

The chapter ends with the provision, sec. 63, that a document which ought to be, but is not, produced when the plaint is presented shall not without the leave of the Court be received in evidence on his behalf at the hearing. But this does not apply to documents handed to a witness merely to refresh his memory, or produced for cross-examination of the defendant's witnesses, or in answer to any case set up by him.

Chapter VI. Of the Issue and Service of Summons.

When the plaint has been registered and the copies or concise statements required by section 58 have been filed, a summons may be issued to each defendant (sec. 64), and if the Court thinks fit, he must appear in person, provided he resides within the local limits of the Court's ordinary jurisdiction, or within fifty or, where there is a railway communication for five-sixths of the distance, two hundred miles from the court-house. The Court determines when issuing the summons whether it shall be for the settlement of issues only or for the final disposal of the suit.

Sections 72-92 contain elaborate provisions as to the service of Service of The object is to make sure, as far as possible, that summons. the summons comes to the knowledge of the defendant. is considered how large a proportion of the suits in British India are decided ex parte owing to the defendant's failure to appear, the importance of this part of the Code can hardly be exaggerated. The Code of 1859, sec. 55, provided that when the defendant could not be found (i.e. when the process-server said that he could not be found), and there was no one else on whom service could be made, the serving officer was to fix a copy of the summons on the outer door of the house in which the defendant was dwelling, but it omitted to say what the effect of this fixing was to be, nor did it take any precautions against the fraud and indolence of process-The new Code provides as a rule that personal service shall be proved by the written acknowledgment of the person served (sec. 79), and where such proof is impossible, that the serving officer should fix a copy of the summons on the defendant's dwelling and return the original with an endorsement stating the circumstances (sec. 80). He is then examined on oath touching his proceedings (sec. 82). And the Court may then order substituted service if it is satisfied that the summons cannot be served in the ordinary way.

In the case of privileged defendants, sections Q1 and Q2 provide Privileged for substituting for a summons a letter sent by post or by a special defendants (88.640, messenger.

Chapter VII. Of the appearance of the parties and consequence of non-appearance.

The Code then lays down rules of procedure in the cases where both parties attend (sec. 96); where the summons has not been served in consequence of the plaintiff's failure to pay the fees for serving it (sec. 97); where neither party appears (secs. 98, 99); where the plaintiff only appears (sec. 100); where the defendant only appears (sec. 102); where the defendant residing out of British India does not appear (sec. 104); where one of several plaintiffs or defendants does not appear (secs. 105, 106). A dismissal for Dismissal default or a decree ex parte is no more than a just consequence of for default.

Decree ex the failure to appear, where it is voluntary; and where it is parte. involuntary, there is a remedy in the powers given to the Court by sections 101, 103 and 108.

The chapter concludes with sections (108, 109) as to the setting aside the decrees passed ex parte against the defendant. No such decree will be set aside without notice to the opposite party.

Chapter VIII. Of Written Statements and Set-off.

Pleadings.

The present Code, like Act VIII of 1859, requires no written pleading except the plaint. It was admitted on all hands that in the large majority of cases coming before the Courts, namely, suits for debt, written pleadings of any other kind are useless. This had been proved in England by the experience of the County Courts and in India by the experience of the Presidency Courts of Small Causes and the military Courts of Request. But in suits relating to immoveable property and in other cases of complexity and difficulty1, it is often convenient to have the written statements of the parties. The Code therefore here permits the parties at any time statements. before or at the first hearing to tender written statements of their respective cases, and the Court may itself at any time require a written statement from any of the parties and receive one for the purpose of answering a statement so required. These statements must not be argumentative (sec. 114), and the Court is empowered to deal with them when they violate this rule or are prolix or irrelevant (sec. 116).

Written

Sections 111, 216 and 221 were intended to contain the Indian law of set-off, or the compensation of one debt for another, and to differ from the present English rules on this subject (Orders xix. r. 3, xxi. r. 17). In England, set-off is not confined to pecuniary claims, and in the case of such claims the power of set-off is not limited to debts. Claims for unliquidated damages may now be set off in all Courts against debts, debts against damages, and damages against damages. But under the Indian Code set-off is confined to suits for the recovery of money, and the following four requirements must be fulfilled:-

- (a) The sum of money claimed to be set-off must be ascertained:
- (b) It must be legally recoverable by the defendant from the plaintiff:
- (c) In such claim both parties must fill the same character as they fill in the plaintiff's suit.
- (d) The amount claimed to be set-off must not exceed the pecuniary limits of the Court's jurisdiction.

If these four requirements are fulfilled, the Court sets-off one debt against another, and such set-off has the same effect as a plaint in a cross-suit, so as to enable the Court to pronounce final judgment in the same suit both on the original and on the cross-claim. But the decisions of the High Courts on this section make it hard to say what the law of India as to set-off is at present. The pleader's lien upon the amount decreed is expressly saved from the effect of set-off. This saving was suggested by Pringle v. Gloag, 10 Chan. Div. 676, affirmed by Order lxv. r. 141.

Chapter IX. Of the Examination of the Parties at the first hearing.

At the first hearing the Court ascertains from the defendant or his pleader whether he admits or denies the allegations of fact made in the plaint, and also ascertains from each party or his pleader whether he admits or denies allegations of fact made in the written statement of the opposite party and not admitted or denied by the party against whom they are made. The Court records such admissions and denials (sec. 117). The Code intentionally omits to provide that allegations of fact in written statements, if not denied, shall be taken to be admitted. Such a provision would have been dangerous in the case of untrained pleaders.

At any hearing the Court may examine orally any party appearing in Court or any companion of his able to answer material questions relating to the suit.

On the corresponding sections of the Draft Code of 1859 the Commissioners observe: 'The object of the first examination is merely to enable the Judge to ascertain what is the matter in dispute between the parties. In the interrogatories which he may put to them for this purpose some allowance must be made for misapprehension on both sides. It is also manifest that statements made at this examination stand on a different footing from evidence given in a trial of fact. After the Judge has once ascertained and recorded the points in dispute, the parties may be examined to them like other witnesses.'

Chapter X. Of Discovery, and on the Admission, Inspection, Production etc. of Documents.

The object in compelling what is called 'discovery' is to pro- Interrogacure an admission of the case made by the plaint, either in aid tories. of proof or to supply the want of it, and to avoid expense 2. The first seven sections of this chapter correspond with the ¹ See Edwards v. Hope, 14 Q. E. D. Discovery, § 2. As to discovery in aid of execution, see sec. 267, ² Wigram, Points in the Law of VOL. II.

English Order xxxi. rules 1-10, from which they were immediately The ultimate source of the practice of putting special interrogatories is, no doubt, the civil law1. The Code here empowers parties at any time to deliver interrogatories in writing But the leave of the Court is always required, there being no exception, as in England, where the plaintiff seeks relief on the ground of fraud or breach of trust. And in deciding on any application for leave the Court should take into account any offer which may be made by the party sought to be interrogated, to deliver particulars, or to make admissions or to produce documents relating to the matter in question (Order xxxi. r. 2). Sections 123, 125, 127 provide for inquiring into the propriety of exhibiting interrogatories; for the costs of improper interrogatories; for making objections to answering interrogatories, and for compelling persons to answer sufficiently. No defendant shall deliver interrogatories for the examination of the plaintiff unless such defendant has already tendered a written statement which has been received and placed on the record. Otherwise the plaintiff would be delayed, without knowing the nature of the defence, until he had answered.

Admission of documents.

As to admission of documents, either party may, not less than ten days before the hearing, require the other party to admit the genuineness of any document material to the suit. The Evidence Act, sec. 58, then applies. The party refusing to give the admission is chargeable with the expense of proving the document, unless the Court thinks there were good reasons for the refusal (sec. 128). A similar clause is contained in the Common Law Procedure Act, 15 & 16 Vic. c. 76, secs. 117, 118. But the Code requires the demand for admission to be served through the Court.

Discovery of documents. Discovery is not confined to facts resting merely in the knowledge of the defendant. The Court is empowered at any time during the pendency of the suit to order discovery of documents relating to any matter in question in the suit; but a party must apply for a like order, if at all, before the first hearing (sec. 129). The Court may also at any time compel production of documents relating to any such matter. The latter power, which goes far beyond the former practice of the Court of Chancery², was suggested by Order xxxi. rule 11, under the Judicature Act. The Indian Courts will probably not compel the defendant to produce documents relating solely to his title.

Sections 131, 132, 133 provide for inspecting and copying of Inspection specified documents not relating solely to the party's own title.

When any discovery or inspection is objected to, and the Court is satisfied that the right to such discovery or inspection depends on the determination of any question in dispute in the suit, section 135 (taken from the English Order xxxi. rule 19) empowers the Court to order that question to be first determined.

Whoever disobeys any order to answer interrogatories, or for discovery or inspection, which has been served personally upon him, is made by section 136 guilty of an offence under the Penal Code. scc. 188. He is also liable, if a plaintiff, to have his suit dismissed: if a defendant, to be placed in the same position as if he had not defended.

Section 137 enables the Court of its own accord, or on the Power to application of a party, to send for the records of any other suit send for or proceeding and to inspect the same. This was originally taken from the draft code of Messrs Mills and Harington. application must be supported by an affidavit showing either that the applicant cannot without unreasonable delay or expense obtain an authenticated copy or that the production of the original is necessary for the ends of justice. To stop a practice which existed in the Mufassal, the Code here declares that the power to send for records shall not enable the Court to use in evidence any document which would be inadmissible in the suit.

In order to preclude questions on appeal as to whether a document was in evidence or not, section 141 provides that no document shall be placed on the record unless it has been regularly proved or admitted.

The provisions in this chapter as to documents apply, so far as Material may be, to all other material objects producible as evidence (sec. objects. 145).

The practice as to the admission of documents has recently been Notice to extended in England to the admission of certain facts; and the admit facts. Code should provide, in accordance with the English Order xxxii. r. 4, that if it be made to appear to the Judge that one of the parties was, a reasonable time before the first hearing, required in writing to admit any specific fact, and without reasonable cause refused to do so, the Court should either disallow to such party or order him to pay (as the case may be) the costs incurred in consequence of such refusal. Notice to admit facts would in many cases supersede interrogatories and thus save expense and delay.

Chapter XI. Of the Settlement of Issues.

Settling issues.

In the course of administering justice between litigants there are two successive objects,—to ascertain the subject for decision, and to decide ¹. The Code having provided for each of the parties stating his own case, now provides for collecting, from the opposition of their statements, the points of the legal controversy. It explains the term 'issues,' and then requires the Court, at the first hearing of the suit,

- (a) to read the plaint and written statements (if any);
- (b) to examine the parties where necessary, e.g. where the facts are not sufficiently stated in the plaint (6 Ben. 274);
- (c) to ascertain upon what material points of fact or of law the parties are at variance; and
- (d) to frame and record the issues on which the right decision of the case appears to depend—not those which the parties may themselves have selected (2 Bom. H. C. 164).

The Code also directs that when issues both of fact and of law arise in the same suit and the Court thinks that the case may be disposed of on the issues of law only, the issues of law shall be tried first. The object of this is to save expense and to prevent cases being remanded for trial of issues of fact which in the result prove wholly irrelevant. The Court itself frames the issues, (1) from the allegations made on oath by the parties or their friends, or made by their pleaders; (2) from allegations made in the plaint, the written statements, or in answer to interrogatories; and (3) from the contents of documents produced by either party.

Here the Indian differs importantly from the English practice, which is thus prescribed by Order XXXIII, r. 1: 'Where in any cause or matter it appears to the Court or a Judge that the issues of fact in dispute are not sufficiently defined the parties may be directed to prepare issues, and such issues shall, if the parties differ, be settled by the Court or a Judge.' For the purpose of framing the issues correctly, the Court may compel the attendance of witnesses and the production of documents. The Court is empowered to amend, add, and, at any time before passing the decree, strike out issues.

Issues stated by parties. When the parties are agreed as to the question of fact or of law to be decided, they may state it in the form of an issue and agree in writing to be bound by the finding of the Court (sec. 150, 151). The rules on this head correspond with sections 142, 143 of the Code of 1859, which were taken, with some alterations, from the Common Law Procedure Act, 1852, sections 42-45, reproduced in the present Order xxxiv. rr. 9-12.

Charter XII. Disposal of the Suit at first hearing.

If at the first hearing it appears that the parties are not at Judgment issue on any question of law or of fact, the Court may at once pro- at first nounce judgment; and where there are several defendants, and any one of them is not at issue with the plaintiff, the Court may at once pronounce judgment for, or against him, and the suit proceeds only against the other defendants. But in by far the greater number of suits the whole matter in dispute may be resolved into one or more simple issues, on which the parties may at once go to trial. The Code therefore provides that when the parties are at issue, and issues have been framed by the Court, and the Court is satisfied that no further argument or evidence than the parties can at once supply is required, the Court may determine such issues, and pronounce judgment (sec. 154).

When the summons has been issued for the final disposal of the suit and either party fails to produce his evidence, the Court may either pronounce judgment at once, or frame and record issues and then adjourn the suit for the production of the evidence necessary for deciding those issues (sec. 155).

Charter XIII. Of Adjournments.

The Court may, if sufficient cause be shown', at any stage of the Power to suit, grant time to the parties, and adjourn the hearing, making adjourn. such order as it thinks fit with respect to the costs of adjournment. But great encouragement had been given to perjury and subordination of perjury, great delays, expense and inconvenience had been caused, in consequence of the facilities formerly enjoyed of obtaining adjournments, especially in the hearing of evidence. The Code therefore provides (sec. 156) that when the hearing of evidence has once begun, the hearing of the suit shall be continued from day to day until all the witnesses in attendance have been examined, unless the Court finds the adjournment to be necessary for reasons recorded by the Judge with his own hand.

Chapter XIV. Of the summoning and attending of Witnesses.

The parties may, after the summons has been delivered for Summonses service on the defendant, obtain summonses to persons whose attendance is required either to give evidence or to produce documents; but in all such cases the applicant must, before the summons is granted, pay into court the travelling and other expenses of the person to be summoned. These provisions derive ultimately from Act XIX of 1853, sec. 12. The Court issues summonses as a matter of course, except where there is reason to think they are applied for merely to obstruct the course of justice 1, or the application is made so late that the witness could not possibly appear before the applicant's case is closed 2.

When a witness abscords, his property may be attached; but the serving-officer must previously be examined on oath touching the non-service, and if the witness appears, the attachment may be withdrawn. Where a witness on whom a summons has been served disobeys the summons, the Court may sentence him to fine not exceeding rs. 500. He is also liable, when personal service has been made, to a civil suit for damages ³.

Limit of distance.

No witness is bound to attend in person unless he resides (a) within the local limits of the ordinary jurisdiction of the Court, or (b) without such limits and at a place less than fifty or, when there is railway communication for five-sixths of the distance, two hundred miles from the Court-house. It is obvious that in a country nearly as large as Europe there must be some limit beyond which witnesses should not be required to travel even by railway.

Lunatic witnesses.

No person known to be of unsound mind should be summoned as a witness without the previous consent of the Court. Act II of 1855, sec. 14, contained a rule to this effect. But it was repealed by the Evidence Act of 1872, and nothing was put in its place.

Refusal to give evidence.

Parties.

If any party to a suit present in court refuses without lawful excuse when required by the Court to give evidence or produce documents, the Court may pass a decree against him, or make any order as to the suit that it thinks fit; and whenever any party to a suit is summoned to give evidence or produce a document, the rules as to witnesses contained in the Code apply to him. It is no longer necessary to serve him with notice to show cause why he should not attend.

Chapter XV. Of the hearing of the Suit and examination of Witnesses.

The other party then states his case and produces his evidence, if any, and the party beginning, if he chooses, replies.

The witnesses must be examined orally in open court in the Examinapresence and under the personal direction and superintendence of tion of witthe Judge (sec. 181), but this of course is subject to the provisions contained in section 192, chapter XVI and section 383; and in appealable cases the evidence is taken down in writing in the language of the Court in the form of a narrative, read over in the presence of the Judge and of the witness, and also in the presence of the parties or their pleaders. The Judge then corrects the narrative, if necessary, and signs it (sec. 182). The object of these provisions, as of the corresponding section (172) of the Code of 1859, is to relieve the administration of justice in India of one of its chief scandals, the careless and perfunctory method of taking evidence 2. Another of these scandals is the constant production of inadmissible evidence, and the Code should contain a clause like that in section 298 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, empowering the Judge to prevent the production of such evidence, whether it is or is not objected to by the parties.

When English is not the language of the Court, but the parties do Taking not object to have such evidence as is given in English taken down down in that language, the Judge may so take it down in his own hand English. (sec. 185). This provision saves expense in translating, and gives the appellate Judge the same material as the Judge of first instance.

In unappealable cases, the Judge, as the examination of each Memoranwitness proceeds, makes with his own hand a memorandum of the dum. substance of the deposition; or, when he is unable to do so, causes the memorandum to be made in writing from his dictation in open Court (sec. 189).

It often happens in India that a Judge who has partly heard Transfer of a case is unable to decide it in consequence of being transferred to Judge. another district. The Code of 1859 made no provision for this case, and it was consequently held that the Judge's successor was bound to recall and examine the witnesses de novo, unless the parties consented to his proceeding upon the evidence already recorded. The present Code therefore provides that when the Judge taking down any evidence is removed from the Court before the conclusion of the suit, his successor may deal with the evidence as if he himself had taken it down (sec. 191).

Section 192 provides for the examination of a witness de bene esse. The Court may at any stage of the suit recall and re-examine any witness who has not departed (sec. 193).

Oaths and affirmations. The Code does not provide that witnesses shall give their evidence on oath or affirmation. Act X of 1873, sec. 5, however, declares that oaths or affirmations shall be made by all witnesses, that is, all persons who may lawfully be examined or give or be required to give evidence by or before any Court or person having by law or consent of parties to examine such persons or to receive evidence. Where the witness is a Hindú or Muhammadan, or has an objection to making an oath, he makes, instead, an affirmation. For intentionally giving false evidence, witnesses are punishable under the Penal Code, sec. 193.

Protection of witnesses. The Code is also silent as to the protection of witnesses from the liability to which persons are ordinarily subject for defamatory statements. This is left to be dealt with by the Penal Code, secs. 52 and 499, ninth exception 1. Under Indian legislation a witness' privilege is much less extensive than under the English law 2. But the Calcutta High Court has ruled (and the Judicial Committee has approved of the ruling) that witnesses who have given evidence cannot be sued for damages in respect thereof 3. As to their exemption from arrest under civil process, see infra, section 642.

Chapter XVI. Of Affidavits.

Power to order facts to be proved by affidavit, This chapter empowers the Court at any time, for sufficient reason, to order any particular fact to be proved by affidavit. This instrument was formerly unknown in the Mufussal. In uncontested cases and in applications of an urgent and provisional character the affidavit is a useful mode of taking evidence. And when sifted by cross-examination, as it is always liable to be (sec. 195), it is not more likely to mislead than oral evidence. 'In point of fact,' as Mr. Hobhouse said', 'one who cross-examines on affidavits has a considerable advantage, in that his enemy has written a book, and a book which he has had time to study before he comes to cross-examine.' The Code therefore provides that evidence may be given by affidavit upon any application; indicates the matters to which affidavits should be confined, and specifies the officers by whom the oaths of declarants may be administered. The attendance of declarants for cross-examination must be in ('ourt, unless they are exempt under section 640 or 641, or the Oat out otherwise directs. The costs of every affidavit containing affirimpertinent matter are, as a rule, paid by the party producing tionthe same (sec. 196); but when such matter is small in amount, the Court may exempt him from such costs.

The Evidence Act does not apply to affidavits; and as answers to interrogatories are affidavits (4 Cal. 836), it seems also inapplicable to such answers. The Code, sec. 647, empowers the High Court to make rules for the admission, in miscellaneous proceedings, of affidavits as evidence. But there is no such power in the case of suits and appeals.

The Code should have laid down some rules as to the form of an Proaffidavit, e.g. that it should be drawn up in the first person and divided of winto paragraphs numbered consecutively, and each, as nearly as may ness be, confined to a distinct portion of the subject: that it should state the description and true place of abode of the deponent, etc.

Chapter XVII. Of Judgment and Decree.

After the oral evidence has been taken, the documentary evidence (if any) produced, and the parties heard, the Court pronounces a written judgment either at once or on some future day of which due notice must be given (sec. 198). The judgment is dated and signed by the Judge in open court at the time of Pow pronouncing it, and cannot be altered or added to save to ordecorrect verbal errors, or to supply some accidental defects, not fact affecting a material part of the case, or on review (sec. 202). The programments of the Courts of Small Causes, from which there is no appeal, need not contain more than the points for determination, and the decision thereupon. The judgments of all other Courts must contain a concise statement of the case, the points for determination, the decision thereon, and the reasons for such decision (sec. 203): otherwise the appellate Court would not have the assistance it is entitled to expect from the Court below. Every judgment must direct by whom the costs of each party must be paid, and whether in whole or in what part or proportion (sec. 219). Where issues have been framed, the Court must, as a rule, state its finding or decision, with the reasons thereof, upon each separate issue (sec. 204).

The decree. The decree follows the judgment, and the Code should have contained an express provision to this effect. The decree bears date the day on which the judgment was pronounced. It must agree with the judgment, it states the number of the suit, the names and description of the parties, the particulars of the claim, the relief granted, or other determination of the suit, and, lastly, the amount of costs incurred, and by whom and in what proportion such costs are to be paid.

Alteration of decree.

Whether a decree could be altered by consent of parties was a question on which opinions conflicted. Section 210 of the Code enables the Court, after passing a decree for payment of money, on the application of the judgment-debtor, and with the consent of the decree-holder, to order that the money be paid by instalments on such terms as it thinks fit; and where any decree is at variance with the judgment, or contains any clerical or arithmetical error, sec. 206 enables the Court, on the motion of any party, to amend the decree. But, save as provided by sections 206 and 210, no decree can be altered at the request of parties.

The Code then gives special rules as to the decrees in suits for immoveable property (secs. 207 and 211); for moveable property (sec. 208); for money due to the plaintiff (secs. 209 and 210); for mesne profits (sec. 212); for the administration of property under the decree of the Court (sec. 213); to enforce a right of pre-emption (sec. 214); for dissolution of partnership (sec. 215); for an account between principal and agent (sec. 215A); and, lastly, when a set-off has been allowed (sec. 216).

Chapter XVIII. Of Costs.

Power to give costs.

The Court has full power to give and apportion costs of every application and suit in any manner it thinks fit², and may exercise this power even where it has no jurisdiction to try the case. This discretion is restricted by the special rules in ss. 100, 123, 366, 373, 379, 452, and 532. Wherever the Court directs that the costs shall not follow the event,—i. e. shall not be paid to the successful litigant,—the Court must state its reasons in writing. Every order relating to costs which does not form part of a decree may be executed as if it were a decree for money (sec. 220). The Court may direct that the costs payable to A by B shall be set-off against a sum admitted or found to be due from A to B (sec. 221). Lastly, the Court may give interest on costs at any rate not exceeding six per cent., and may direct that costs with or without interest be paid out of or charged upon the subject-matter of the suit.

As to appealing on the subject of costs, see Ben. F. B. 496:

6 Ben. 581: 8 Cal. 91: 12 Cal. 271. The rule in Calcutta seems Appealing to be that when costs form part of a decree or order, and the decree on subject or order is appealable, the part of it relating to costs is appealable also, and to the same extent as the decree or order itself. The Code designedly omits to provide when alone decisions on this subject shall be appealable. To do so would, it was thought, deprive the appellate Courts of a power often usefully exercised in controlling the discretion of the Courts of first instance. The cases of a next friend and a guardian ad litem ordered to pay costs are specially provided for by sec. 588, cl. (22).

Chapter XIX. Of the Execution of Decrees.

The matter of this long and important chapter is distributed under nine heads, namely, (A) Courts by which decrees may be executed, (B) application for execution, (C) staying execution, (D) questions for Court executing decree, (E) the mode of executing decrees, (F) attachment of property, (G) sale and delivery of property. (H) resistance to execution, and (I) arrest and imprisonment.

(A) Courts by which decrees may be executed. A decree may be executed either by the Court which passed it or by the Court to which it is sent for execution; and the Code (secs. 223-228) prescribes a procedure, deriving originally from Act XXXIII of 1852, when a Applica-Court desires that its own decree shall be executed by another Court. tion for

- (B) Application for execution. The Court does not execute its decree unless and until the successful party applies to it for Under the Code of 1850 a decree was treated by many creditors as a rather eligible mode of investing their money. The interest was good and the security very good. It was true that under the Limitation Act the creditor could not enforce his decree if three years had elapsed since some step taken to enforce it; but the only result of that provision was that some formal step was taken every three years, and, practically, the decree ran on unsatisfied and hanging over the debtor it might be for fifty years The Code checks this practice by declaring (sec. 230) in substance that a decree shall not remain in force for more than twelve years, unless the creditor has been prevented from reaping its fruits by some fraud or force on the part of the judgment-debtor. Rules are then provided for the case of a holder of a decree desiring to enforce it, and for the special cases of applications, 1. by a joint decree-holder, 2. by the transferee of a decree, and, 3. when the judgment-debtor dies before execution.
- (C) Staying execution. The Code (sec. 239) then enables Staying the Court to which a decree has been sent for execution under execution.

section 223 to stay upon sufficient cause execution for a reasonable time, and empowers it to require security from or impose conditions upon the judgment-debtor. These provisions correspond with the old proceeding in England by audita querela, whereby the judgment-debtor might prevent execution on the ground of some matter of defence which there was no opportunity of raising in the original action. See now Order xlii. r. 27.

Questions for Court executing decree.

Mode of executing decrees.

- (D) Questions for Court executing decree. The Code (sec. 244) then declares that certain questions relating to mesne profits, interest, execution, discharge, or satisfaction shall be determined by the Court executing the decree, and not by separate suit.
- (E) The mode of executing decrees. The Code then provides a procedure on receiving and admitting applications for the execution of decrees (sec. 245); and deals with the cases where there are cross-decrees between the same parties (sec. 246); and cross-claims under the same decree (sec. 247); where the decree is against the representative of the deceased for money; where the decree is executed against a surety (sec. 253); where the decree is for money (sec. 254); or for mesne profits (sec. 255); for a specific moveable (sec. 250); for specific performance or restitution of conjugal rights (sec. 260); for the execution of conveyances or endorsement of negotiable instruments (secs. 261, 262); for immoveable property (secs. 263, 264), first, where the property is not in the occupancy of raivats or other persons entitled to occupy the same, and, secondly, where, as is usually the case in India, the property is in the occupancy of persons having a legal right of occupancy so long as they pay their rents according to established rates. Provision is, lastly, made for the partition of separate possession of a share of an undivided estate paying revenue to Government (sec. 265).

Attachment of property.

- (F) Attachment of property. The Code then describes the kinds of property liable to attachment and sale in execution of a decree. It follows the Mesne Process Act in authorising the attachment and sale of property over which the judgment-debtor has a power which he may exercise for his own benefit. And it follows Act VI of 1855, sec. 1. cl. 1, in declaring that trust property may be taken in execution of a decree against the beneficiary. It exempts from attachment twelve classes of articles,
- 1 Before 1855 trust property could not be taken in execution of a judgment of the Supreme Court. 'There can hardly' (write the Commissioners, First Report, p. 65) 'be said to be any fixed practice on this subject in the Company's Courts. But we have reason to think that some Judges of the Company's Courts might hesitate to put a decree in execution against property which had been formally vested by regular deeds in trustees for the benefit of the defendant.'

such as the necessary wearing apparel of the judgment-debtor, his wife, and children; the salary of a public officer or railway servant, where it does not exceed rs. 20 a month, and is therefore absolutely necessary to enable him to live and perform his duties; the tools of artisans; implements of husbandry and cattle kept bona fide for agricultural purposes 1; and the wages of labourers and domestic servants (sec. 266). Seamen's wages are exempted by the Merchant Shipping Act, 1854, 17 & 18 Vic. c. 104, sec. 233. 'The principle is that it is against public policy to make a man compulsorily idle either by taking away the tools which are necessary to enable him to earn his living, or by anticipating the wages of his daily labour and so destroying all motive for self-exertion.'

The Court is empowered to summon and examine the judgment- Discovery debtor and any other person as to any property liable to be seized in aid of execution. in satisfaction of the decree (sec. 267). This corresponds with the English rule on discovery in aid of execution (Order xlii. r. 32).

Special provisions are made for the attachment of debts, shares, Attachand other moveable property not in the judgment-debtor's pos-ment of session (sec. 268). 'Debts' here, like 'debts' in sec. 266, includes all pecuniary claims, whether accruing or actually owing, over which the Courts of British India have jurisdiction2, with the following exceptions: -conditional debts, Howell v. Metropolitan District Ry. Co., 19 Ch. D. 508; debts due to the judgment-debtor and another not a party to the judgment, Macdonald v. Tacquah Gold Mining Company, 53 L. J., Q. B. 376, and the claims exempted by the proviso to section 266, clauses (e), (y), (h), (i) and (j).

Thus the following debts have been held to be attachable: interest on railway stock guaranteed by one company to another, Bouch v. Sevenoaks Railway, 4 Ex. D. 133: and money in the hands of (1) the official liquidator of a company against which judgment has been obtained, Ex p. Turner, 2 D. F. & J. 354; (2) a re-

¹ There was a similar exemption of cattle in a Bombay Regulation (4 of 1827, sec. 62, cl. 2), suggested by the statute which gave the writ of elegit (13 Edw. I. c. 18), or, more likely, by Blackstone's account of that writ. Mr. Thorburn has recently proposed that grain and straw sufficient to keep the cultivator till the next following harvest should also be exempted. This property in the debtor's possession (sec. 269); of negotiable instruments (sec. 270); of property in dwelling-houses and zanánas (sec. 271); of property deposited in Court or with a public officer (sec. 272); of decrees (sec. 273); of immoveable property (sec. 274).

Attachment in execution of decrees of several Courts.

Property not in the custody of any Court is sometimes attached in execution of decrees of more Courts than one. In such cases the Code provides (sec. 285) that the Court to receive or realise such property shall be the Court of highest grade, or, where the Courts are of equal rank, the Court under whose decree the property was first attached.

General attachment.

The Code of 1859 (sec. 214) empowered the Courts to order a general attachment of the debtor's moveable property, wherever it might be found. This afforded facilities for oppression, and it was said by Mr. Cockerell in Council that 'an unscrupulous decree-holder armed with a warrant for the general attachment of his debtor's property, used it as a sort of roving commission to plunder his enemies by pouncing upon their property on the plea that, though in their possession, it actually belonged to his judgment-debtor1.' The Code omits this provision. Section 267 seems to do all that is needed.

Sale and delivery of property.

(G) Of sale and delivery of property. This branch of the subject is subdivided into (a) general rules; (b) rules as to moveable property; (c) rules as to immoveable property.

Proclama-

Of the general rules the most important are those contained tion of sale. in sections 287, 291 and 294. Section 287 requires that the proclamation of sale shall specify, not only the property to be sold, but also the revenue and incumbrances (if any) to which it is liable, the amount for the recovery of which the sale is ordered, and every other thing material for the purchaser to know. purpose of ascertaining the matters to be so specified, the Court is empowered to summon and examine such persons as it thinks necessary.

Postponement of sale.

Section 291 enables the Court to adjourn the sale where an immediate sale is likely to cause undue injury to the judgment-debtor and the postponement will not seriously prejudice the decreeholder 2.

Decreeholder not Section 294 declares that no holder of a decree in execution of ² 20 Suth. 130. ¹ Proceedings, 1876, p. 253.

which property is sold shall, without the express permission of to purthe Court, bid for or purchase the property.

The Code of 1859 provided (sec. 270) that the person who Rateable first attached property should be the first to be paid out of it division of even as against another creditor who had obtained a prior decree. This provision often led to unseemly scrambles for priority; and it was frequently matter of accident, or of favour from the ministerial officers of the Court, whether one of several decree-holders. all equally entitled, should be paid in full to the detriment of the others. The Select Committee therefore decided that there should be a rateable division among all the judgment-creditors up to the point when it becomes inconvenient to delay dealing with the assets; and section 205 accordingly declares that, whenever assets are realised in execution of a decree, and more persons than one have previously applied for execution of money-decrees against the judgment-debtor and have not been satisfied, the assets shall be divided rateably among them. But this general rule is qualified in cases where the property is subject to a mortgage or charge. And it is only a rule of procedure, not affecting the civil rights of the parties1.

The rules as to moveable property deal specially with the sale Moveable and transfer of negotiable instruments and shares in public com- property. panies (secs. 296, 301, 302) and with the delivery of property to which the judgment-debtor is entitled subject to a lien (sec. 300). In the case of any property not specially provided for the Court may make a vesting order (sec. 303).

As to immoveable property, the Code provides that any Court Immoveother than a Court of Small Causes may order such property to able property be sold in execution (sec. 304). When the property is a share of undivided land, and two or more persons, one of whom is a co-sharer, respectively advance the same sum at any bidding, such bidding is deemed the bidding of the co-sharer (sec. 310). The object of this is not only to keep out strangers, but to prevent sales from being damped by the subsequent action of cosharers. The decree-holder may apply to have a sale set aside on the ground of material irregularity. No order to set aside a sale is made unless both judgment-debtor and decree-holder have had an opportunity of being heard (sec. 313). The title to the property vests in the purchaser, not from the date of the attachment, but from that of the confirmation of the sale. attachment may have been months or years before the purchase, and its effect is, not to deprive the judgment-debtor of the ownership of the property, but to place the property in custodia legis, and to prevent the defendant dealing with it to the plaintiff's prejudice. The purchaser is a stranger to the property till the date of his purchase, and there is no reason why he should be entitled to the rents and profits before that date.

Transfer to collector of decrees for sale of land.

The Code of 1859 contained no check upon the unreserved and unqualified sale of the land of the debtor who could not pay There was indeed one section (248) which provided that in certain circumstances the execution of a decree might be handed over to a collector. Whether it was intended to give the collector any discretionary power in such cases may be doubted; but at all events, if this was intended, the intention was not clearly expressed and the Courts had held that the collector was only a ministerial officer for carrying its decrees into effect. The result was that sales had gone on in a rigid mechanical way without even the check of an upset price, or of a power of adjourning the sale when there were few bidders, and with the common result that the property was bought in by the judgment-creditor himself at a great under-value 1. The present Code therefore not only provides. as we have seen, for adjourning the sale and preventing the decreeholder from buying; it also empowers the Local Governments to declare that, in any local area, the execution of decrees for sale of immoveable property shall be transferred to the collector, and to prescribe rules for the transmission, execution and re-transmission of such decrees (sec. 320). When the execution of a decree has been so transferred, the collector may (a) postpone the sale so as to enable the judgment-debtor to raise the amount, or (b) raise the amount by letting or mortgaging the whole or part of the property, or (c) sell the property or so much thereof as may be necessary. Twelve sections (secs. 322-325 c) provide a procedure for the collector in exercise of this jurisdiction.

Resistance to execution. (H) Of resistance to execution. The Code here deals with the cases where resistance to the execution of a decree for the possession of property is caused by the judgment-debtor, or at his instigation (secs. 329, 330); by a claimant in good faith other than the judgment-debtor (sec. 331); where the person dispossessed is not the judgment-debtor and disputes the right of the decree-holder to be put into possession (sec. 332); where the purchaser of any immoveable property sold in execution is resisted by the judgment-debtor or by some claimant in good faith (secs. 334, 335).

(I) Of arrest and imprisonment. The Code then provides for Arrest and the arrest of judgment-debtors and their imprisonment in the civil imprisongaol. The Code here prohibits the breaking open of outer doors of judgmentdwelling-houses for the purpose of making arrests, and makes due debtors. provision regarding the entry into zanánas. In the case of a decree for money when the debtor pays the amount of the decree and the costs of the arrest he is at once released. He is also released if he furnish sufficient security that he will appear when called upon and that he will within one month apply to be declared an insolvent (sec. 336). The State defrays the cost of maintaining criminal prisoners while in jail; but in civil cases, no judgment-Subsistdebtor is arrested unless the decree-holder pays into Court such sum ence-allowance. as the Judge thinks sufficient for the subsistence of the judgmentdebtor from his arrest until he can be brought before the Court. When he is committed to gaol, the Court fixes a monthly allowance for his subsistence to be supplied by the party on whose application the decree has been executed (sec. 339), and the judgment-debtor will be discharged on failure to pay the allowance (sec. 341, cl. d).

Under the Code of 1859 a judgment-debtor might be imprisoned Imprisonfor two years if the debt exceeded rs. 500, six months if it exceeded ment for debt. rs. 50, and three months if it was rs. 50 or less. The Select Committee was strongly urged to abolish imprisonment altogether. Though it did not see its way to such a change, it greatly shortened those terms; and section 342 declares that no person shall be imprisoned in execution of a decree for more than six months, or if the decree be for payment of a sum not exceeding 50 rs., for more than six weeks. It is desirable that the Indian legislature should follow the example of almost every civilised country in the world 1, and get rid altogether of imprisonment for debt, which J. S. Mill called a barbarous expedient of a rude age, 'repugnant to justice as well as to humanity.' Moreover, in India, the power to imprison for debt sometimes leads to gross abuses. It was stated by the Dekkhan Raiyats Commission—and the statement when quoted in the Viceregal Council² was not contradicted—that 'the terror of being put into a prison, even for debt, was so extraordinary and so unreasonable among the Native population, that they were willing to make any sacrifices, even in some recorded instances to the extent of surrendering their wives and to more than fifty dollars, and his property is insufficient to satisfy the execution.

daughters to the creditor for immoral purposes, rather than be sent to jail; and further, that it led to absolute slavery, and also to the execution of fresh bonds upon any terms whatever.'

All persons attested for and belonging to Her Majesty's Indian Army are exempt from liability to be arrested for debt 1; and a soldier of Her Majesty's European forces while serving as such is similarly exempt, unless the decree is for a sum exceeding £30 exclusive of costs 2.

Chapter XX. Of Insolvent Judgment-debtors.

The Code of 1850 contained the germ, but only the germ, of an insolvent law. It provided in sec. 271 that when a sale took place under a decree the proceeds should first be applied in paving the holder of that decree and then go rateably and without any priority among the other decree-holders. It then declared that an arrested debtor might apply for discharge on giving up all his property; that if the Court discharged him, his person was not to be arrested again under the same decree; and that the decreeholder was to be paid out of the proceeds of his property. But his person was not protected as against any debt other than that for which he had been arrested; his property was not protected at all; and the Court was not told what to do with his property after paying the decree-holder. These provisions were but little used, and indeed there was small inducement to the debtor to avail himself of them 8. An insolvent law, if possible more imperfect, was provided for the Panjáb by Act IV of 1872, secs. 24-31.

Chapter XX of the Code of 1882 contains a simple but complete procedure in insolvency, adapted to the provincial Courts⁴. Any judgment-debtor arrested or imprisoned in execution of a decree for money (which includes a decree for damages), or against whose property an order of attachment has been made in execution of such a decree, may apply to the District Court for a declaration of insolvency. Any

The Governor General, the Governors of Madras and Bombay, the members of their respective councils, the Lieutenant Governor of Bengal and the Judges of the High Courts are exempt from arrest by order of the Presidency Small Cause Courts (Act XV of 1882, sec. 93). And the new Provincial Small Cause Courts Act, IX of 1887 (section 15 and sched II, clauses I and 2), excepts from the cognisance of these Courts suits in which such orders could be made.

holder of such a decree may also apply that the judgment-debtor may be declared an insolvent. The application sets forth, amongst other things, the particulars of the debtor's property, the place in which it is to be found, his willingness to put it at the disposal of the Court, the particulars of all pecuniary claims against him, and the names and residences of his creditors. The Court fixes a day for hearing the application, and causes a copy to be served on the creditors, or, where the applicant is the decreeholder, on the judgment-debtor. On the day so fixed the Court examines the judgment-debtor as to his then circumstances and as to his future means of payment, and hears the creditors in opposition to his discharge. If the Court is satisfied that the statements in the application are substantially true, and that the debtor has not with intent to defraud his creditors concealed or transferred any part of his property since the institution of the suit in which was passed the decree in execution of which he was arrested or imprisoned, that he has not recklessly contracted debts or given an unfair preference, and that he has not committed any other act of bad faith regarding the matter of the application, the Court may declare him to be an insolvent, and may either discharge him, or appoint a receiver of his property. The creditors then prove their debts: the Court frames a schedule of such persons and debts; and the declaration of insolvency is deemed to be a decree in favour of each creditor for his debt. a partner in an insolvent firm is not entitled to prove in competition with its creditors. The order appointing a receiver vests in him all the insolvent's property, except necessary wearing apparel, and other things exempted from attachment and sale in execution of a decree.

The receiver then gives security and collects the assets, and on Discharge his certifying that the insolvent has placed him in possession of insolvent thereof, the Court may discharge the insolvent on such conditions as it thinks fit (sec. 355). The receiver then proceeds to convert Duty of the property into money, and to pay thereout (1) debts etc. receiver. due by the insolvent to Government, (2) the decree-holder's costs, and (3) debts secured by mortgage of the insolvent's property. He then distributes the balance among the scheduled creditors rateably according to the amounts of their respective debts 1, and he retains as remuneration a commission to be fixed by the Court not exceeding five per cent. on the amount of the balance distributed. In the case of a large balance, a commission of three or even of two per cent. is sufficient. The receiver, lastly, delivers the surplus, if any, to the insolvent or his legal representative.

As to calls due from insolvent contributories, see Act VI of 1882, secs. 125, 127, 144 (e).

An insolvent when discharged cannot be arrested or imprisoned on account of any of the scheduled debts; but his property, except what is vested in the receiver and except the particulars exempted from attachment and sale, is liable to attachment and sale, until the debts due to the scheduled creditors are satisfied to the extent of one-third, or until the expiry of twelve years from the date of the order of discharge (sec. 357). When the amount of the scheduled debts is only rs. 200 or less, the Court may declare the insolvent absolved from further liability. A similar declaration must be made after the scheduled debts have been satisfied to the extent of one-third, or after the expiry of twelve years from the order of discharge.

In the case of a dishonest applicant for a declaration the Court must, if any of his creditors so require, sentence the applicant to imprisonment for a term not exceeding a year, or it may, if it thinks fit, send him to the Magistrate to be dealt with according to law.

The foregoing provisions are intended only for natural persons. For the case of an insolvent company provision is made by Act VI of 1882.

PART II. OF INCIDENTAL PROCEEDINGS.

The Code here deals with the following subjects: the death, marriage and insolvency of parties (secs. 361-372): the withdrawal and adjustment of suits (secs. 373-375); payment into Court (secs. 376-379); requiring security for costs (secs. 380-382), and issuing commissions (secs. 383-396).

Death, marriage, and insolvency of parties. The rules as to the procedure in suits when a party dies, marries, or becomes insolvent were originally taken, with some modifications, from the Common Law Procedure Act, 1854 (15 & 16 Vic. c. 76); and see Order xvii. r. 1. The Code does not here provide that suits shall not become defective by the assignment, creation or a devolution of any estate or title pendente lite. But see as to such assignments the Transfer of Property Act, sec. 52¹: Seear v. Lawson², and Kino v. Rudkin³.

Withdrawal and adjustment of suits.

The rules as to withdrawal of suits apply to suits at any stage, whether in the original or appellate Courts, and even to proceedings in execution 4. They correspond with the English Order (xxvi) as to discontinuance. But though the Code allows the plaintiff to abandon part of his claim, it does not, as it ought, permit him to discontinue his suit against one or more of the defendants, while continuing his suit against the rest. The Code is also defective in not providing for giving to the defendant notice of the plaintiff's withdrawal or abandonment 1, so that the defendant may show cause why the requisite permission should not be granted. It should also provide here for striking out, on the application of the defendant. the whole or any part of his alleged grounds of defence.

The provisions as to payment into Court apply to every suit for Payment debt or damages. The payment amounts to an admission of the into Court. claim in respect of which it is made, and there is no power (as there is under the English Order xxii. r. 1) to pay money into Court with a defence denying liability. Provision is made in section 379 for the two cases (a) where the plaintiff accepts the deposit as satisfaction in part, and (b) where he accepts it as satisfaction in full.

The other incidental proceedings here dealt with are: requiring Requiring security for costs where the plaintiff resides out of or leaves security for costs. British India and does not possess sufficient immoveable property in that country², and issuing commissions.

Commissions are of four kinds; to examine witnesses (secs. Commis-383-391); to make local investigations (secs. 392-393); to sions. examine accounts (secs. 394-395); and to make partition of immoveable property (sec. 396).

Most of the provisions for commissions to examine absent wit- 1. To nesses were adapted by the framers of the Code of 1859 from Act witnesses. The present Code provides here for four classes of VII of 1841. witnesses:

- (1) persons resident within the jurisdiction of the Court who are exempted under section 640 or 641 from attending the Court, or who are from sickness or infirmity unable to attend it (sec. 383);
 - (2) persons resident beyond the jurisdiction:
- (3) persons about to leave the jurisdiction before the date on which they are required to be examined in Court; and
- (4) officers of Government who cannot attend the Court without detriment to the public service (sec. 386).

Commissions to examine the first class of witnesses may be issued to any proper person (sec. 385): commissions to examine the other classes must be issued either to a Court within whose jurisdiction the witnesses reside or to a pleader of a High Court (sec. 386). Unless under the circumstances mentioned in section 390, evidence taken under a commission cannot be read as evidence the Code gives no power to require the plaintiff to furnish security; see Fulton, 157, per Peel C.J.

² Where a suit is brought by collusion or instigation of a third party in the suit without the consent of the party against whom it is offered. Section 400 requires the Court to direct the parties to appear before the Commissioner. This dispenses with the necessity of giving the other side notice of the issue of a commission.

The English statute 22 Vic. c. 20 provides for taking evidence in suits and proceedings pending before the chartered High Courts in places out of their jurisdiction.

2. For local investigations.

The sections as to commissions for local investigations were founded on three old regulations 1. In suits relating to disputed boundaries, it is sometimes necessary that an actual inspection and investigation on the spot should be made, either by the judge himself or by a trustworthy commissioner in his stead. always been some difficulty in finding persons on whom sufficient reliance may be placed for making these investigations; and the commissioner employed is often accused by one of the parties. and sometimes with truth, of having been corrupted by the other. Cases of greater complexity occur where there is reason to fear that he may have been tampered with by both. Before the Code of 1859 was enacted this difficulty was aggravated by the fact that the commissioner, though appointed to take the examination of witnesses and to make plans of localities, could not himself be examined as a witness. The latter part of section 180 of Act VIII of 1859 (= sec. 393 of the present Code) removed this difficulty, by allowing the commissioner to be personally examined as a witness, though, to prevent him from being unduly harassed, the permission of the Court is made a condition precedent to his examination by a party. In the Bengal Presidency, amins, or Native commissioners employed under Act XII of 1856, are usually deputed to make investigations under these provisions.

3. To examine accounts. The sections as to commissions to examine accounts are employed when a party desires to use in evidence something more than the particular entries referred to in section 62 of the Code; and they should be read in connexion with the Evidence Act, section 65, cl. (y).

4. To make partitions.

The sections as to partition relate only to property not paying revenue to Government. Partitions of immoveable property paying revenue are left to be dealt with by various local laws relating to this subject ².

PART III. OF SUITS IN PARTICULAR CASES.

This Part contains eight chapters relating to the following subjects: suits by paupers (secs. 401-415); suits by or against Government or public officers (secs. 416-429); suits by aliens and by or against foreign and native rulers (secs. 430-434); suits by or against corporations and companies (secs. 435, 436); suits by or against trustees, executors, and administrators (secs. 437-439); suits by or against minors and persons of unsound mind; (secs. 440-464); suits by or against military men (secs. 465-469); and, lastly, interpleader suits (secs. 470-476).

Suits by Paupers.

The right to sue in forma pauperis is founded on a statute of Henry VII, which provided that every poor person having cause of action should have, by discretion of the Chancellor, writs original and writs of subpæna free of charge. The Indian legislature dealt with the subject by Act IX of 1830 1. In England the amount which excludes the operation of the rules as to paupers was formerly £5, but is now £252. The Code of Civil Procedure defines a pauper as a person not possessed of sufficient means to enable him to pay the court-fee prescribed for the plaint, or not entitled to property worth rs. 100 other than necessary wearing apparel and the subject-matter of the suit 3. A pauper cannot sue for loss of caste, libel, slander, abusive language or assault (sec. 402); but, subject to these restrictions, he may bring and prosecute all suits ex delicto as well as ex contractu 4. His application for leave to sue as such will be rejected when it appears that he has entered into any champertous agreement (sec. 407). So he will be dispaupered if, after being allowed to sue as a pauper, he enters into a similar agreement (sec. 414). Where his application to sue as a pauper in respect of any right has been rejected on this or any other ground mentioned in section 407, he cannot sue in the ordinary way in respect of such right unless he first pays the costs incurred by Government in opposing his application (sec. 413).

In England, no one can sue as a pauper unless he has laid a case before counsel for his opinion whether or not he has reasonable means of persons suing in forma pauperis, Act XII of 1856, sec. 5, cl. 5.

4 Fulton, 386, where the defendant was allowed to defend in forma pauperis an action of trespass for an assault.

¹ There had been Regulations on the subject: Ben. Reg. 28 of 1814: Mad. Reg. VII of 1818, &c.: Bom. Reg. VI of 1827.

³ In Bengal, Civil Court Amíns may be employed to ascertain the grounds for proceeding and (one must suppose) obtained an opinion in his favour. When he is admitted to sue or defend as a pauper the Court may assign a counsel or solicitor, or both, to assist him; and any one taking or seeking any remuneration for conducting his case is guilty of a contempt (Order xvi. rr. 23, 26, 27). The Code provides (secs. 406, 407) for examining the pauper or his agent, and for rejecting his application if his allegations do not show a right to sue. But there is nothing in the Code corresponding with the second and third of the English rules.

A pauper plaintiff may, apparently, be required under section 380 to give security for costs ¹. As to the discretion of the judges of the Presidency Small Cause Courts to remit the costs of paupers, see Act XV of 1882, sec. 74.

Suits by or against Government.

The Courts of Small Causes have no jurisdiction in suits concerning any act ordered or done by the Governor General in Council or the Local Government². But save as aforesaid, suits against the Government or public officers may be instituted in any Court however inferior. Two months' previous notice must be given (sec. 424), and no warrant of arrest can be issued without the consent of the District Judge (sec. 425).

Suits by Aliens.

The Code then lays down rules as to when private aliens and foreign States may sue in the Courts of British India (sec. 430). Alien friends may always sue³: alien enemies only when they reside in British India with the permission of the Government. A foreign State may sue provided it has been recognised by Her Majesty or the Government of India, and the object of the suit is to enforce the private, as distinguished from the political or territorial, rights of the head or of the subjects of that State (sec. 431). If a foreign chief become a suitor in our territories he may fairly be subjected to the incidents of the position he has chosen to assume. But in order to protect the dignity of such personages and to avoid awkward complications, the Code bars suits against sovran princes, ruling chiefs, ambassadors and envoys, except with the consent of Government, exempts their persons from arrest, and declares that no decree shall be executed against their property unless with a like consent (sec. 433). The Code also provides (sec. 434) for the execution in British India of the decrees of the Courts of such Native States as the Governor General in Council declares worthy of this privilege.

Suits by and against Corporations and Companies.

The chapter on suits by and against corporations and companies authorised to sue and be sued in the name of a trustee provides for the subscription and verification of the plaint (sec. 435), and for service of the summons on a corporation or company (sec. 436). Explanation II to section 17 declares where, for the purpose of determining the forum, a corporation or company shall be deemed to carry on business. The Court may require the personal appearance of any principal officer of the corporation or company, able to answer material questions relating to the suit. Section 124 provides for delivering interrogatories to any member or officer of a litigant corporation.

As to the remedies against a corporation which neglects a statutory duty, see 3 Mad. 209, 210. Injunctions against a corporation are binding on its members and officers (sec. 495). In England any judgment or order against a corporation which it wilfully disobeys may, by leave of the Court, be enforced by writ of sequestration against the corporate property, or by attachment against the directors or other officers, or by writ of sequestration against their property (Order xlii. r. 31).

Special provisions as to suits by and against literary, scientific, and charitable societies registered under Act XXI of 1860 are contained in that Act, sections 6, 7, 8.

Suits by and against Trustees and Executors.

In the chapter relating to suits by and against trustees, executors and administrators, the Code, first, provides that in suits concerning trust-property, the trustee shall represent the beneficiaries, and that, unless the Court otherwise directs, they need not be made parties (sec. 437). This is equivalent to 15 & 16 Vic. c. 86, s. 42, and Order xvi. r. 8. The Court will order the beneficiaries to be made parties when the trustees etc. are wholly uninterested in the matter¹, or have an adverse interest therein². The Code then directs that, when there are several executors or administrators, they must all be made parties to a suit against one or more of them (sec. 438), except in the case of executors who have not proved and administrators who are outside the jurisdiction. It, lastly, declares that, unless the Court otherwise directs, the husband of a married administratrix or executrix shall not be a party to a suit by or against her (sec. 439).

Suits by and against Minors and Lunatics.

The chapter on suits by and against minors and persons of unsound mind is substantially taken from the rules of the High Court at Fort William, dated 10th June, 1874. But the Code allows married women to act as next friends (sec. 445), and the Court is in every case, on being satisfied of a defendant's minority, to appoint a guardian ad litem (sec. 443); and no order to change a minor's pleader is required. Nothing in the greater part of this chapter applies to minors or persons of unsound mind for whose person or property a guardian or manager has been appointed by a Court of Wards or by the Civil Court under any local law.

As to redemption suits on behalf of minor mortgagors, see Act IV of 1882, sec. 91, cl. (d): as to suits by minors in the Matrimonial Court, Act IV of 1869, sec. 49: as to suits in Presidency Courts of Small Causes by a minor for wages, piece-work or work as a servant, Act XV of 1882, sec. 32.

Suits by and against Military Men.

The chapter (XX) on suits by and against military men provides that where a party to a suit is an officer or soldier, is actually serving as such, and cannot obtain leave of absence, he may authorise any one to sue or defend in his stead. The necessary power of attorney is exempted from the court-fee. The Code then contains provisions as to the signature etc. of this authority, and as to the powers of persons so authorised, and as to service of process upon them or upon defendant officers and soldiers (secs. 467, 468). The chapter ends with a section providing for execution of process within the limits of a cantonment or garrison.

Interpleader.

The chapter on interpleader (XXXIII) is substituted for Act VIII of 1841 (= 1 & 2 Wm. IV. c. 58), which was accordingly repealed by Act X of 1877. It shows when an interpleader suit may be instituted (sec. 470); what the plaint must state (sec. 471); when the thing claimed must be paid into Court (sec. 472); the procedure at the first hearing (sec. 473); when agents and tenants can compel their principals or landlords to interplead (sec. 474); how the plaintiff's costs may be secured (sec. 475); and, lastly, the procedure where the defendant in an interpleader-suit is actually suing the stakeholder in another suit (sec. 476). This last provision is somewhat at variance with Lord Cottenham's doctrine that the plaintiff must not be under any liabilities to either of the defendants beyond those which arise from the title to the property in contest.

Under the English Interpleader Acts the common-law Courts could only compel interpleader where one of the claimants had actually commenced an action against the stakeholder. The Code follows the practice in this respect of the equity Courts.

On the other hand, the Code differs from the old equity practice, and follows that of the common-law Courts, in allowing a bailee 2 to cause his bailor to interplead with a third party claiming the subject-matter by an adverse independent title. Section 474, however, prohibits an agent and a tenant from compelling his principal and landlord to interplead with any person claiming otherwise than through the principal and landlord.

The English Courts have ruled that the Crown cannot be made to interplead (Candy v. Maugham, 1 D. & L. 745), and the Indian Courts would probably follow this ruling. But it would not apply to the Secretary of State for India in Council, who stands in the place of the East India Company.

30 & 31 Vic. c. 142, s. 31 provides in England for an interpleader where claims are made in respect of goods taken in execution or the proceeds thereof. There is no such provision in India.

PART IV. PROVISIONAL REMEDIES.

We now come to the provisional remedies which may be required to prevent the defendant absconding, and property disappearing or being wasted pending litigation. The Code here deals with the following subjects: arrest before judgment; attachment before judgment; compensation for improper arrests or attachments; temporary injunctions; interlocutory orders; and, lastly, the appointment of receivers.

Arrest and Attachment before Judgment.

The sections (477-482) as to arrest before judgment correspond Arrest with the English Order lxix, and supersede the writ of ne exeat before judgment.

regno. They apply to every suit—in tort as well as in contract—except suits for the possession of immoveable property, and they enable the Court, on the application of the plaintiff, to arrest the defendant and compel him to give security for appearing to answer any decree that may be passed against him. A similar power is given by the Companies Act (VI of 1882, sec. 164) when a contributory is about to abscond or to remove or conceal property.

Sections 483-490 enable the Court on the application of the plaintiff to require the defendant to give security to satisfy the decree, and, in default, to have his property attached. Provision is made (sec. 491) for compensating the defendant for an improper arrest or attachment.

Injunctions and Interlocutory Orders.

The sections on injunctions (492-497) deal only with temporary, or, as they are sometimes called, provisional injunctions. subject of perpetual injunctions is treated in the Specific Relief Temporary Act, secs. 32-571. A temporary injunction may be granted in three cases: (1) where any property in litigation is in danger of being wasted, damaged or alienated by any party to the suit, or wrongfully sold in execution of a decree; (2) where the defendant threatens or is about to remove or dispose of his property with intent to defraud his creditors; and (3) where the plaintiff sues to restrain the defendant from committing a breach of contract or other injury (secs. 492, 493). The imprisonment by which injunctions under this chapter are enforced cannot exceed six months (sec. 403). In all cases except those of great urgency, the Court must before granting an injunction cause the application for it to be notified to the opposite party (sec. 494). Where an injunction has been issued on insufficient grounds, compensation not exceeding rs. 1000

Interlocutory orders.

An interlocutory order may be made to sell perishable articles, and for the detention, preservation or inspection of any property the subject of a suit. For these purposes the Court may permit the entry on or into any land or building in possession of any party to the suit, the taking of samples, and the trial of experiments. The sections (498-500) on this subject correspond with the English Order xxxii. rules 2, 3 and 4.

may be given to the defendant (sec. 497).

Receivers.

Chapter XXXVI provides for the appointment of a receiver whenever the Court thinks it necessary for the realisation, preservation, or better custody or management of any property in litigagation or under attachment. The Court commits the property to the receiver's custody or management if necessary, and removes the person in possession of such property. But it would seem that the receiver has title even before the security is perfected 2. The receiver gives such security as the Court thinks fit, passes his accounts, pays the balance due from him, and is responsible for any loss occasioned to the property by his wilful default or gross negligence. In exercising these powers where the applicant is a creditor, the Court should have regard to the amount of the debt claimed by him, to the amount which may probably be obtained by the receiver, and to the probable costs of his appointment (Order l. r. 15 A). The jurisdiction under this chapter requires much judgment in its exercise, and is therefore confined to High Courts and District Courts. The lower Courts, moreover, have not a sufficient field open to them for selecting proper receivers.

The appointment of a receiver may be made at the instance of any party, and the defendant, for example, need not bring a crosssuit 3.

PART V. OF SPECIAL PROCEEDINGS.

The Code then deals with four kinds of special proceedings not of the nature of regular suits. These proceedings are: reference to arbitration; proceedings on agreement of parties; summary procedure on negotiable instruments; and suits relating to public charities.

The provisions of the Code as to reference to arbitration (secs. Reference 506-526) are ultimately founded on the Common Law Procedure Act, to arbitra-1854, secs. 3-10, which, however, deals with compulsory references. The Code here provides for the case in which the parties to a suit desire that any matter in difference between them in the suit be referred for arbitration. They apply in writing for an order of reference. They nominate the arbitrator, or if they cannot agree with respect to the nomination, or the person named refuses to act, the Court nominates (sec. 507). The Court makes an order of reference, specifying a time for delivering the award, and when there are two or more arbitrators, providing, by appointment of an umpire or otherwise, for difference of opinion among them (sec. 509). The Court issues the same process to the parties and witnesses whom the arbitrators desire to examine as it may issue in suits tried before it (sec. 513.) The arbitrators may state a special case (sec. 517.) The Court may correct the award in certain cases (sec. 518). It may also remit awards for reconsideration (sec. 520), and an award remitted becomes void if the arbitrators refuse to reconsider it. But no award can be set aside except where the arbitrator or either party has been guilty of certain misconduct. or the award has been made after the Court has superseded the arbitration (sec. 522). If the Court sees no cause to remit the award and there is no application to set it aside, the Court gives judgment accordingly, and thereupon follows a decree, from which no appeal lies except in so far as it is in excess of, or not in accordance with, the award (sec. 522). The object of this is to give finality to proceedings in arbitration 1.

Filing agreements to refer. The Code also provides for filing in Court agreements to refer to arbitration (secs. 523, 524) and awards made in matters referred to arbitration without the intervention of a Court (sec. 524). Compare the English rules as to making a voluntary submission to arbitration a rule of one of the superior Courts, 3 & 4 Wm. IV. c. 42, s. 29, and 17 & 18 Vic. c. 125, s. 17.

The Indian Courts have power to make orders of reference also in suits relating to religious endowments ² and in suits against Dekkhan agriculturists ³.

Proceedings on agreement of parties. Persons claiming to be interested in the decision of any question of fact or of law may enter into an agreement in writing stating the question in the form of a case for opinion, and providing that upon the finding of the Court thereon, certain money shall be paid or property delivered by one of them to the other, or that one or more of them shall do or refrain from doing some other specified act (sec. 527). The agreement is filed as a suit in the Court of the lowest grade having jurisdiction in the matter to which it relates; and the case is heard and disposed of as a suit (secs. 529-531).

These provisions correspond with the English rules as to stating questions of law in the form of a special case (Order xxxiv. rr. 1-8). But the Code provides for stating questions of fact as well as of law. On the other hand, the Code does not enable a Judge to raise a question of law by special case or otherwise without consent, and there is no provision (such as is contained in the English rule 4) as to special cases in matters to which a married woman, minor, or person of unsound mind is a party.

 ⁴ All. 286, per Straight J.
 Act XX of 1863, sec. 16.
 Act XVII of 1879, sec. 15.

Chapter XXXIX provides a summary procedure on negotiable Summary instruments unless the defendant shows a defence on the merits procedure within a specified time. It applied in the first instance only to the tiable in-High Courts and Courts of Small Causes in the three Presidency-struments. towns, and to the Courts of the Recorder of Rangoon and the Judge of Karáchi. But it may be extended by the Local Government to any other Court having ordinary original civil jurisdiction, and it has been so extended in the Madras Presidency, to all the District Munsifs' Courts, and in Burma, to the Courts of the Judge of Maulmain, and the Deputy Commissioner of Akyab. It corresponds with 18 & 19 Vic. c. 67, which Sir Henry Maine had introduced into India as Act V of 1866. In accordance with a decision of Bramwell B. on the English statute, the Code here declares that the defendant need not pay into court the sum mentioned in the summons unless his defence is not prima facie sustainable, or there is reasonable doubt as to its good faith.

Suits under this chapter must be brought within six months from the time the instrument sued on becomes due and payable 1.

The principle embodied in 18 & 19 Vic. c. 67 has recently been extended 2 in England to actions for the recovery of land by landlords against tenants holding over or persons claiming under such tenants; and it seems worthy of consideration whether there should not be a similar extension in India, so far as regards the houses, gardens, mines and quarries to which the Transfer of Property Act, chap. v, applies.

Chapter XL deals with suits relating to trusts created for Public public charitable or religious purposes. The Supreme Courts charities. in the Presidency-towns had an equitable jurisdiction over charities, and under 53 Geo. III, c. 155, s. 111, the Advocate General had the right to appear and represent the Crown in informations for the administration of charitable funds 3. This jurisdiction the present High Courts inherited. But the provincial Courts had no such jurisdiction. The Code here provides that in case of breach of trust for a public charitable or religious purpose, or whenever the direction of the Court is deemed necessary for the administration of such a trust, the Advocate General or two or more persons directly interested in the trust may sue, either in the High Court or the District Court, for a decree appointing new trustees and otherwise dealing with the administration of the trust.

To a suit under this chapter by private beneficiaries the Code requires the consent of the Advocate General or (outside the Presidency-towns) the Collector, or such officer as the Local Government appoints in this behalf.

PART VI. OF APPEALS.

The first five Parts of the Code deal, as we have seen, with suits and other proceedings in a Court of first instance. But the unsuccessful party may be (and in India, as a rule, is) dissatisfied with the decision of that Court. In such case he generally has the right to appeal to a superior tribunal. If, then, he exercises that right, and either party is dissatisfied with the decision of the appellate Court, he may, as a rule, have a second appeal to the High Court. Lastly, from the decision of the High Court on this second appeal there may, in certain cases, be an appeal to the Queen in Council.

Part VI accordingly contains five chapters dealing with the following classes of appeals: appeals from original decrees (secs. 540-583); appeals from appellate decrees, otherwise called second appeals (secs. 584-587); appeals from orders (secs. 588-591); pauper appeals (secs. 592, 593); and, lastly, appeals to the Queen in Council (secs. 594-616).

Appeals from Original Decrees.

The Code here begins by declaring that appeals shall lie from all decrees (as defined in sec. 2) of the Courts of first instance, unless when such appeals are expressly barred by the Code itself or some other law, such, for example, as the Limitation Act 2, and the Acts relating respectively to Courts of Small Causes 3, to summary suits for possession of immoveable property 4, to the trial of claims for waste lands 5. The procedure on appeal is of extreme simplicity. The appellant presents a memorandum, accompanied by a copy of the decree appealed against. The Code lays down rules as to the form and contents of this memorandum (sec. 541), and forbids the appellant to urge, without the leave of the Court, any ground of objection not set forth therein (sec. 542). To stop the practice of presenting appeals merely for the purpose of delaying execution, the Code declares (sec. 545) that execution of a decree is not stayed by reason only of its having been appealed; but the appellate Court may stay execution when substantial loss may otherwise result to the appellant, and he applies without unreasonable delay and gives security for performing such decree as may ultimately be binding on him. Sections 548-570 prescribe the procedure after the appellant's memorandum is admitted. The Code is so framed as to enable the parties to conduct their own business at the expense of as little personal inconvenience as possible. It is necessary, therefore, that they should have due warning when the Court is able to proceed with the hearing of the cause. To afford them reasonable time for preparation and for instructing their professional agents if they choose to employ any, a day is fixed for hearing the appeal, so as to allow the respondent sufficient time to appear and answer (sec. 552), and notice of the day so fixed must be published and served on him (sec. 553). If a party neglects to appear on the day so fixed, the consequence is judgment by default in the case of the appellant, and proceeding ex parte in the case of the respondent (sec. 556). This is as near an approach to the practice in original suits as the different nature of an appeal admits of. Sections 571-578 contain rules Judgment as to the judgment in appeal. In order that the litigants may in appeal. understand the grounds of the decision, and exercise, if they see fit, the right of second appeal 1, section 574 requires the judgment to state the points for determination, the decision thereupon, the reasons for the decision, and, when the decree appealed against is reversed, the relief to which the appellant is entitled. This last provision was suggested by Sir B. Peacock's ruling in Bell v. Gurudas Roy, I Ben. A. C. 50.

When the appeal is heard by two judges who differ in opinion Difference on a point of law, the appeal may be referred to one or more of the of opinion. other judges of the same Court, and is decided according to the majority (if any) of all the judges who have heard the appeal, including those who first heard it. Where there is no such majority which concurs in a judgment varying or reversing the decree appealed against, such decree is affirmed (sec. 575). No decree can be reversed or substantially varied in appeal, on account of any error, defect or irregularity not affecting the merits of the case or the jurisdiction of the Court (sec. 578). This provision, which resembles that in the Code of Criminal Procedure, section 537, has lately been modified by sec. II of the Suits Valuation Act, VII of 1887.

Decree in appeal.

The decree in appeal is then dealt with (secs. 579-583). A decree of affirmance should contain, in addition to the particulars mentioned in section 579, so much of the decree below as it is intended to supersede, and thus avoid the necessity of a reference to the superseded decree ².

Second Appeals.

Grounds of second appeal.

The Code then treats of second appeals, i. e. appeals to the High Court from appellate decrees by subordinate Courts. Such appeals lie on the following grounds and no others (sees. 584, 585):—

- (a) the decision being contrary to some specified law—i.e. legislative enactment—or usage having the force of law—i.e. the common or customary law of the country or community 4:
- (b) the decision having failed to determine some material issue of law or usage having the force of law:
- (c) a substantial error or defect in the prescribed procedure, which may possibly have produced error or defect in the decision of the case on its merits.

In order to cause finality in petty litigation relating to moveable property, the Code then provides that no second appeal lies in any suit of the nature cognisable in Courts of Small Causes (as to which see Act IX of 1887, sec. 15), when the amount or value of the subject-matter of the original suit does not exceed rs. 500 (sec. 586).

Appeals from Orders.

Appeals from orders.

The next chapter (XLIII) enumerates the orders under the Code from which alone appeals lie. All orders based on such appeals are final. An appeal is allowed (sec. 588, cl. 29) from any order inflicting a penalty on account of a contempt committed in the face of the Court, even though the person affected by the order is not a party to the suit.

Pauper Appeals.

Pauper appeals.

Pauper appeals are dealt with by Chapter XLIV. Applications for permission to appeal as a pauper will be rejected unless the Court on perusing the judgment and the decree appealed against sees reason to think the latter 'contrary to law or to some usage having the force of law',' or is otherwise erroneous or unjust.

Appeals to the Queen in Council.

The next chapter (XLV) deals with appeals to the Queen in Appeals to Council, that is to say, the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, the Queen in Council. to whom, in causes of a certain amount, there is an appeal in the last resort from the sentences of the Courts of British India, and of all the other dependencies and colonies of the realm 1.

This chapter reproduces the provisions of Act VI of 1874, which had been, as a Bill, submitted to, and approved by, the Judicial Committee, and which was repealed and re-enacted by the Code of 1877. It declares that an appeal lies to the Queen in Council-

- (a) from any final decree passed on appeal by any Court of final appellate jurisdiction;
- (b) from any final decree passed by a High Court in the exercise of original civil jurisdiction; and
- (c) from any other decree where the case is certified to be a fit one for appeal (sec. 596).

But this declaration is subject to any rules that may from time to time be made by the Judicial Committee, and also to the following provisions:-

- 1. In each of the cases mentioned in clauses (a) and (b) the amount or value of the subject-matter of the suit in the Court of first instance, and the amount or value of the matter in dispute on appeal to the Queen in Council, must be at least rs. 10,000, or the decree must involve, directly or indirectly, some claim or question to or respecting property of like amount or value 2.
- 2. Where the decree affirms the decision of the Court immediately below the Court which passed it, the appeal must involve some substantial question of law.
- 3. No appeal lies to the Queen in Council (1) from the judgment of a chartered High Court where an appeal from such judgment can be preferred to a Division Bench, (2) from a decree in a suit of the nature cognisable in Courts of Small Causes when the amount or value of the subject-matter of the original suit does not exceed rs. 500.

The rest of the chapter contains rules as to the application for certificate as to value or fitness; the security and deposit required

¹ See 3 & 4 Wm. IV. c. 41. The statutory provisions relating specially to Indian appeals are 13 Geo. III. c. 63, sec. 18: 37 Geo. III. c. 142, sec. 16; 3 & 4 Wm. IV. c. 41, secs. 23, 24; 8 & 9 Vic. c. 30; and 24 & 25 Vic. c. 104, secs. 8 and 11. As to appeals from Indian Vice-Admiralty Courts, see 30 & 31 Vic. c. 45, sec. 18.

² Before Act VI of 1874 was passed it was doubtful whether a person having an appealable claim for less than rs. 10,000 might not add the costs of suit so as to bring it within the amount, and so get the appeal as of right, on granting such certificate; the procedure on admitting the appeal: the powers, pending the appeal, of the Court whose decree is appealed from (sec. 608), and the procedure to enforce the orders of the Judicial Committee (sec. 610). Of these rules, the most important are contained in sec. 608, under which the stay of execution pending an appeal is the exception and not the rule. The object of this is to stop appeals presented merely for the purpose of delaying execution.

Appeals in forma pauperis.

The Code expressly excludes from this chapter matters of criminal, admiralty or vice-admiralty jurisdiction, and appeals from orders of prize-courts 1. It is silent as to appeals to the Judicial Committee in forma pauperis. It seems that, though the Courts in India admit such appeals, the appellant should make a special application to Her Majesty in Council for leave to prosecute his appeal as a pauper 2.

The period of limitation prescribed for the admission of an appeal to Her Majesty in Council is six months from the date of the decree appealed against; and every application to enforce an order of Her Majesty in Council must be made within twelve years from the time when a present right to enforce it accrues to some person capable of releasing the right.

Principles on which Judicial nets.

We may conclude this subject by stating some of the principles on which the Judicial Committee has on various occasions declared Committee that it deals with Indian appeals:-

- (a) Where a compromise has been sanctioned, it is 'extremely reluctant to interfere with the discretion of the Courts in India," when two Courts there have arrived at the same conclusion, unless it can be shown that those Courts have acted upon an erroneous principle (13 Moore, I. A. 34).
- (b) Upon a boundary question, it is 'extremely reluctant to reverse the judgment of an Indian Court' unless the Committee is clearly satisfied that such judgment was wrong (13 Moore, I. A. 68; but see ibid., 181).
- (c) The Committee will 'never disturb the concurrent decision of both Courts below upon a question of fact, unless it very clearly appears that there has been some miscarriage of justice, some mistrial, or that the conclusion is very plainly erroneous' (13 Moore, I. A. 82). But this rule does not apply where those Courts have never dealt with the real question raised by the issues and have drawn wrong inferences from the evidence (13 Moore, I. A. 232, 244: and see 12 ibid. 145).

¹ That there is no appeal from the decision of the Lords of the Treasury as to Indian prize-money, see Case of the Army of the Deccan, 2 Knapp. 103. ² See 4 Moore, I. A. 114, 136, and Macpherson, Practice, p. 246.

- (d) Where an award has been made on an agreement to submit to arbitration a boundary dispute, their lordships look to the broad principles of justice and equity,' and, whilst they are always willing to pay due deference to the Regulations, they discourage 'mere technical objections which affect not the merits of the case' and the invention of new grounds of dispute which have occurred in the course of the litigation (7 Moore, I. A. 474-5).
- (e) The judgment of a Judge of the High Court on the original side is equivalent at least to 'the verdict of a jury, to which the Judge who tries the case makes no objection' (6 Moore, I. A. 50).
- (f) Their lordships will not entertain a purely technical objection to a party's right of action which was not taken in the Court below (5 Moore, I. A. 1, 26, per Lord Brougham: 3 Moore, I. A. 220; and see L. R., 4 App. Ca. 413, that they will not entertain any grounds of appeal not so taken).
- (q) Where some evidence has been wrongly admitted, their lordships, who are judges of the fact, will consider 'whether throwing aside the evidence which ought not to have been admitted, there still remains sufficient evidence to support the decrees' (4 Ben. 400, and see o Ben. 371).
- (h) No appeal against a decree merely as to costs would be allowed (1 Moore, I. A. 479).

To these we may probably add that where the sum involved is below the appealable amount, their lordships will give special leave to appeal, on the ground that the construction of an Indian Act affecting the interests of a large class of persons is involved. See Brown v. McLaughan, L. R., 3 P. C. 458, a case from South Australia, where the appeal was limited to the construction of the colonial statute.

PART VII. REFERENCE AND REVISION.

This Part consists of a single chapter dealing with the reference of doubtful questions to, and the revision of non-appealable cases by, the High Court (secs. 617-622).

The questions which may be referred are questions of 'law or Reference usage having the force of law1, and questions as to the construction of questions to of documents when such construction may affect the merits. The High Court trying any suit or appeal in which the decree is final, i.e. Court. which cannot come before the High Court on appeal, may, either of its own motion or on the application of any of the parties, draw up a statement of the facts and the question, and refer such statement, with its own opinion on the point, for the decision of the High Court. It may then pass a decree contingent upon such decision. The High Court hears the parties, decides the point. and sends a copy of its decision to the referring Court (sec. 610). The Registrar of a Small Cause Court may in like manner state cases for the opinion of the Judge (sec. 646).

Revision of cases by High Court.

The section (622) as to revision empowers the High Court to call for the records of non-appealable cases 1 where the lower Court appears (a) to have exercised a jurisdiction not vested in it by law, (b) to have failed to exercise such jurisdiction, or (c) to have acted in the execution of its jurisdiction illegally or with material irregularity. The High Court may then pass such order in the case as it thinks fit, reversing or modifying the decision of the subordinate court. This brief section, like its prototype, Act XXIII of 1861, sec. 35, has given rise to some doubt and litigation, and should be explained or illustrated so as to express more clearly the intentions of the legislature. The effect of lapse of time 2 and of acquiescence's should be indicated, and in the first line, after 'may' the words 'either of its own motion or on the application of any of the parties' should be inserted.

PART VIII. REVIEW OF JUDGMENT.

Review of judgment.

Sometimes, after a decree has been made, new and important evidence is discovered, or some mistake, apparent on the face of the record, is found to have been made. In such case, where there is no appeal, the party aggrieved may apply for a review of judgment to the Court which passed the decree, whether that Court be a Court of first instance or a Court of appeal.

Part VIII consists of a single chapter dealing with this subject, the persons who may apply for a review, and the Judge to whom such applications may be made (secs. 623-629). If the application is granted, the Court rehears the whole case or such part of it Rehearing, as the Court thinks fit (sec. 630). By 'rehearing' is understood a rearguing and reconsideration of the case, after receiving the additional evidence, the discovery of which was the ground of admitting the review 4. A new trial can be had, in civil cases, only in the Presidency Courts of Small Causes: see Act XV of 1882, sec. 37.

PART IX. THE CHARTERED HIGH COURTS.

This Part contains the special rules relating to the chartered High Courts, that is, the tribunals established in the Presidencytowns and at Allahabad under the 24th & 25th Vic. chap. 104.

These Courts take evidence and record judgments and orders according to their own rules (sec. 633). They may order their decrees made in exercise of their ordinary original civil jurisdiction to be executed before the costs are taxed (sec. 634). The portions of the Code specified in section 638, para. 1, do not apply to the High Court in the exercise of that jurisdiction; and section 579, as to the contents and signature of the decree, does not apply on the appellate side. Non-judicial and quasi-judicial acts may be done by the registrar (sec. 637).

- ¹ This includes cases in Courts of col. 2: 15 Suth. Civ. R. 518, col. 2. Small Causes. 3 10 Suth. Civ. R. 6.
 - 2 See 6 Suth. Misc. Rulings, 96, * Field, Evidence, 726.

Nothing in the Code extends or applies to any Judge of a High Court in the exercise of jurisdiction as an insolvent Court.

PART X. MISCELLANEOUS.

The tenth and last Part of the Code deals with various miscellaneous matters which could not conveniently be treated in any of the foregoing divisions. It deals with the exemption from personal appearance (secs. 640, 641), and arrest under civil process (sec. 642); it provides a procedure in case of certain offences relating to public justice when committed in a civil Court (sec. 643); it requires the forms contained in the fourth schedule to be used for their respective purposes (sec. 644); it provides for the language of subordinate Courts (sec. 645); and sec. 648 provides a procedure for arresting a person or attaching property outside the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court desiring the arrest or attachment. A copy of its warrant or order is sent to the proper District Court with the probable amount of the costs of the arrest or attachment, and the District Court then takes the necessary steps. A similar provision is contained in the Code of Criminal Procedure.

SCHEDULES.

The Code concludes with four schedules. The first enumerates the enactments repealed; the second shows what chapters and sections of the Code extend to provincial Courts of Small Causes; the third saves certain provisions contained in six Bombay enactments; and the fourth contains 180 forms—plaints (a) for breach of contract; (b) for damages upon wrongs; (c) in suits for special relief, forms of summonses, registers of suits, memoranda, decrees, orders, notices, warrants, certificates, commissions, injunctions, bonds, etc., etc. Some of these were drawn by the writer: others were taken (with some changes) from the schedule to the County Court Orders in Equity (framed under 28 & 29 Vic. c. 99), and from the volume of forms published by the commissioners appointed to revise the New York Code of Civil Procedure; a few from Act VIII of 1859, and the rest were drawn by Mr. L. D. Broughton for the Court of the Recorder of Rangoon, and had stood the test of practice,

The Code received the assent of the Governor-General on the 17th March, 1882, and came into force on the 1st June in the same year. Since then it has on the whole worked satisfactorily: and, though a large number of cases appear in the Indian law reports to have been decided on its provisions, it will be found on examination that these cases rather illustrate its obvious meaning than expose its undeniable defects. Small portions of the Code have been repealed by Act XIV of 1885, Acts IV and X of 1886, and Act VIII of 1887: section 622 has been modified in its application to the Panjáb (Act XVIII of 1884); and the second schedule has been altered to adapt it to the new Provincial Small Cause Courts Act, IX of 1887. But during the last five years no amendments have been made. On a recent and careful perusal of the Code it seems to me to require the following alterations and additions, besides the amendments above suggested: -.

Suggested amendments.

The expression 'cause of action' should be defined, and used throughout the Code in strict accordance with the definition.

The question as to whether suits can be brought on the judgments of Native Courts should be set at rest.

The Courts should be expressly empowered to stay frivolous or vexatious suits.

The words 'debts' and 'debt' in secs. 266 and 268 should be defined or explained.

In section 32, cl. 3, after 'consent' the words 'in writing' should be inserted.

Sections 53 and III should be amended so as to express unmistakeably the intention of the legislature.

The commencement of the proviso to section 74 should be made to harmonise with the wording of the English Order ix. r. 6.

In Chapter XXIX the mode of enforcing judgments and orders against corporations should be prescribed, and section 124 and the second Explanation to section 17 should be transferred to that chapter. Provision should be clearly made for service on a foreign corporation which has no place of business in British India.

Chapter XXXI should expressly provide for service on guardians ad litem of minors and on committees of lunatics.

Lastly, if the Government of India decide on abolishing imprisonment for debt and modifying the law relating to suits for restitution of conjugal rights, the Code will have to be changed in accordance with such decision.

THE CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE, 1882.

The fifth Part: Special Proceedings.

OF SUITS IN GENERAL.

CHAPTER I.

OF THE JURISDICTION OF THE COURTS AND RES JUDICATA.

10. No person shall, by reason of his descent or place of No exempbirth, be in any civil proceeding exempted from the juris-tion by descent or diction of any of the Courts.

11. The Courts shall (subject to the provisions herein Courts to contained) have jurisdiction to try all suits of a civil nature 1 try all civil suits unless

1 Thus the Courts have entertained the following suits: suit to declare the plaintiff's right to be restored to his caste, 7 Suth. Civ. R. 200; suit to declare that an alleged Hindú marriage is invalid, 6 Ben. 243: suits between Hindús for divorce or fer restitution of conjugal rights, ibid. 252: 4 N. W. P. 109: suit for breaking a curdpot in a temple on a certain day, 9 Bom. H. C. 413 and many others. But they have refused to entertain the following declaratory suits: suit for a declaration that the plaintiff is a member of a Hindú society from which he has been excluded, such exclusion neither depriving him of caste, nor affecting any right of property, 3 Ben. App. Civ. 91: suit for a declaration that the plaintiff is entitled to be summoned to all marriages, and to receive a present of pan from the members of a particular community (S. D. A. 1854, p. 1850): or to offerings made by jajmans to family priests, S. D. A. 1852, p. 398; 1 Hay, 365; 5 Suth. Civ. R. 225: or to a mere dignity unconnected with any emoluments (2 Bom. 476: 6 Bom. 119): and the following suits for damages: -- for loss of honours and voluntary offerings at a temple, 5 Mad. 313: for intrusion on an officer to which no fees were of right appurtenant (2 Bom. 470: 7 Mad. 91): for not offering food to an idol (6 Bom. 122): against a magistrate acting judicially and with jurisdiction, though carelessly and irregularly (7 Ben. 449): and the following suits for specific performance of alleged obligations: to compel a Hindú widow to adopt a son (19 Suth. 127: 7 Cal. 288: 7 Moo. I. A. 206): to compel hereditary priests of a temple to put certain ornaments on the god's image on certain days, 5 Bom. 83: to compel Hindús against their will to invite other Hindús to their houses or their entertainments, 6 Suth. Civ. R. 325. So the Courts have rejected a suit by one purchit against another purchit for interfering with an alleged exclusive right of performing ceremonies at a certain place, Marshall, 161, and see the case in 3 Moo. I. A. 198; and suits against barbers to compel them to shave the plaintiffs (Sadr Decisions, 1854, p. 465), or to pare their nails (1 Suth. Civ. R. 352, col. 1). For other cases in which a suit was held not 'of a civil nature,' see 7 Mad. 91, and supra, p. 301. A suit is not maintainable to establish a right to a mere dignity unconnected with any fees. profits or emoluments, 6 Bom. 121, following 2 Bom. 476 and a decision of the Privy Council in 3 Moore, I. A. 198. A suit by a temple servant for damages for omitting to make a daily offering of rice and cake to the excepting suits of which their cognisance is barred 1 by any enactment for the time being in force.

Explanation.—A suit in which the right to property ² or to an office is contested is a suit of a civil nature, notwithstanding that such right may depend entirely on the decision of questions as to religious rites or ceremonies ³.

Plea of pending suit.

12. Except where a suit has been stayed under section 20, the Court shall not try any suit in which the matter in issue is also directly and substantially in issue in a previously instituted suit for the same relief between the same parties, or between parties under whom they or any of them claim, pending in the same or any other Court, whether superior or inferior, in British India having jurisdiction to grant such relief, or in any Court beyond the limits of British India established by the Governor General in Council and having like jurisdiction, or before her Majesty in Council 4.

Explanation.—The pendency of a suit in a foreign Court does not preclude the Courts in British India from trying a suit founded on the same cause of action ⁵.

Res judicata. 13. No Court shall try any suit 6 or issue 7 in which the idol will not lie, unless indeed he sues as representing the idol, 6 Bom. 122.

³ 'The members of a sect are entitled, subject to the rules made by the duly constituted authorities of the sect, to take part in its public worship; and if any member is wrongfully prevented from so doing, he is entitled to relief from the Civil Courts,' 6 Mad. 153. The words 'or tenets' should be added to the explanation, 5 Mad. 318.

As to the plea of lis alibi pendens, see Daniell's Chan. Practice, 6th edition, i. 459: Story, Equity Pleadings, secs. 736-744.

The answer of res judicata is admissible to estop a defendant from defence as well as a plaintiff from attack, 6 Bom. 485; so in England Outramy. Morewood, 3 East, 346, 365.

matter¹ directly and substantially in issue has been directly and substantially in issue in a former suit² between the same parties, or between parties under whom they or any of them claim³, litigating under the same title, in a Court of jurisdiction competent⁴ to try such subsequent suit⁵ or the suit in which such issue has been subsequently raised, and has been heard and finally decided ⁶ by such Court.

Explanation I.—The matter above referred to must in the former suit have been alleged by one party and either denied or admitted, expressly or impliedly, by the other.

Explanation II.—Any matter which might and ought 7 to have been made ground of defence or attack in such former suit shall be deemed to have been a matter directly and substantially in issue in such suit 8.

- The Madras High Court has limited this to matters of fact, 5 Mad. 304. But see 4 All. 55 (construction of bond). It is the 'matter in issue' (Evidence Act, sec. 3), not the 'subject-matter' of the suit that forms the essential test of res judicata, 4 All. 58.
- ² i.e. a former civil suit. The judgment of a criminal court will not operate as a bar, 4 All. 99. Nor will a decision in former execution proceedings, 3 All. 141. That decisions by revenue courts do not make a matter in issue res judicata, see 3 All. 521. But see 5 All. 280: and 9 All. 388. Astojudgments in rent-suits, 6 Cal. 406; and see 12 Cal. 563, 580.

- ⁶ These words apply, not to the expression of opinion in the judgment, but to what has been decided by the decree, 4 Mad. 136. A suit dismissed on the ground of 'uncertainty,' 9 All. 155, or of multifariousness, or for failure to appear, is not 'finally decided,' 13 Ben. App. 37: 6 Bom. 482. Nor is a suit against A and B for a joint jama, when dismissed on the ground that the jama is several, Marshall, 418. But where a decree is passed in accordance with a compromise, see sec. 175 infra.

⁷ 5 Bom. 594.

⁸ 10 Bom. H. C. 293: 3 All. 189: 4 All. 22. Explanation II must be taken to refer to the title litigated in the former suit as contra-distinguished from the relief claimed. Where several independent grounds of action are available, a party is not bound to unite them all in one suit, though he is bound to bring before the Court all grounds of attack available to him with reference to the title which is made the ground of action, per Muttusámi Avyár J., 7 Mad. 265. Explanation II is not intended to enable a party to treat a point as having been decided in his favour in a former suit, which was in fact not It applies to a case so decided. where the defendant had a defence Explanation III.—Any relief claimed in the plaint, which is not expressly granted by the decree, shall, for the purpose of this section, be deemed to have been refused ¹.

Explanation IV.—A decision is final within the meaning of this section when it is such as the Court making it could not alter (except on review) on the application of either party ² or reconsider of its own motion. A decision liable to appeal may be final within the meaning of this section until the appeal is made ³.

Explanation V.—Where persons litigate bond fide in respect of a private right claimed in common for themselves and others, all persons interested in such right shall, for the purpose of this section, be deemed to claim under the persons so litigating *.

Explanation VI.—Where a foreign judgment is relied on, the production of the judgment duly authenticated is presumptive evidence that the Court which made it had competent jurisdiction, unless the contrary appear on the record; but such presumption may be removed by proving the want of jurisdiction.

When foreign judgment no bar to suit in British India.

- 14. No foreign judgment shall operate as a bar to a suit in British India—
 - (a) if it has not been given on the merits of the case 5:
- (b) if it appears on the face of the proceedings to be founded on an incorrect view of international law or of any law in force in British India:

which he might if he had so pleased and ought to have brought forward, but he did not do so and the suit was decided against him. Then he is as much bound by the adverse decree as if he had set up the defence, and he is equally estopped from setting up the defence in any future suit under similar circumstances, 5 Cal. 925, per Garth C.J.

- ¹ This applies to relief claimed which the Court is bound to grant with reference to the matters directly and substantially in issue, 4 Mad. 310.
- ² An ex parte decree is not 'final' so long as it is open to the Court, on the application of the parties, to modify it, 7 Cal. 25.
- 3 Everything that should have the authority of res judicata is and ought to be subject to appeal, Savigny, cited 7 Bom. 466.

⁴ 10 Mad. 223. This explanation does not refer to bona fide defences but to bona fide claims, 6 Mad. 121.

It is not limited to suits under sec. 30, 2 Mad. 332. It only applies to cases where several different persons claim an easement or other right by one common title, as for instance where the inhabitants of a village claim by custom right of pasturage over the same tract of land, or to take water from the same spring or well, 6 Cal. 54, referring to Arlett v. Ellis. 7 B. & C. 346, and Blewitt v. Tregorning, 3 A. & E. 554. See also 8 Mad. 496: 10 Mad. 82: 6 Cal. 33.

decree was given at Mahé against a native of British India on a cause of action arising in British India.

¹ This would enable the Court to disregard a foreign judgment in cases in which, by a faulty or irregular procedure, the defendant had not been allowed the opportunity of fairly defending the suit, 4 Mad. 365. That the validity and service of summonses etc. alleged to have emanated from a foreign court must be strictly proved, see 11 Bom. 241. That a decree on a foreign judgment must be executed according to the rules and procedure of British Indian Courts, see 2 Mad. 337, where a decree against A personally for the full amount due on a French judgment against his deceased father was limited to the assets of the deceased. That a call-order made by the Court of Chancery in England upon a contributory of a company registered in England and being wound up under the authority of that Court is treated by the Indian Courts as a foreign judgment, see 8 Bom. H. C., O. C. J. 200.

² See 4 Suth. Civ. R. 108; 15 ibid.

500. As to the meaning of 'fraud' see supra, Vol. I. pp. 98 n. 2, 555.

See the English decisions on the subjects dealt with by this section in Smith's Leading Cases, 9th ed. pp. 868-882, and Piggott's Foreign Judgments, 2nd ed. pp. 106-175.

i.e. having jurisdiction with reference to the pecuniary value and nature of the suit, 7 All. 239. The corresponding section of the Code of 1859 does not affect the jurisdiction of a Subordinate Judge to try a suit wherein are joined several causes of action the cumulative value of which exceeds rs. 1000, although, if several suits had been brought on these several causes, such suits must have been instituted in the Munsif's Court, 6 Cal. 6.

⁶ See the definition of immoveable property, supra, Vol. I. p. 487.

Provided that suits to obtain relief respecting, or compensation for wrong to, immoveable property held by or on behalf of the defendant may, when the relief sought can be entirely obtained through his personal obedience, be instituted either in the Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the property is situate, or in the Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction he actually and voluntarily resides, or carries on business, or personally works for gain.

Explanation.—In this section 'property' means property situate in British India ³.

Suits instituted where defendants reside or cause of action arose.

- ² A suit therefore will not lie in a British Indian Court for land situate in a Native State (2 Mad. H. C. 437), and consent of parties cannot give jurisdiction in such cases, 9 Bom. H. C. 242. Whether a Court will decree the sale of mortgaged land situate in British India, but outside its jurisdiction, see 9 Bom. H. C. 12: 9 Ben. 171.
- ³ This section does not apply to the High Court in the exercise of its original civil jurisdiction, sec. 638, infra.

4 i. e. according to the High Court at Madras, the whole cause of action, including every fact necessary to the maintenance of the action, 3 Mad. H. C. 384. But the Allahabad High Court holds that here 'cause of action' does not mean 'whole cause of action,' but includes material part of the cause of action, 4 All. 425, and see 13 Ben. 461, 14 Ben. 367. A suit for compensation for breach of contract may accordingly be brought either at the place where the contract was made and the defendant's obligation established, or where performance was to be had and breach occurred, 5 All. 279, 280. The English Courts have ruled that in the C. L. P. Act, 1852, sec. 18, 'cause of action' means, not the whole cause of action, i.e. contract and breach, but 'the act on the part of the defendant which gives the plaintiff his cause of the suit, actually and voluntarily reside 1, or carry on business, or personally work for gain; or

(c) any of the defendants, at the time of the commencement of the suit, actually and voluntarily resides 1, or carries on business, or personally works for gain: provided that either the leave of the Court is given, or the defendants who do not reside, or earry on business, or personally work for gain, as aforesaid, acquiesce in such institution.

Explanation I.—Where a person has a permanent dwelling at one place and also a lodging at another place for a temporary purpose only, he shall be deemed to reside 1 at both places in respect of any cause of action arising at the place where he has such temporary lodging.

Explanation II.—A Corporation or Company shall be deemed to carry on business at its sole or principal office in British India or, in respect of any cause of action arising at any place where it has also a subordinate office, at such place.

Illustrations.

- (a) A is a tradesman in Calcutta. B carries on business in Delhi. B, by his agent in Calcutta, buys goods of A, and requests A to deliver them to the East Indian Railway Company. A delivers the goods accordingly in Calcutta. A may sue B for the price of the goods either in Calcutta, where the cause of action has arisen, or in Delhi, where B carries on business.
- (b) A resides at Simla, B at Calcutta, and C at Delhi. A, B and C being together at Benares, B and C make a joint promissorynote payable on demand, and deliver it to A. A may sue B and Cat Benares, where the cause of action arose. He may also sue them at Calcutta, where B resides, or at Delhi, where C resides; but in each of these cases, if the non-resident defendant objects, the suit cannot be maintained without the leave of the Court 2.

¹ This is to be construed broadly, so as to prevent a debtor from evading the claims of his creditors, 6 Bom. 102. As to the meaning of 'residence' and dwelling-place, see I All. 51. The residence intended is not an exclusive residence, see L. R., 1 I. A. 396, 397 a case as to a condition). As Lord Kenyon said (Rex v. Sargent, 5 T. R.

466), 'it never can be contended that in order to constitute a residence in any place, it is necessary to reside any given number of days, or even any great part of the year. It happens perpetually that persons have different places of abode, in some of which they reside more or less, as suits their convenience.'

Suits for immoveable property (a) in single district, but in different jurisdictions; (b) in different districts.

19. If the suit be to obtain relief respecting, or compensation for wrong to, immoveable property situate within the limits of a single district, but within the jurisdiction of different Courts, the suit may be instituted in the Court within whose jurisdiction any portion of the property is situate: provided that, in respect of the value of the subject-matter of the suit, the entire claim be cognisable by such Court.

If the immoveable property be situate within the limits of different districts, the suit may be instituted in any Court, otherwise competent to try it, within whose jurisdiction any portion of the property is situate 1.

Power to stay proceedings where all defendants do not reside within jurisdiction.

20. If a suit which may be instituted in more than one Court is instituted in a Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the defendant or all the defendants does not or do not actually and voluntarily reside, or carry on business, or personally work for gain, the defendant or any defendant may, after giving notice in writing to the other parties of his intention to apply to the Court to stay proceedings, apply to the Court accordingly; and if the Court, after hearing such of the parties as desire to be heard, is satisfied that justice is more likely to be done by the suit being instituted in some other Court, it may stay proceedings either finally or till further order, and make such order as it thinks fit as to the costs already incurred by the parties or any of them.

In such case, if the plaintiff so requires, the Court shall return the plaint with an endorsement thereon of the order staying proceedings.

Every such application shall be made at the earliest possible Applicaopportunity, and in all cases before the issues are settled; and to be made. any defendant not so applying shall be deemed to have acquiesced in the institution of the suit 1.

High Court may, after considering the objections, if any, of the other parties, determine in which of the Courts having jurisdiction the suit shall proceed 3.

- ¹ 6 Mad. 349. Sec. 20 contains the only provision in the Code for staying proceedings. There is no express power to stay frivolous or vexatious suits, as there is in England under Order xxv. r. 4.
- ² The order for transfer will not be made unless the suit is brought in a Court having jurisdiction, 9 All. 191, approving of 6 Cal. 30.

3 This is intended to provide for those cases where on the ground of Procedure where they are subordinate to different High Courts.

24. Where such Courts are subordinate to different High Courts, any defendant may, after giving notice in writing to the other parties of his intention to apply to the High Court within whose jurisdiction the Court in which the suit is brought is situate ¹, apply accordingly.

If the suit is brought in any Court subordinate to a District Court, the application, together with the objections, if any, filed by the other parties, shall be submitted through the District Court to which such Court is subordinate;

The High Court or District Court may, on the application of any of the parties, after giving notice to the parties and hearing such of them as desire to be heard, or of its own motion without giving such notice, withdraw any suit, whether pending in a Court of first instance or in a Court of appeal subordinate to such High Court or District Court, as the case may be, and try ⁴ the suit itself, or transfer it for trial to any other such subordinate Court competent ⁵ to try the same in respect of its nature and the amount or value of its subject-matter ⁶.

i.e. the High Court mentioned in the first clause of this section.

³ In 5 All. 60 it was held that this section does not empower a High Court to transfer a suit instituted within its own jurisdiction to the jurisdiction of another High Court, but only to declare in which Court a suit shall proceed and, if necessary, to stay all further proceedings within its own jurisdiction. If this had been the intention of the legislature, it would surely have given express power to stay proceedings, as in secs. 20, 476.

4 Unless the evidence is retaken there is no trial, 7 All. 342.

⁵ i.e. having jurisdiction, 7 All.

An order under this section transferring a suit in which an appeal would lie from the decree made therein is not subject to revision by the High Court, 6 All. 233. The High Court cannot under this section transfer an appeal unless the Court from which the transfer is sought to be made has jurisdiction to hear the appeal, 6 Cal. 30.

Section 25 is applicable to cases of winding-up companies, 9 All. 182.

For the purposes of this section, the Courts of Additional and Assistant Judges shall be deemed to be subordinate to the District Court.

The Court trying any suit withdrawn under this section from a Court of Small Causes shall, for the purposes of such suit, be deemed to be a Court of Small Causes.

CHAPTER III.

OF PARTIES AND THEIR APPEARANCES, APPLICATIONS AND ACTS.

26. All persons may be joined as plaintiffs in whom the Persons right to any relief claimed is alleged to exist, whether jointly 1, who may be joined severally 2 or in the alternative 3 in respect of the same cause as plain-And judgment may be given for such one or of action 4. more of the plaintiffs as may be found to be entitled to relief, for such relief as he or they may be entitled to, without any amendment. But the defendant, though unsuccessful, shall

² Thus where eight trustees of a charity brought an action for a libel contained in a letter written by the defendant, it was held in England that they might rightly join, though no joint injury was shown, Booth v. Triscoe, 2 Q. B. D. 496. Each had a separate right to sue arising out of the same cause of action. But in 11 Cal. 524, where thirteen deserters committed to jail under one warrant and for the same offence jointly sued the gaoler for wrongful detention after the expiry of their term of imprisonment, the plaint was taken off the file, because 'the causes of action, though similar in nature, were in fact distinct and separate.' This decision ignored the word 'severally' and scems erroneous.

The Madras High Court once said that in a suit to recover property, in the absence of a special provision, all the co-owners should be joined as plaintiffs, or, if they refuse, as defendants, 3 Mad. 234.

3 The words 'in the alternative' apply to cases in which there is a doubt as to who is the person entitled to sue, 6 Mad. 243; whether, e.g. principal or agent should be plaintiff. They also, apparently, permit a plaintiff to join two separate alternative causes of action against the same defendant, Bagot v. Easton, 7 Ch. D. 1.

From the English Order xvi. r. 1, but with the addition of the words 'in respect of the same cause of action;' i.e. the same set of facts which give or may give A a right to legal relief against B. And see 6 Bom. 266, 275, where Sargent J. said that here 'cause of action meant not only the act complained of, but also the right violated by that act.' Where one of two Hindú widows and her adopted son sued as co-plaintiffs claiming either the whole family estate for the son if the adoption were valid, or, if the adoption were invalid, half the estate for the plaintiff widow, the suit was held bad for misjoinder, 6 Mad. 239; and see 6 Bom. 266, 275. In the Madras case there were antagonistic claims arising out of the same cause of action.

be entitled to his costs occasioned by so joining any person who is not found entitled to relief, unless the Court in disposing of the costs of the suit otherwise directs.

Court may substitute or add plaintiff for or to plaintiff suing. 27. Where a suit has been instituted in the name of the wrong person as plaintiff ¹, or where it is doubtful whether it has been instituted in the name of the right plaintiff ², the Court may, if satisfied that the suit has been so commenced through a boná fide mistake ³, and that it is necessary for the determination of the real matter in dispute so to do, order any other person or persons to be substituted ⁴ or added as plaintiff or plaintiffs upon such terms as the Court thinks just ⁵.

Persons who may be joined as defendants. 28. All persons may be joined as defendants against whom the right to any relief is alleged to exist, whether jointly, severally or in the alternative, in respect of the same matter. And judgment may be given against such one or more of the defendants as may be found to be liable, according to their respective liabilities, without any amendment.

Joinder of parties liable on same contract.

- 29. The plaintiff may, at his option, join as parties to the same suit all or any of the persons severally, or jointly and severally, liable on any one contract, including parties to bills of exchange, hundís and promissory notes⁷.
- 1 e.g. by beneficiary instead of trustee, by mortgagor instead of mortgagee.
- ² e.g. in an action for breach of a contract made by an agent.
- ³ of law or of fact, Ducket v. Gover, 6 Ch. D. 82.
- ⁴ It has been held in England that a new plaintiff cannot be substituted for the original plaintiff except by consent of the latter, Enden v. Carte, 17 Ch. D. 169, where the Court added a plaintiff and gave him the conduct of the suit.
- ⁵ See Turquand v. Fearon, 4 Q. B. D. 280.
- ⁶ From the English Order xvi. r. 4, with the addition of the words 'in respect of the same matter,' 8 Cal. 172. Sec. 28 is not imperative, 8 Cal. 238. It does for defendants what sec. 26 does for plaintiffs. It was said in Council that sec. 28 would enable a landlord to proceed in a single suit for the enhancement of the rent of the tenants of a whole estate. In England, A sued B for trespass on land of which A was lessee under C. The defence was a right of way granted by C. It was held that A might add Cas a defendant, claiming against him, in case the right of way was established, damages for breach of covenant for quiet enjoyment, Child v. Stenning, 5 Ch. D. 695. But a stranger to a contract of which specific performance is sought cannot be a party to a suit. Where, therefore, A sues as against B for specific performance of a contract to sell lands and as against C for a declaration that he was not entitled to any charge on those lands, C is improperly made a party, 5 Bom. 177. See 12 Cal. 555.

7 Thus the holder of bills of ex-

But the all in same interest. Court shall in such case give, at the plaintiff's expense, notice of the institution of the suit to all such parties either by personal service or (if from the number of parties or any other cause such service is not reasonably practicable) by public advertisement, as the Court in each case may direct 3.

i.e. persons, 9 Cal. 606. The first part of this section implies that the plaintiff therein contemplated wishes to sue on behalf of other persons similarly interested in suing, they also wishing the same, 5 All. 606. That when there is community of interest among a large number of persons a few should be allowed to represent the whole, see 3 Mad. H. C.

² See Order xvi. r. 9.

³ This section applies to a case where many persons are jointly interested in obtaining relief, 7 All. 182, per Petheram C.J.; as, for instance, where one part-owner of a ship sues on behalf of himself and his coowners for freight, De Hart v. Sterenson, 1 Q. B. D. 313, or where one co-owner of a patent sues for an infringement, Sheehan v. G. E. Ry. Co., 16 Ch. D. 59. Its object is to save the record from being incumbered. It does not allow individuals to sue on behalf of the general public, but it enables some of a class having special interests to represent the rest of the class, 9 Mad. 463. It applies to suits affecting the property of a Malabar tarawád, which 'is something in the nature of a corporation,' but not the kind contemplated in sec. 435, 6 Mad. 125: 10 Mad. 327.

4 Order xvi. r. 11.

⁵ 6 Bom. 275.

⁶ Thus if an officer of a corporation or company be made a defendant for purposes of discovery only, his name should be struck out, as the necessary relief can be got under sec. 124; see Wilson v. Church, 9 Ch. D. 552.

Consent of person added as plaintiff. Parties to suits instituted under s. 30. Defendants added to be served.

No person shall be added as a plaintiff, or as the next friend of a plaintiff, without his own consent ⁴ thereto ⁵.

Any person on whose behalf a suit is instituted or defended under section 30 may apply to the Court to be made a party to such suit.

All parties whose names are so added ⁶ as defendants shall be served with a summons in manner hereinafter mentioned, and (subject to the provisions of the Indian Limitation Act, 1877, section 22) the proceedings as against them shall be deemed to have begun only on the service of such summons ⁷.

Conduct of suit.

The Court may give the conduct of the suit to such plaintiff as it seems proper 8.

¹ 7 Bom. 167. But see 10 Mad. 44.

² i. e. (as a rule) questions directly arising out of and incident to the original cause of action, in which, either in character of plaintiff or defendant, the person to be joined has an identity or community of interest with that party in the litigation on whose side he is to be ranged, 2 All. 743, per Straight J.

⁴ This need not be in writing, as under the corresponding English rule.
⁵ Because the suit may be improperly brought, and if a person were made plaintiff without his consent, he might also be made liable for costs, 7 Cal. 244. If a person objects to be made a plaintiff, the proper course is to make him a defendant. But the section does not contemplate an application by the person proposed to be added, 5 Cal. 882, 886.

Where a defendant is added, the plaint, if previously where defiled, shall, unless the Court direct otherwise, be amended in fendant added, such manner as may be necessary, and an amended copy of plaintiff to the summons shall be served on the new defendant and the amend. original defendants 1.
- 34. All objections for want of parties, or for joinder of Time for parties who have no interest in the suit, or for misjoinder as taking objections as co-plaintiffs or co-defendants, shall be taken at the earliest to nonpossible opportunity, and in all cases before the first hearing 2; joinder or misjoinder. and any such objection not so taken shall be deemed to have been waived by the defendant.

Nothing in the former part of this section applies to the territories now administered respectively by the Lieutenant-Governor of the Panjáb, and the Chief Commissioners of Oudh and the Central Provinces; but in those territories the recognised agents of parties by whom such appearances, applications and acts may be made and done shall be such persons as the Local Government may, from time to time, by notification in the official Gazette, declare in this behalf ⁵.

OF THE FRAME OF THE SUIT.

Suit how framed.

42. Every suit shall, as far as practicable, be so framed as to afford ground for a final decision upon the subjects in dispute, and so to prevent further litigation concerning them.

Suit to include whole claim.

43. Every suit shall include the whole of the claim which the plaintiff is entitled to make in respect of the cause of action 1; but a plaintiff may relinquish any portion of his claim in order to bring the suit within the jurisdiction of any Court 2.

Relinquishment of part of claim.

If a plaintiff omit to sue ³ in respect of, or intentionally relinquish, any portion of his claim, he shall not afterwards sue in respect of the portion so omitted or relinquished ⁴.

Omission to sue for one of several remedies. A person entitled to more than one remedy⁵ in respect of the same cause of action may sue for all or any of his remedies; but if he omits (except with the leave of the Court

Thus where the property of a Hindú family consisted of lands as well as debts, and two of the family at first sued for a partition of the debts only and then compromised and withdrew the suit without the permission of the Court, a second suit brought by them for a partition of the whole property was barred, 7 Bom. 182. So where A sued for rent at an enhanced rate for a certain year, he could not afterwards sue for the original rent for previous years. The correct test is whether the claim in the new suit is, in fact, founded on a cause of action distinct from that which was the foundation of the former suit, 11 Moo. I. A. 605. Thus where A deposits three Government promissory notes with B, who misappropriates them, and A suce B for two of the notes, A cannot afterwards sue B for the third note, ibid. For other cases in which the second suit is barred, see A Suth. Ref. 20: 12 Suth. Civ. R. 79: 14 ibid. 253: 18 ibid. 337: 21 ibid. 223: 3 Ben. A. C. J. 265: 7 Bom. 377.

A paper referred to in a plaint is not part of the plaint, Bourke, O. C. J. 273.

Where A sues, under a power of attorney on behalf of B, the suit must be brought in B's name, I N. W. P. 277. See also 4 ibid. 59. Where the plaintiff sells his rights pendente lite the vendee's name should not be substituted; but the irregularity may be cured by the defendant's consent, 3 Ben. A. C. J. 214.

- (c) the name, description 1 and place of residence of the defendant, so far as they can be ascertained;
- (d) a plain and concise statement of the circumstances constituting the cause of action, and where and when it arose;
- (e) a demand of the relief which the plaintiff claims²;
- (f) if the plaintiff has allowed a set-off or relinquished a portion of his claim, the amount so allowed or relinquished.

In money suits.

If the plaintiff seeks the recovery of money, the plaint must state the precise amount, so far as the case admits.

In a suit for mesne profits, and in a suit for the amount which will be found due to the plaintiff on taking unsettled accounts between him and the defendant, the plaint need only state approximately the amount sued for.

Where plaintiff sues as tive.

When the plaintiff sues in a representative character³, the plaint should show, not only that he has an actual existing representa- interest in the subject-matter but that he has taken the steps necessary to enable him to institute a suit concerning it.

Illustrations.

- (a) A sucs as B's executor. The plaint must state that A has proved B's will.
- Where the Government has recognised a person as having a right to bear particular titles, a plaint in a suit against him should mention the titles, 12 Ben. 443; and the Judicial Committee remarked that it was against the policy of the law that anything should be done which tends to increase one of the great social evils of India, viz. the indisposition of persons of consequence to appear as suitors in Courts of justice. Their lordships even said (ibid 449) that 'description' includes all those titles by which the party is generally known. A Hindú widow sued as representing her deceased husband should be so described, 8 Bom. 300.
- ² That under a prayer for general relief, the plaintiff is not entitled to any relief inconsistent with his plaint, see 5 Ben. 682, 689. The Court must take into consideration all the rights of the parties and by its decree give effect to those rights as far as possible; but it should confine itself to granting such relief as is prayed by the plaint, I Mad. H. C. 477. Thus in a suit to establish a right of ownership over certain land, the Court should not enter into, and decide upon, the plaintiff's right to an easement over the same, 2 Bom. H. C. 176. However, in 6 Cal. 485 White J. seems to have granted an injunction for which there had not been a specific prayer. As to interest on the amount of mesne profits decreed, though not prayed for in the plaint, see 3 Moo. I. A. 220. That the plaintiff is limited to the sum laid in his plaint as mesne profits, though by the evidence a larger sum appears due to him, see 2 Moo. I. A.

3 This applies not only to executors, administrators and guardians, but to the manager of a Hindú family, 7 Bom. 470.

- (b) A sues as C's administrator. The plaint must state that A has taken out administration to C's estate.
- (c) A sues as guardian of D, a Muhammadan minor. A is not D's guardian according to Muhammadan law and usage. The plaint must state that A has been specially appointed D's guardian.

The plaint must show that the defendant is or claims to be Defeninterested in the subject-matter, and that he is liable to dant's interest and be called upon to answer the plaintiff's demand.

CHAPTER VI.

OF THE ISSUE AND SERVICE OF SUMMONS.

Issue of Summons.

Summons.

- 64. When the plaint has been registered, and the copies or concise statements required by section 58 have been filed, a summons may be issued to each defendant to appear and answer the claim on a day to be therein specified,
 - (a) in person, or
- (b) by a pleader duly instructed and able to answer all material questions relating to the suit, or
- (c) by a pleader accompanied by some other person able to answer all such questions.

Every such summons shall be signed by the Judge or such officer as he appoints, and shall be sealed with the seal of the Court:

Provided that no such summons shall be issued when the defendant has appeared at the presentation of the plaint and admitted the plaintiff's claim 3.

Inquiry.

The Court shall thereupon inquire into the same, and if it finds that the case fulfils the requirements of the former part of this section, and that the amount claimed to be set-off does not exceed the pecuniary limits of its jurisdiction 4, the Court shall set-off the one debt against the other.

Effect of set-off.

Such set-off shall have the same effect as a plaint in a cross-suit so as to enable the Court to pronounce a final judgment in the same suit, both on the original and on the cross claim; but it shall not effect the lien, upon the amount decreed, of any pleader in respect of the costs payable to him under the decree⁵.

It was never, said Garth C.J., intended to enact any new law as to what is, and what is not, the subject of set-off, 9 Cal. 918. With deference, it was intended by sec. 112 to state when, and when only, set-off should be allowed. The decision in 2 Mad. H. C. 296, relied on in 11 Cal. 560 and 4 Bom. 407, was on secs. 121, 195 of the Code of 1859. As to the decree where a set-off has been allowed, see sec. 216 infra.

D. 595), and directors cannot set-off any money due from the company to them against the amounts which they are ordered to replace (Flitcroft's case, 21 Ch. D. 519).

This enables the Court to call for a written statement to supply omissions in the plaint, not to add to or vary the plaintiff's claim, 11 Suth. Civ. R. 71. As to appealing when the Court has called for a statement without any sufficient cause, see 22 Suth. 377.

113. If any party from whom a written statement is so required fails to present the same within the time fixed by the Court, the Court may pass a decree against him, or make such order in relation to the suit as it thinks fit.

Frame of written statements.

114. Written statements shall be as brief as the nature of the case admits, and shall not be argumentative, but shall be confined as much as possible to a simple narrative of the facts which the party by whom or on whose behalf the written statement is made believes to be material to the case, and which he either admits or believes he will be able to prove 1.

Every such statement shall be divided into paragraphs, numbered consecutively, and each paragraph containing as nearly as may be a separate allegation.

Written statements to be verified.

115. Written statements shall be signed and verified in the manner hereinbefore2 provided for signing and verifying signed and plaints³, and no written statement shall be received unless it be so signed and verified.

Power as to tive, prolix or irrelevant written statements.

116. If it appears to the Court that any written statement, argumenta whether called for by the Court or spontaneously tendered, is argumentative or prolix, or contains matter irrelevant4 to the suit 5, the Court may amend it then and there, or may, by an order to be endorsed thereon, reject the same, or return it to the party by whom it was made for amendment within a time to be fixed by the Court, imposing such terms as to costs or otherwise as the Court thinks fit.

⁵ See 10 Cal. 808. As to the practice when a party producing documents wishes to have certain portions sealed up, see 4 Cal. 835.

" Order xxxi. r. 14. The Court has no discretion as to refusing to allow the production, provided the documents are not privileged, 2 Bom. 453, following Bustros v. White, L. R., Q. B. D. 139. What documents are privileged depends on the Evidence Act (secs. 122, 124, 126, 129), and the English decisions necessary to supplement that measure. Thus, reports of medical men procured by a solicitor for the purposes of an action (2 Ex. D. 437); the survey of a ship made for a like purpose (3 P. D. 162); reports etc. relating to impending litigation prepared for purpose of sub- etc. mission to solicitor (3 Q. B. D. 315); communications between solicitor and client (4 Q. B. D. 85); communications by a third party to a solicitor with reference to actual or pending litigation (17 Ch. D. 681, 682); and, probably, documents tending to criminate the party discovering them (5 Ex. D. 23, 108).

Neither the Code nor the English Order provides for the case where relevant documents are in the joint possession of the party disclosing them and some person not a party to the suit. Such documents cannot be ordered to be produced (10 Q. B. D. 465) unless no interest can be affected by their production other than the interest of the parties to the suit, 15 Q. B. D. 473, where the defendant was liquidator of a company which had been wound up, and had, as such. the possession and control of the documents in question.

the party giving such notice or of his pleader 1, and to permit such party or pleader to take copies thereof.

Consequence of non-compliance with such notice.

No party failing to comply with such notice shall after. wards be at liberty to put any such document in evidence on his behalf in such suit, unless he satisfies the Court that such document relates only to his own title, or that he had some other and sufficient cause 2 for not complying with such notice.

Party receiving such notice to deliver notice when and where inspection may be had.

132. The party to whom such notice is given shall, within ten days from the receipt thereof, deliver through the Court to the party giving the same a notice stating a time within three days from such delivery at which the documents, or such of them as he does not object to produce, may be inspected at his pleader's office or some other convenient place3, and stating which, if any, of the documents he objects to produce, and on what grounds.

Application for order of inspection.

133. If any party served with notice under section 131 omits to give notice under section 132 of the time for inspection, or objects to give inspection 4, or names an inconvenient place for inspection, the party desiring it may apply to the Court for an order of inspection 5.

Application to be affidavit.

134. Except in the case of documents referred to in the founded on plaint, written statement or affidavit of the party against whom the application is made, or disclosed in his affidavit of documents, such application shall be founded upon an affidavit showing (a) of what documents inspection is sought, (b) that the party applying is entitled to inspect them, and (c) that they are in the possession or power of the party against whom the application is made.

and if the Court is satisfied that the right to such discovery on which or inspection depends on the determination of any issue or right to discovery question in dispute in the suit 1, or that for any other reason depends to duestion in a definition of the first desirable that any such issue or question should be deterbermined. mined before deciding upon the right to the discovery or inspection, the Court may order that the issue or question be determined first and reserve the question as to the discovery or inspection 2.

136. If any party fails to comply with any order under Consethis chapter 3, to answer interrogatories or for discovery, quences of failure to production or inspection, which has been duly served, he shall, answer or if a plaintiff, be liable to have his suit dismissed for want of spection. prosecution, and if a defendant, to have his defence, if any, struck out 4, and to be placed in the same position as if he had not appeared and answered; and the party interrogating or seeking discovery, production or inspection may apply to the Court for an order to that effect, and the Court may make such order accordingly 5.

Any party failing to comply with any order under this chapter, to answer interrogatories or for discovery, production or inspection, which has been served personally upon him, shall also be deemed guilty of an offence under section 188 of the Indian Penal Code 6.

1 e.g. the existence of a partnership or agency.

² Order xxxi. r. 20. It empowers the Court to raise and determine, before the hearing of the cause, an issue for the exclusive purpose of deciding the right to discovery of evidence which is to be used at the trial, 6 Bom. 572. For English decisions on the corresponding rule see Wood v. The Anglo-Italian Bank, Ld., 34 L. T., N. S. 255: Re Leigh's Estate, 6 Ch. Div. 256.

3 Thus when interrogatories are delivered with the leave of the Court under sec. 121, the Court virtually orders them to be answered within ten days from the date of service (sec. 126). If the party interrogated disobeys, the Court may make an order under sec. 136; 10 Cal. 506.

> Every application made under this section shall (unless the Court otherwise directs) be supported by an affidavit of the applicant or his pleader, showing how the record is material to the suit in which the application is made 4, and that the applicant cannot without unreasonable delay or expense obtain a duly authenticated copy of the record or of such portion thereof as the applicant requires, or that the production of the original is necessary for the purposes of justice.

> Nothing contained in this section shall be deemed to enable the Court to use in evidence any document which under the Indian Evidence Act, 1872, would be inadmissible in the suit.

Documentary evidence to le in readiness at first hearing.

138. The parties or their pleaders shall bring with them and have in readiness at the first hearing of the suit, to be produced when called for 5 by the Court, all the documentary evidence of every description in their possession or power, on which they intend to rely, and which has not already been filed in Court, and all documents which the Court at any time before such hearing has ordered to be produced.

Provisions as to documents applied to material objects. 145. The provisions herein contained as to documents shall, so far as may be, apply to all other material objects producible as evidence.

CHAPTER XI.

OF THE SETTLEMENT OF ISSUES.

Framing of issues.

146. Issues arise when a material proposition of fact or law is affirmed by the one party and denied by the other.

Material propositions are those propositions of law or fact which a plaintiff must allege in order to show a right to sue.

Each material proposition affirmed by one party and denied by the other must form the subject of a distinct issue.

Issues are of two kinds: (a) issues of fact, (b) issues of law.

At the first hearing of the suit, the Court shall, after reading the plaint and the written statements, if any, and after such examination of the parties as may appear necessary, ascertain upon what material propositions of fact or of law the parties are at variance¹, and shall thereupon proceed to frame and record the issues on which the right decision of the case appears to the Court to depend ².

When issues both of law and of fact arise in the same suit, and the Court is of opinion that the case may be disposed of on the issues of law only, it shall try those issues first, and for that purpose may, if it thinks fit, postpone the settlement of the issues of fact until after the issues of law have been determined.

Nothing in this section requires the Court to frame and record issues when the defendant at the first hearing of the suit makes no defence 3.

- 147. The Court may frame the issues from all or any of Allegations from which
- (a) allegations made on oath by the parties, or by any issues may persons present on their behalf, or made by the pleaders of such parties or persons⁴:
 - (b) allegations made in the plaint or in the written state-

One party has no power to summon another to give evidence on the actilement of issues, I Hyde, 147.

It may be laid down as a general rule that only such averments should be made the subject of issues as are essential to support the cause of action and are denied by the defendant, or as are essential to support a plea and are denied by the plaintiff. Mere pieces of evidence which are to be adduced to enable the Court to infer the truth of a material averment ought not to be made the subject of separate issues, 3 N.W. P. 307, per Turner J. There is nothing in the Code which makes the omission by the Judge to settle issues fatal to the trial of the suit, 13 Moo. I. A. 573 (on Act VIII of 1859): 11 Moo. I. A. 25; but such an omission would be a grave irregularity. A direction to ascertain an amount properly payable may be equivalent to an issue, 12 Moo. I. A. 502, 503.

The Code nowhere empowers the Judge to try issues of fact with the aid of a jury, 2 N. W. P. 97.

Court may examine witnesses or documents before framing issues.

148. If the Court be of opinion that the issues cannot be correctly framed without the examination of some person not before the Court, or without the inspection of some document not produced in the suit, it may adjourn the framing of the issues to a future day, to be fixed by the Court, and may (subject to the rules contained in the Indian Evidence Act) compel the attendance of any person or the production of any document by the person in whose hands it may be, by summons or other process.

Power to amend, add and strike out issues.

149. The Court may at any time before passing a decree amend the issues² or frame additional issues³ on such terms as it thinks fit, and all such amendments or additional issues as may be necessary for determining the controversy between the parties shall be so made or framed 4. .

The Court may also, at any time before passing a decree, strike out any issues that appear to it to be wrongly framed or introduced 5.

Questions of fact or agreement be stated issue.

- 150. When the parties to a suit are agreed as to the law may by question of fact or of law to be decided between them, they may state the same in the form of an issue, and enter into an in form of agreement in writing,
 - (a) that upon the finding of the Court in the affirmative or the negative of such issue, a sum of money specified in the agreement, or to be ascertained by the Court, or in such manner as the Court may direct, shall be paid by one of the

L. P. Act, 1852, and that a judge is not bound to make such amendments except for the purpose of more effectually putting in issues and trying the real question or questions in controversy.

- (c) that upon such finding one or more of the parties shall do or abstain from doing some particular act, specified in the agreement, and relating to the matter in dispute.
- 151. If the Court be satisfied, after making such inquiry Court, if as it deems proper, satisfied that agree-
 - (a) that the agreement was duly executed by the parties,
- (b) that they have a substantial interest in the decision of such question as aforesaid, and
 - (c) that the same is fit to be tried and decided, it may proceed to record and try the issue, and state its finding or opinion thereon in the same manner as if the issue had been framed by the Court; and may, upon the finding or decision on such issue, pronounce judgment according to the terms of the agreement; and upon the judgment so given, decree shall follow and may be executed in the same way as if the judgment had been pronounced in a contested suit.

If the finding is not sufficient for the decision, the Court shall postpone the further hearing of the suit, and shall fix a day for the production of such further evidence, or for such further argument, as the case requires.

If either party fails to produce his evidence, Court may pronounce judgment, or adjourn suit.

Expenses of witness paid into court.

160. The party applying for a summons shall, before the summons is granted and within a period to be fixed by the Court, pay into court such a sum of money as appears to the Court to be sufficient to defray the travelling and other expenses of the person summoned 1, in passing to and from the court in which he is required to attend, and for one day's attendance 2.

If the Court be subordinate to a High Court, regard shall be had, in fixing the scale of such expenses, to the rules (if any) laid down by competent authority 3.

Expenses if witness detained more than one day.

If it be necessary to detain the person summoned for a longer period than one day, the Court may, from time to time, order the party at whose instance he was summoned to pay into court such sum as is sufficient to defray the expenses of his detention for such further period, and, in default of such deposit being made, may order such sum to be levied by attachment and sale of the moveable property of the party at whose instance he was summoned; or the Court may discharge the person summoned without requiring him to give evidence:

CHAPTER XVIII. 11 OF COSTS.

Costs of applications.

218. When disposing of any application under this Code. the Court may give to either party the costs of such application 1, or may reserve the consideration of such costs for any future stage of the proceedings.

Judgment to direct by whom costs to be paid.

219. The judgment shall direct by whom the costs of each party are to be paid, whether by himself or by any other party to the suit 2, and whether in whole or in what part or proportion 3.

Power of Court as to costs.

220. The Court shall have full power to give and apportion costs of every application and suit in any manner it thinks fit 4, and the fact that the Court has no jurisdiction to try the case is no bar to the exercise of such power.

Provided that, if the Court directs that the costs of any application or suit shall not follow the event 5, the Court shall state its reasons in writing.

Every order relating to costs made under this Code and not forming part of a decree may be executed as if it were a decree for money.

1 The interlocutory order giving these costs is not affected by the general award of costs of the suit, 9 Cal. 797.

² Persons, therefore, not parties to the record cannot be subject to such an order, 7 Bom. 486, per Scott J. And the Court cannot e.g. declare that the costs shall be paid by the unsuccessful party in a future suit, 23 Suth. Civ. R. 89.

3 As e. g. where a plaintiff, claiming in respect of two distinct matters, succeeds as to one and fails as to the other, Marshall, 79.

⁴ But see supra, sec. 123, and infra, secs. 111, 379, par. 1, which to some extent limit this discretionary power. And the discretion must be exercised on fixed principles. Thus a successful appellant is, as a rule, entitled to his costs, 3 Cal. 473, 484: Exp. Masters, 1 Ch. Div. 113, and it may be said, generally, that where a party successfully enforces a legal right and is guilty of no misconduct, then (subject to sec. 22 of the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act, XV of 1882 he is entitled to costs, see Cooper v. Whittingham, 15 Ch. Div. 501. So. as a rule, is the mortgagee in a redemption suit, 8 Bom. 190. So is a party who has no interest in the suit (2 Suth. Civ. R. 33: 12 ibid. 444 . of has not opposed the plaintiff's claim $\partial$ ibid. 23), or disclaims (11 ibid. 48)

As to appeals from orders awarding costs, see 8 Cal. 91: 11 Cal. 359: 8 Bom. 368. In England such an order is appealable only when made on wrong principle, or when the costs are part of the relief to which a party is entitled, Daniell, 6th ed., 1274-5.

The Court which passed a decree may, on the application of the decree-holder, send it for execution to another Court,

The rules contained in this chapter apply also to the execution of any process for arrest, sale, or payment, which may be ordered by a civil court in any civil proceedings, sec. 649 infra.

The Court which passed a decree 1 may of its own motion send it for execution to any Court subordinate thereto 2.

The Court to which a decree is sent under this section for execution shall certify ³ to the Court which passed it the fact of such execution, or, where the former Court fails to execute the same, the circumstances attending such failure.

If the decree has been passed in a case cognisable by a Court of Small Causes and the Court which passed it ¹ wishes it to be executed in Calcutta, Madras, Bombay or Rangoon, such Court may send to the Court of Small Causes in Calcutta, Madras, Bombay or Rangoon, as the case may be, the copies and certificate respectively mentioned in clauses (a), (b), and (c) of section 224; and such Court of Small Causes shall thereupon execute the decree as if it had been passed by itself.

If the Court to which a decree is to be sent for execution is situate within the same district as the Court which passed such decree, such Court shall send the same directly to the former Court. But, if the Court to which the decree is to be sent for execution is situate in a different district, the Court which passed it shall send it to the District Court of the district in which the decree is to be executed.

An order directing accounts is not in the nature of a final decree and was therefore not an appealable order under the corresponding section of the Code of 1877, 9 Cal. 773. But the definition of a decree in the present Code expressly includes such orders. An order granting an application for the sale of certain property, to satisfy a sum which, in the course of certain execution proceedings has been found due to the applicant for mesne profits, is not appealable, 5 Cal. 50. Orders determining questions mentioned or referred to in this section and not specified in sec. 588 are 'decrees,' see the definition, p. 467, supra, and are appealable.

3 and were not claimed in the plaint: see sec. 13, expl. III, supra. A Court whose decree for possession of land has been reversed can order the land to be restored with the mesne profits accrued during such possession, 14 Cal. 484. And where the decree under which an execution sale has taken place is reversed, sec. 244 does not bar a suit for the purchase money, 13 Cal. 326.

4 As to the stamp see the Court Fees Act, infra, sched. II. art. 1. As to limitation, see sec. 230 supra, and Act XV of 1877, sched. II. art. 179.

⁵ 8 Cal. 479: 14 Cal. 124. An appeal lies from orders rejecting applications under this section, see sec. 588, cl. (11).

Procedure on admitting application. When the application is admitted, the Court shall enter in the register ¹ of the suit a note of the application and the date on which it was made, and shall order ² execution of the decree according to the nature of the application:

Provided that, in the case of a decree for money, the value of the property attached shall, as nearly as may be, correspond with the amount for which the decree has been made.

Cross-decrees. 246. If cross-decrees between the same parties³ for the payment of money be produced ⁴ to the Court, execution shall be taken out only by the party who holds a decree for the larger sum, and for so much only as remains after deducting the smaller sum, and satisfaction for the smaller sum shall be entered on the decree for the larger sum as well as satisfaction on the decree for the smaller sum ⁵.

If the two sums be equal, satisfaction shall be entered up on both decrees.

Explanation 1.—The decrees contemplated by this section are decrees capable of execution at the same time⁶ and by the same Court⁷.

Explanation II.—This section applies where either party is an assignee of one of the decrees, and as well in respect of judgment-debts due by the original assignor as in respect of judgment-debts due by the assignee himself.

Explanation III. This section does not apply unless the decree-holder in one of the suits in which the decrees have been made is the judgment-debtor in the other and each party fills the same character in both suits; and the sums due under the decrees are definite.

When A obtained a decree against C, and C obtained a decree against A and B, C could, if he chose, execute the second decree for the whole amount as against A. He is therefore equally entitled to execute in another way, i.e. by setting off the amount thereof as against A's decree, 9 Cal. 480, 481, following Mitchell v. Oldfield, 4 T. R. 123.

Modes of paying money under decree. 257. All money payable under a decree shall be paid as follows (namely)—

Agreement for satisfaction of judgmentdebt.

Every agreement for the satisfaction of a judgment-debt, which provides for the payment, directly or indirectly, of any sum in excess of the sum due or to accrue due under the decree, shall be void unless it is made with the like sanction⁷.

The judgment-debtor also may inform the Court of such payment or adjustment, and apply 4 to the Court to issue a notice to the decree-holder to show cause⁵, on a day to be fixed by the Court, why such payment or adjustment should not be recorded as certified; and if, after due service of such notice. the decree-holder fails to appear on the day fixed, or having appeared fails to show cause why the payment or adjustment should not be recorded as certified, the Court shall record the same accordingly.

4 A 'subsisting' decree is a decree unreversed and in full force, 7 Cal. 91, 96, not a decree the execution of which is not time-barred, 11 Cal. 376. Before the purchaser applies to the court to confirm the sale and grant him a certificate, he ought to ascertain that the decree under which the sale was ordered is still in existence, 2 Bom. 540. When a sale takes place under a decree, which at the time of sale is in force, the subsequent reversal of the decree on appeal or review does not vitiate the sale, 5 Ben. 70. If the Court is not so satisfied, it shall make an order ³ rejecting the application ⁴.

Creditors to prove their debts.

352. The creditors mentioned in the application, and the other persons (if any) alleging themselves to be creditors of the insolvent, shall then ⁵ produce evidence of the amount and particulars of their respective pecuniary claims against him; and the Court shall by order ³ determine the persons who have proved themselves to be the insolvent's creditors and their respective debts; and shall frame a schedule of such persons and debts; and the declaration under section 351 shall be deemed to be a decree in favour of each of the said creditors for their said respective debts ⁶.

The creditors must prove their debts if they intend to dispute the insolvent's statement in his application, and, on default, the Court ought to frame a schedule with reference to the particulars contained in the application, subject, however, to amendment, if necessary, under sec. 353, ibid.

⁷ This is in accordance with Read v. Bailey, 3 App. Ca. 94.

In the case of any application under this section, the Court, after causing such notices as it thinks fit to be served, at the applicant's expense, on the insolvent and the other creditors, and hearing their objections, if any, may comply with or reject the application.

354. On the plaint being filed, A pays the money into court. B accepts it in full satisfaction of his claim, but the Court should not allow him any costs, the litigation being presumably groundless on his part.

(b) B sues A under the circumstances mentioned in Illustration (a). On the plaint being filed, A disputes the claim. Afterwards A pays the money into court. B accepts it in full satisfaction of his claim. The Court should also give B his costs of suit, A's conduct having shown that the litigation was necessary.

(c) A owes B rs. 100 and is willing to pay him that sum without suit. B claims is 150 and sues A for that amount. On the plaint being filed, A pays rs. 100 into court and disputes only his liability to pay the remaining rs. 50. B accepts the rs. 100 in full satisfaction of his claim. The Court should order him to pay A's costs.

OF COMMISSIONS.

A.—Commissions to Examine Witnesses.

Cases in which Court may issue commission to examine witness.

383. Any Court may ¹ in any suit issue a commission ² for the examination on interrogatories or otherwise of persons resident within the local limits of its jurisdiction, who are exempted under this Code from attending the Court ³, or who are from sickness or infirmity unable to attend it ⁴.

Witness residing in Court's jurisdiction. 385. The commission for the examination of a person who resides within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court issuing the same may be issued to any person whom the Court thinks fit to execute the same.

Persons for whose examination commission may issue.

Commissions issued by foreign Courts.

- 391. The provisions hereinbefore contained as to the execution and return of commissions shall apply to commissions issued by

B.—Commissions for Local Investigations.

Commission to make local investigations.

In any suit or proceeding in which the Court deems a local investigation to be requisite or proper for the purpose of elucidating any matter in dispute ¹, or of ascertaining the market-value of any property, or the amount of any mesne profits, or damages or annual nett profits, and the same cannot be conveniently conducted by the Judge in person, the Court may ² issue a commission ³ to such person as it thinks fit, directing him to make such investigation ⁴ and to report thereon to the Court:

D.—Commission to make Partition.

Commission to make partition of non-revenue-paying immove-able property.

Procedure of Commissioners.

396. In any suit in which the partition of immoveable property not paying revenue to Government appears to the Court to be necessary, the Court, after ascertaining the several parties interested in such property and their several rights therein, may issue a commission to such persons as it thinks fit to make a partition according to such rights.

The Commissioners¹ shall ascertain and inspect the property, and shall divide the same into as many shares as may be directed by the order under which the commission issues, and shall allot such shares to the parties², and may, if authorised thereto by the said order, award sums to be paid for the purpose of equalising the value of the shares³.

The Commissioners shall then prepare and sign a report, or (if they cannot agree) separate reports, appointing the share of each party, and distinguishing each share (if so directed by the said order) by metes and bounds. Such report or reports shall be annexed to the commission and transmitted to the Court; and the Court, after hearing any objections which the parties may make to the report or reports, shall either quash the same and issue a new commission, or (where the Commissioners agree in their report) pass a decree in accordance therewith 4.

E.—General Provisions.

Expenses of commission to be paid into court. 397. Before issuing any commission under this chapter, the Court may order such sum (if any) as it thinks reasonable for the expenses of the commission to be, within a time to be when the Commissioner was empowered by consent of parties to decide on all questions of fact, see L. R., 1 I. A. 346.

As the plural includes the singular (Act I of 1868, sec. 2, cl. 2), Pontifex J. held that there may be only one Commissioner, 7 Cal. 318. But the clause referred to does not operate where there is any repugnancy in the context, and the third paragraph of sec. 396 clearly intends that there shall be at least two Commissioners.

² In Bengal the Commissioners should follow as far as possible the rules laid down in Ben. Reg. XIX of 1814, 17 Suth. Civ. R. 137.

³ The principle in these cases is that, if the property can be divided without destroying the intrinsic value of the whole property, or of the shares, such division ought to be made. If, on the contrary, no division can be made without destroying the intrinsic value, then a money compensation should be given, 10 Cal. 676.

For the purposes of this section, the Commissioner shall be deemed to be a Court of Civil Judicature.

If the parties do not so appear 2 the Commissioner may pro-Procedure ex part e. ceed ex parte 3.

has been decided in Calcutta (Bourke, O. C. J. 24) that the Commissioners under a commission to make partition have no lien on the return for their fees. See Young v. Sutton, 2 V. & B. 365.

No alien enemy residing in British India without such permission, or residing in a foreign country, shall sue in any of such Courts.

OF PROCEEDINGS ON AGREEMENT OF PARTIES.

- 527. Parties claiming to be interested in the decision of Power to any question of fact or law may enter into an agreement in state case writing stating such question in the form of a case for the opinion. opinion of the Court 5, and providing that, upon the finding of the Court with respect to such question,
- (a) a sum of money fixed by the parties, or to be determined by the Court, shall be paid by one of the parties to the other of them; or
- (b) some property, moveable or immoveable, specified in the agreement, shall be delivered by one of the parties to the other of them; or
- (c) one or more of the parties shall do, or refrain from doing, some other particular act specified in the agreement.
- 1 i.e. allege and prove to the satisfaction of the Court, 6 Bom. 633, followed in 9 Cal. 575, 11 Cal. 166. But the Calcutta High Court has held that it is enough to show by affidavit or verified petition that the award is impugned for any of the reasons mentioned in sec. 520 or sec. 521; 9 Cal. 560.

² When the Court refuses to file the award no appeal lies, 7 Cal. 490: 6 All. 186.

- ³ The power to file the award includes the power to inquire if there was a submission to arbitration; and the question of fact whether the submission was made is, like any other question of fact essential to the validity of the award, concluded by the decree, 4 Mad. 319, 320.
- ⁴ The meaning of the last seventeen words is that the Court, after ordering the award to be filed, shall do as directed in sec. 522; 2 All. 473. No appeal lies against an order under this section, 9 Bom. 85: 10 Cal. 11 and 74. The Court has no power to send back the award. But the party to be benefited can sue on an award which the Court refuses to file, 9 Bom. 86. Where the objection gives rise to difficult questions, the applicant should be left to a regular suit on the award, 9 Bom. 254, which of course may be brought, 8 Mad. H. C. 81.
- ⁵ The case must be upon a real, not a hypothetical, state of facts, Republic of Boliviav. National Bolivian Navigation Co., 24 W. R. 361.

Every case stated under this section shall be divided into consecutively numbered paragraphs, and shall concisely state such facts and documents as may be necessary to enable the Court to decide the question raised thereby 1.

When value of subject-matter must be stated.

528. If the agreement is for the delivery of any property, or for the doing, or the refraining from doing, any particular act, the estimated value of the property to be delivered, or to which the act specified has reference, shall be stated in the agreement.

Agreement filed and numbered as suit.

529. The agreement, if framed in accordance with the rules hereinbefore contained, may be filed in the Court which would have jurisdiction to entertain a suit, the amount or value of the subject-matter of which is the same as the amount or value of the subject-matter of the agreement ².

The agreement, when so filed, shall be numbered and registered as a suit between one or more of the parties claiming to be interested, as plaintiff or plaintiffs, and the other or others of them as defendant or defendants; and notice shall be given to all the parties to the agreement, other than the party or parties by whom it was presented.

Parties to be subject to Court's jurisdiction. Hearing and disposal of case.

- 530. When the agreement has been filed, the parties to it shall be subject to the jurisdiction of the Court, and shall be bound by the statements contained therein.
- 531. The case shall be set down for hearing as a suit instituted under Chapter V, the provisions of which shall apply to such suit so far as the same are applicable.

If the Court is satisfied, after an examination of the parties, or after taking such evidence as it thinks fit,

- (a) that the agreement was duly executed by them, and
- (b) that they have a bond fide interest in the question stated therein, and
- (c) that the same is fit to be decided, it shall proceed to pronounce judgment thereon, in the same way as in an ordinary suit, and upon the judgment so given a decree shall follow and shall be enforced in the manner provided in this Code for the execution of decrees.

³ The Code allows an appeal against a portion of the decision; but this supposes that there is a decision relating to the disposal of the entire suit, 3 Mad. 13. There is no appeal from a judgment or any part thereof, 6 Cal. 208, but see ibid. 303. OF REFERENCE TO AND REVISION BY THE HIGH COURT.

Reference of question to High Court.

617. If before or on the hearing of a suit or an appeal in which the decree is final1, or if in the execution of any such decree, any question of law or usage having the force of law, or the construction of a document, which construction may affect the merits, arises, on which the Court trying the suit or appeal, or executing the decree, entertains reasonable doubt, the Court may, either of its own motion or on the application of any of the parties, draw up a statement of the facts of the case and the point on which doubt is entertained, and refer such statement with its own opinion on the point for the decision of the High Court.

Judgment of High Court to be transmitted, and case disposed of accordingly.

619. The High Court shall hear the parties to the case in which the reference is made, in person or by their respective pleaders, and shall decide the point so referred, and shall transmit a copy of its judgment, under the signature of the Registrar, to the Court by which the reference was made; and

But in 8 All. 112 two learned Judges thought that 'illegally' here referred to the grounds specified in clauses (a) and (b) of sec. 584. A 'material irregularity' has been held to be a departure from a rule which has prevented an investigation being made such as would enable a right or duty to be established in the way contemplated by the Code, or which has given effect, or refused effect, to particular rights in ways quite different from what it prescribes, 7 Bom. 358; and see 6 All. 125, where the lower Court improperly refused to amend a decree which was at variance with the judgment. In 3 All. 205, Straight J. held that 'acted &c. illegally or with material irregularity' meant 'decided erroneously in point of law, or irregularly in a material particular in respect of procedure. ¹ The Indian Evidence Act does not apply to affidavits presented to any Court or officer.

This section does not authorise the Court to attach any property which it is not authorised to attach by any other part of the Code, though it permits the Court to transmit its order (where such order may be made) for execution beyond the local limits of its jurisdiction, 8 Mad. 20.

or the sale of property or payment of money, which may be process for desired or ordered by a Civil Court in any civil proceeding 1. or pay-

In the same chapter, the expression 'Court which passed a ment. decree,' or words to that effect, shall, unless there is something repugnant in the context, be deemed to include, where the decree to be executed is passed in appeal, the Court which passed the decree against which the appeal was preferred, and, where the Court which passed the decree to be executed has ceased to exist 2 or to have jurisdiction to execute it 3, the Court which, if the suit wherein the decree was passed were instituted at the time of making application for execution of the decree, would have jurisdiction to try such suit 4.

650. The provisions of chapters XIV and XV relating to Applicawitnesses shall apply to all persons required to give evidence tion of rules as to or to produce documents in any proceeding under this Code.

650 A. Summonses issued by any Civil or Revenue Court Service of situate beyond the limits of British India may be sent to the foreign Courts in British India and served as if they had been issued monses. by such Courts: provided that the Courts issuing such summonses have been established or continued 5 by the authority of ¹ This includes the execution of a judgment entered up under sec. 86 of the Indian Insolvent Act (11 & 12 Vic. e. 21), 8 Bom. 511.

3 This does not apply to the appellate side of the High Court, though it does not, as a general rule, execute its own decrees or orders, but directs them to be executed by one or other of the mufassal Courts subordinate to its jurisdiction, 6 Cal. 201. The words 'ceased.. to have jurisdiction to execute it' meet such cases as this: an Additional or Subordinate Judge attached to districts A and B having passed a decree in district A leaves A, and sits in district B under the provisions of the Bengal Civil Courts Act, sec. 15. Such a Court sitting in B has not ceased to 'exist,' but has ceased to have jurisdiction to execute that particular decree, 6 Cal. 519.

⁴ Therefore, where the Court which passed the decree has ceased to have jurisdiction to execute it, the application for execution may be made either to that Court or to the Court which, if the suit wherein the decree was passed were instituted at the time of applying, would have jurisdiction to try the suit, 6 Cal. 515.

Act VII of 1888, sec. 62.

the Governor General in Council, or that the Governor General in Council has, by notification in the Gazette of India, declared the provisions of this section to apply to such Courts ¹.

The Governor General in Council may, by like notification, cancel any notification made under this section, but not so as to invalidate the service of any summons served previous to such cancellation.

651. Repealed by Act X of 1886.

Power to make subsidiary rules of procedure. 652. The High Court may, from time to time, make rules consistent with this Code to regulate any matter connected with its own procedure or the procedure of the Courts of Civil Judicature subject to its superintendence. All such rules shall be published in the local official Gazette, and shall thereupon have the force of law ².

APPENDIX.

The following list of places outside British India, in which the Code of Civil Procedure is in force, is probably incomplete.

Haidarábád Assigned Districts. The whole Act, except sec. 185, is in force in the Haidarábád Assigned Districts, Gazette of India, 5th May, 1883, Part I, p. 200. A list of the rules made under it will be found in Macpherson's Lists of British Enactments in force in Native States, 1885, pp. 52, 53.

Bangalore.

Mysore.

The whole Act, except chapter XLV and secs. 430-433, 586, 631-638, is in force, with some modifications, in the civil and military station of Bangalore. For the rest of Mysore, the Mahárájá has passed a regulation (II of 1884) applying the Code with modifications.

Rájputána.

. The whole Act is in force in the parganas in the Rájputána Agency under British administration (Todgarh, Dewair, Saroth, Chang, and Kot-Karana):

Quetta.

In the district of Quetta, the Code is to be 'taken as a general guide in the administration of civil justice.'

Cantonments. The whole Act except sec. 185 is in force in the cantonment of Sikandarábád, with certain modifications (Macpherson's Lists, ubi supra, pp. 150–153). The whole Act is in force in the cantonments of Dísah, Nímach and Ábu. The whole Act, except chapter XLV, is in force in the cantonment of Naogaon.

Railways.

As to Railways constructed in or passing through Native States see Macpherson's Lists, 1885, pp. 271-274.

Akalkót.

The whole Act is in force in Akalkot and the jágír territories of the State of Játh.

Zanzibar.

By the Zanzibar Order in Council of 1884, the Code is made applicable to Zanzibar as from the commencement of the Order. Subject to the other provisions of the Order, the Code has effect as if Zanzibar were a District in the Presidency of Bombay; the Consul-General is deemed the District Judge of the district, and his Court the District Court or principal civil court of original jurisdiction in the district; the High Court of Bombay is deemed to be the highest civil court of appeal for the district and the Court authorised to hear appeals from the decisions of the District Court; and the powers both of the Governor-General in Council and the Local Government under those enactments shall be exercisable by the Secretary of State, or with his previous or subsequent assent, by the Governor-General of India in Council.

INTRODUCTION TO THE EVIDENCE ACT.

'EVIDENCE,' in the language of English and Indian lawyers. is that which is offered by litigants in order to convince the Judge that the facts alleged by them are true, or so probable that he ought under the circumstances to act upon the supposition that those facts are true. Evidence sufficient to produce the desired conviction is said to amount to 'proof.'

Besides framing substantive laws (such as those contained in the Need o first volume of this work) and establishing forms of judicial procedure, all civilised states have found it necessary (1) to limit the discretion of judges in declaring facts proved or disproved, (2) to provide for speedy decisions and at the same time to guard the judges from error, (3) to preclude needless vexation and expense in coming to such decisions, and (4) to preclude injury to the State or the public 1. It will be found that in India as in England all rules relating to Evidence and Proof are intended to attain one or other of these objects. Thus, to limit the discretion of judges we have the rules that a judge must not decide a fact on his own personal knowledge, and that nothing may be proved save a fact in issue or a fact relevant to the issue. provide for speedy decisions we have the rules as to burden of proof, presumptions, and judicial notice. To guard these decisions so far as possible from error we have the rule that the best evidence should be produced. To preclude vexation and expense there are the rules as to witnesses and admissions. To preclude injury to the State or the public we have the rules as to affairs of State and information as to the commission of offences.

In framing a law of Evidence, especially one that has to be administered by non-professional judges, the legislature should have especial regard to the following four matters: (1) the completeness and intelligibility of the system, (2) its harmony with the substantive law, (3) the customs and habits of the society for which it is intended, (4) the standard of truth among the population.

How far these matters have been attended to by the Indian legislature, and how much remains to be done in this direction, will appear from the following remarks, which, first, give a sketch of the Indian legislation relating to evidence from 1793 to the present time; then point out the principal discrepancies between the present Indian and the English laws of evidence; thirdly, mention certain omissions in Act I of 1872, which contains the bulk of the Indian rules on the subject; and, lastly, state some local peculiarities which should be borne in mind when that Act is criticised or revised.

I. Legislation respecting Evidence.

Legislation respecting the Indian law of evidence.

Since the establishment of the Supreme Courts in Calcutta, Madras and Bombay, and probably since the establishment of their predecessors the Recorders' Courts, the English rules of evidence have always been followed in the Presidency towns, and several of the reforms made in England by Parliament were from time to time applied to the Supreme Courts by the Governor-General in Council. Thus Act IX of 1840 and Act VII of 1844 abolished incompetency on the ground of crime or interest. And Act XV of 1852 enabled parties to give evidence except in criminal proceedings and proceedings for adultery or breach of promise.

But in the Mufassal, where the Courts were not required to follow the English law as such, though they were not debarred from following it where they regarded it as the most equitable, there prevailed, in addition to a few rules expressly prescribed by the Regulations made between 1793 and 1834, a vague customary law of evidence, partly drawn from the Hedáya and the Muhammadan law-officers; partly from English text-books and the arguments of the English barristers who occasionally appeared in the provincial Courts; partly from the lectures on law delivered since 1855 in the Presidency towns.

Bengal Regulations as to evidence. There is little in the old Regulations applicable to evidence. Under Ben. Reg. III of 1793, sec. 15, a bond must be proved by two witnesses to the signature unless the consideration is proved. But much documentary evidence was received without any proof unless objected to, such as copies of judicial proceedings appearing to be authenticated by the signature of the proper officer, and copies of English correspondence from the Collectors or other Government officers, similarly authenticated. Even copies of copies were so received?

² First report of commissioners appointed to consider the reforms of the judicial establishments etc. of India. Appendix B, no. 3, p. 199.

Rules as to witnesses, corresponding generally with those contained in the present Codes of Criminal and Civil Procedure. were made by the following Bengal Regulations: IV of 1703, sees. 6 and 14: IX of 1796, secs. 2, 3, and 4: IV of 1797, sec. 7: VIII of 1803, sec. 25: L of 1803, secs. 2, 3 and 4: III of 1812, sec. 2: XXIII of 1814, secs. 33 and 73; and XXIV of 1814, sec. 11.

In Madras also rules relating to this subject were contained Madras in several Regulations 1. Exhibits not stamped as required by law Regulawere excluded by Madras Regs. VI of 1816, s. 35, and VII of 1816, s. 15. Evidence declared by the Muhammadan law-officer to be inadmissible is dealt with by Regs. I of 1825, s. 8, and VI of 1820, In Bombay some rules as to witnesses in civil proceedings Bombay were made by Bom. Reg. IV of 1827 2, and rules as to witnesses Regulain criminal proceedings were prescribed by Regs. XII 3 and XIII 4 tions. of the same year. All persons who had arrived at years of discretion and were of sane mind were made competent witnesses by Bom. Regs. IV of 1827, s. 33, and XIII of 1827, s. 35. And the section last mentioned contains provisions (wanting in the present law) as to irrational animals and inanimate objects produced in elucidation of the case.

The first Act of the Governor-General in Council which dealt Acts as with evidence as above defined was Act X of 1835, which applied evidence to all the Courts in British India, and declared that Acts passed X of 18, by the Governor-General in Council might be proved by the production of the Government Gazette purporting to contain it. This was followed by cleven enactments passed at intervals during the next twenty years, which effected various small amendments of the law. Thus:-

Act XIX of 1837, which applied to all the Courts in British XIX of India, declared that no person should be incompetent as a witness 1837. by reason of conviction for any offence.

Act V of 1840 permitted Hindús and Muhammadans to make in V of 18. judicial proceedings affirmations instead of the oaths or declarations then in use. This Act did not extend to the Supreme Courts. But it was extended to their successors, the High Courts, by Act XVIII of 1863, s. 9; and Act VI of 1872 made three amendments of the law relating to judicial oaths. It enabled every witness who objected to take an oath to make a simple affirmation. It declared that no irregularity in administering an oath or making an affirmation should invalidate the proceedings. It provided that if a witness was willing to take an oath in a form binding on persons of his own race or persuasion, and not repugnant to justice or decency, the Court might administer such an oath. Evidence given under the sanction of such an oath was made, as against the witness, conclusive proof of the matter stated. This Act was repealed and reenacted by Act X of 1873, which consolidated the law on the subject of judicial oaths, and abolished official caths except such as were prescribed by statutes which the Indian legislature could not repeal.

IX of 1840.

Act IX of 1840 declared that if a witness in any of the Supreme Courts were objected to on the ground that the verdict or judgment would be admissible in evidence for or against him, he might be examined, and the verdict or judgment should not be so admissible. The object of this enactment, which was taken from 3 & 4 Will. IV. chap. 42, was to render less frequent the rejection of witnesses on the ground of interest.

VII of 1844. Act VII of 1844 declared that within the local jurisdiction of the Supreme Court no person should be excluded from giving evidence by reason of crime or interest. But this was not to render competent parties, or those on whose immediate behalf an action was brought or defended.

XVof 1852.

Act XV of 1852 made several amendments in the law of evidence as administered in the Supreme Courts. It established the competency of parties to give evidence, except in criminal proceedings and proceedings for adultery or breach of promise of marriage. It enabled the judges to compel parties to allow inspection of documents. It made acts of State and judicial proceedings provable by certified copies without proof of seal or signature. It made the register of British ships and certificates of registry admissible without proof of signature. It dispensed with the production of the record of a conviction or acquittal.

XIX of 1853.

Act XIX of 1853 extended several of these reforms to the civil courts of the East India Companyin the Bengal Presidency. It made parties to suits competent as witnesses, abolished incompetency on the ground of interest and relationship, enabled husband and wife to give evidence for or against each other, declared that a party might be compelled to give evidence and produce documents (sec. 5), exempted from production witnesses' title-deeds and documents relating to affairs of State (secs. 19, 20), and declared that a party was not bound to produce documents, not material nor relevant, nor any writing which had passed between him and his professional adviser. It privileged communications between clients and their professional advisers, and enabled the Court to compel any person present to give evidence and produce documents as if he were summoned. Section 26, rendering absconding witnesses liable for damages, is the only part of this Act which has not been repealed.

This was the state of the law down to 1855. But in that year the Indian legislature passed Act II of 1855 (for the further II of 1855. improvement of the law of evidence), which was introduced by Sir Lawrence Peel and carried by Sir James Colvile. This Act, though totally devoid of arrangement, was skilfully worded, and contained many valuable provisions, which applied to all Courts in British India. It declared that judicial notice should be taken of all Regulations passed before 22 April, 1834, all Acts of the Governor-General in Council, public Acts of Parliament, the Court's own members and officers, the names, titles and authorities of the Governor-General and other specified officers, divisions of time, geographical divisions, war and peace, the existence, title and national flag of States recognised by the British Government (secs. 2-6), government gazettes (secs. 7, 8), recitals in laws of facts of a public nature (sec. 9), advertisements purporting to be published by authority (sec. 10). Courts might refer to books, mans, and charts (secs. 6 and 11). Foreign codes and reports were made admissible as evidence of foreign law (sec. 12). Maps made under the authority of government or of any public municipal body, when not prepared for the purpose of any litigated question, were admitted without further proof (sec. 13). only persons incompetent to testify were declared to be children under seven years and insane persons, who appeared incapable of receiving just impressions of the facts respecting which they were examined, or of relating them truly (sec. 14). A simple affirmation was substituted for oaths or solemn affirmations in the case of children and persons of defective religious belief (secs. 15, 16). No one was to be incompetent from interest or relationship (sec. 18). Parties to civil suits might be examined as witnesses (sec. 19). Husbands and wives were declared competent in every civil proceeding to give evidence for or against each other (sec. 20). Witnesses were exempted from producing documents relating to affairs of State or held by them for any other person who would not be bound to produce them if in his own possession (sec. 21). Parties were exempted from producing documents not relevant to the case of the party requiring production, and confidential correspondence with legal advisers (sec. 22). Barristers, attorneys and vakils were not, without their clients' consent, to disclose professional communications (sec. 24). Persons present in court were bound to give evidence though not subpænaed (sec. 25). Persons summoned merely to produce documents were exempted from personal attendance (sec. 26). The evidence of one witness was made sufficient proof, except in cases of treason (sec. 28); but the Act did not dispense with corroborative evidence in support of the testimony of an accomplice or of a single witness in the case of perjury. Dying declarations were made admissible though the declarant expected to recover (sec. 29). party was allowed with the leave of the Court to cross-examine and discredit his own witness (sec. 30). Certain former statements of witnesses were made admissible to corroborate their testimony (sec. 31). Witnesses were bound to answer criminating questions, but the answer was not to be used against them unless they wilfully gave false evidence (sec. 32). A witness might be asked whether he had been convicted of any crime (sec. 33), and he might be crossexamined as to previous statements made by him in writing (sec. 34). Copies by a copying machine were to be deemed correct (sec. 35). Secondary evidence might be received where an original document was out of reach of process (sec. 36). Documents unnecessarily attested might be proved as if unattested (sec. 37). The admission of a party to an attested instrument of its execution by himself was made as against him prima facie proof of such execution (sec. 38). Entries made against interest or in the course of business were declared in certain cases admissible in the lifetime of the person making them (sec. 30). Entries in the course of business were in certain cases made admissible for the purpose of identifying the payer or receiver (sec. 40). Receipts were made admissible against certain persons other than the giver (secs. 41, 42). Certain books and other documents were made admissible as corroborative evidence (secs. 43, 44). Witnesses were allowed to refresh their memory by certain documents or copies thereof (secs. 45, 46). In cases of pedigree, declarations of bastards and intimate acquaintances were admitted (sec. 47). On the question of the genuineness of a signature, etc., comparison of an undisputed signature etc. was allowed (sec. 48). A power of attorney purporting to have been executed before a notary public etc. might in certain cases be proved by its production (sec. 49). The despatch and receipt of a letter might be proved by letter-books and the receipt-book (secs. 50, 51). An official document admissible by law was made prima facie evidence without proof of any seal etc. which it was directed to have (sec. 56). Lastly, the improper admission or rejection of evidence was not to be ground for a new trial where there was other evidence to justify the decision (sec. 57). These provisions were repealed and re-enacted by the Indian Evidence Act, 1872.

Act X of 1855 (to amend the law relating to the attendance and X of 1855. examination of witnesses in the Civil Courts of the East India Company in the Presidencies of Fort St. George and Bombay) provided, amongst other things, that a person not obeying a summons to attend and give evidence or produce a document should be liable for damages in a civil action (sec. 10). This provision is still in force.

Act VIII of 1859 (secs. 149-182), like the present Code of Civil VIII of Procedure, contained provisions as to summoning witnesses (secs. 1859. 149-160), examination of parties (secs. 161-166), attendance of witnesses (secs. 167-171), examination of witnesses in court (secs. 172-174), and commissions to examine witnesses (secs. 175-182).

Act XXV of 1861—the first edition of the Code of Criminal XXV of Procedure—contained provisions as to confessions to, or in the 1861. custody of, the police; the diaries of police-officers; the examinations of the accused, the civil surgeon, and dead witnesses; the reports of chemical officers, and dying declarations, which have been re-enacted in the Evidence Act or in the present Code. It also prescribed rules as to the summoning and examination of witnesses and the record and interpretation of their depositions, resembling those contained in Act X of 1882.

Act XV of 1869 provides facilities for obtaining the evidence XVof1869, and appearance in court of prisoners, and for service of process upon them.

It thus appears that down to 1872 the mufassal Courts had I of 1872 hardly any fixed rules of evidence save those contained in Act (the Indian Evidence XIX of 1853 and II of 1855. The Commissioners appointed Act). in England to prepare a body of substantive law for India (ignoring the fact that their commission did not comprise adjective law) accordingly framed a draft code, which in October 1868 was introduced by Mr. (afterwards Sir H.) Maine, and referred to a Select Committee, as a Bill to define and amend the law of evidence. This Bill was published and circulated to local authorities in the usual manner. But it was pronounced by some competent persons to be unsuited to India. It was far from complete: it was illarranged: it was not elementary enough for the officers for whose use it was designed; and it assumed an acquaintance with the law of England which could scarcely be expected from them. A new Bill was therefore prepared by Mr. (now Sir James) Stephen, Mr. Maine's successor, which was printed, circulated, and very freely criticised. Mr. Stephen accordingly recast it, and it ultimately Act II 1855 continu passed as Act I of 1872 (the Indian Evidence Act). This enactment purports to consolidate, define, and amend the whole law of Evidence with the following three exceptions:—

- (a) the law of evidence applying to affidavits presented to any Court or officer:
- (b) the law of evidence applying to proceedings before an arbitrator; (see 4 Cal. 231):
- (c) the rules of Evidence contained in any Statute, Act, or Regulation in force in any part of British India, and not expressly repealed by the Indian Evidence Act of 1872.

Arrangement of the Evidence Act.

The Act is divided into three Parts, the first, entitled 'Relevancy of Facts,' and containing besides some sections on relevancy, the short title, repealing clause, definitions, and other preliminary matter; the second, entitled 'On Proof'; the third, 'Production and effect of Evidence.'

The following tabular scheme of the Act is taken from Sir James Stephen's edition, Calcutta, 1872. The numbers are those of the chapters and sections which treat of the matter referred to.

'The object of legal proceedings is the determination of rights and liabilities which depend on facts

. defined, ch. xi.'

The Act contains 167 sections, many of which are obviously sug- Sources of gested by Mr. Taylor's well-known work on Evidence1. Of the the Act. residue some are taken, with slight alterations, from Act II of 1855²; others from the Code of Criminal Procedure of 1861³; others from the Commissioners' draft above-mentioned 4. The remaining ten sections, 6-16, deal with the subject of the relevancy of facts The secin judicial evidence, and are, in Sir James Stephen's own words, tions on relevancy. by far the most important, as they are the most original part of the Evidence Act, as they affirm positively what facts may be proved, whereas the English law assumes this to be known, and merely declares negatively that certain facts shall not be proved 5.

But it will appear on examination that these sections were framed under the erroneous supposition that relevancy means the connexion of events as cause and effect: that they do not give the theory of relevancy in its simplest form 5: that they do not show in themselves the principle on which they have been founded: that one of them (sec. 8), so far as it deals with the admissibility of evidence of statements, has nothing to do with relevancy strictly so called: that two of them (secs. 10 and 12) are special rules covered by other sections; and that other two of them (secs. 7, 11) are so drawn as to permit evidence of matter wholly irrelevant.

As to section 11, the following remarks of Mr. Justice West may Section 11. 'This section,' says that able Judge, 'is expressed in terms so extensive that any fact which can, by a chain of ratiocination, be brought into connexion with another, so as to have a bearing upon a point in issue, may possibly be held to be relevant within its meaning. But the connexions of human affairs are so infinitely various and so far reaching, that thus to take the section in its widest admissible sense, would be to complicate every trial with a mass of collateral inquiries limited only by the patience and the means of the parties. One of the objects of a law of Evidence is to restrict the investigations made by Courts within the bounds pre-

² Thus sec. 167 is copied from Act II of 1855, sec. 57. From the same Act also are derived secs. 18, 37, 57, clauses 1, 2, 7, 9, and 13: secs. 81, 83, 84, 118, 120, 123, 124, 126, 129, 131 and 162.

³ Secs. 25, 26, 27 are copied from Act XXV of 1861, secs. 148, 149, 150.

⁴ Sec. 57, clauses 8, 10, 11, and sec. 12, as to judicial notice, are taken from the Commissioners' draft, secs. 36 and 37.

scribed by general convenience, and this object would be completely frustrated by the admission, on all occasions, of every circumstance on either side having some remote and conjectural probative force, the precise amount of which might itself be ascertainable only by a long trial and a determination of fresh collateral issues, growing up in endless succession, as the inquiry proceeded.' Similar remarks may be made as to the words in section 7, 'or which constitute the state of things under which they happened.'

Section 7.

Mr. Whitworth's rules as to relevancy.

Sir James Stephen himself admits, with praiseworthy candour, that his theory 'was expressed too widely in certain parts, and not widely enough in others';' and in a pamphlet, published in Bombay in 1875, Mr. G. C. Whitworth, of the Bombay Civil Service, proposed to replace them by the following four rules:—

Rule I.—No fact is relevant which does not make the existence of a fact in issue more likely or unlikely, and that to such a degree as the Judge considers will aid him in deciding the issue.

Rule II.—Subject to Rule I, the following facts are relevant:—

- (1) Facts which are part of, or which are implied by, a fact in issue; or which show the absence of what might be expected as a part of, or would seem to be implied by, a fact in issue;
- (2) Facts which are a cause, or which show the absence of what might be expected as a cause, of a fact in issue;
- (3) Facts which are an effect, or which show the absence of what might be expected as an effect, of a fact in issue;
- (4) Facts which are an effect of a cause, or which show the absence of what might be expected as an effect of a cause, of a fact in issue.

Rule III.—Facts which affirm or deny the relevancy of facts alleged to be relevant under Rule II are relevant.

Rule IV.—Facts relevant to relevant facts are relevant.

Mr. Whitworth then takes the forty-nine illustrations given in the Evidence Act to the sections treating of relevancy, and shows that those illustrations are applicable to his own rules. He thus, in Sir James Stephen's opinion, 'corrected and completed,' in a judicious manner,' the theory expressed in the Act; and in the earlier editions of the Digest of the Law of Evidence, Sir James Stephen gives the following definition of relevancy, as taken, with some verbal alterations, from Mr. Whitworth's pamphlet:—

Sir James Stephen's definitions of relevancy.

'Facts, whether in issue are not, or relevant to each other when one is, or probably may be, or probably may have been—the cause of the other; the effect of the other;

an effect of the same cause;

a cause of the same effect:

or when the one shows that the other must or cannot have occurred, or probably does or did exist, or not;

or that any fact does or did exist, or not, which in the common course of events would either have caused or have been caused by the other;

provided that such facts do not fall within the exclusive rules contained in Chapters III, IV, V, VI; or that they do fall within the exceptions to those rules contained in those chapters.'

For this, in the fifth edition of his Digest, Sir James Stephen has substituted the following definition as a convenient practical rule:—'The word "relevant" means that any two facts to which it is applied are so related to each other that according to the common course of events one, either taken by itself or in connexion with other facts, proves or renders probable the past, present, or future existence or non-existence of the other.'

Act I of 1872 repealed Act II of 1855 in toto; and soon after XVIII of the former Act came into force it was found that it had thus inad-1872 vertently abolished the power given by sec. 12 of the elder enactment to courts, commissioners and arbitrators to administer oaths. Act XVIII of 1872 was accordingly passed to revive this power and to make sixteen other comparatively trifling amendments.

Act III of 1887 extended to Revenue officers the privilege IIIof1882. conferred on the magistrates and police by sec. 125 of Act I of 1872.

The Evidence Act has been, as will appear from the footnotes, Defects in and still more from commentaries such as Mr. Field's, been the the Evisubject of a large number of judicial decisions, which have pointed dence Act. out many defects both in form and substance-defects which, it may be supposed, caused Parliament to declare Act I of 1872 inapplicable to European Courts Martial held in India 1, and thus to make an important exception to the rule that the lex fori governs the laws of evidence. The Indian legislature, however, has hitherto only passed two Acts expressly to amend Amending it, namely, XVIII of 1872 and III of 1887, the former of which Acts. merely corrected some slips in drafting, and the latter merely extended to Revenue officers the privilege above mentioned. But Special the following lists of the special and local enactments which are and local saved by section 2 of the principal Act will be found to comprise a large number of laws which have been made since 1872 and which, together with the beneficent legislation of the Indian judiciary, II. Differences between the English and the Indian Laws of Evidence.

Having thus given a sketch of the legislation relating to Evidence in India, we have now to note the principal differences between the English and the Indian laws on this subject. For convenience of reference the order of the sections of the Indian Evidence Act will here be followed.

- 1. In England the particulars of the complaint may not be dis- τ_{erms} of closed by the witnesses for the prosecution, either as original or complaints confirmatory evidence, and the details of the statement can only be elicited by the prisoner's counsel on cross-examination. Under the Indian Act, sec. 8, illustrations j and k, the terms of the complaint are admissible as original evidence.
- 2. To prove the existence of a conspiracy, or to show that any Evidence of person was a party to it, a letter giving an account of the con-conspiracy. spiracy is admissible under the Indian Act, sec. 10, even though not written in support of it or in furtherance of it. The contrary rule is followed in England. (Taylor, §§ 593, 594.)
- 3. In India the inducement, etc. which renders a confession Confesinadmissible must be one proceeding from a person in authority sions. (Act I of 1872, sec. 24). In England it seems enough if the inducement is held out by any one in his presence and he by his silence sanctions its being made. (Tayl. § 873.)
- 4. In India it is necessary to prevent the police from torturing persons in their custody for the purpose of extracting confessions. The Evidence Act therefore declares that a confession made to a police-officer is absolutely inadmissible (even though no threat be used or false hope held out), and a confession made while in the custody of the police is inadmissible, unless made in the immediate presence of a magistrate (secs. 25, 26). There is no such exclusion in England.
- 5. In England the confession of an accused person is not evidence against any one but himself. Even when A is indicted for receiving stolen goods from B, a confession by B that he was guilty of the theft is no evidence of that fact as against A². Under the Evidence Act, however (sec. 30), where two persons are being tried jointly for the same offence, a confession by one may be taken 'into consideration' as against the other. It is hardly necessary to state that the Indian Courts have given this section a strict interpretation. Such a rule would be dangerous in any country; but it is especially so in India, where a culprit commonly endeavours to exculpate himself at the expense of his alleged accomplices, and where the object of the police is often, not merely to find out the criminal, but to prove criminality against a particular man whom it is desired to crush.

Dying declarations. 6. In England dying declarations are admissible only in criminal cases 'where the death of the deceased is the subject of the charge, and the circumstances of the death are the subject of the declaration.' In India (sec. 32 and ill. a) they are admissible in civil suits as well as in criminal prosecutions for rape or any other offence. In England, to render a dying declaration admissible, the declarant must have been in actual danger of death, he must have been fully aware of this danger, and death must have ensued (Tayl. § 718). In India the statement is relevant, whether the person who made it was or was not at the time when it was made 'under expectation of death.'

Entries in course of business.

7. In England to make entries in the course of business admissible, they must be shown to have been made contemporaneously with the acts which they relate (Tayl. § 704). The Evidence Act (sec. 32, cl. 2) contains no such restriction. In England such entries are evidence only of those things which according to the course of business it was the duty of the person to enter, and are no evidence of independent collateral matters. There is no such restriction under the Indian Act.

Pedigreecases. 8. In England the declaration of an illegitimate member of a family would not be admissible in pedigree cases ². In India the English rule has been rescinded since 1855 ³. On this point the Evidence Act (sec. 32, cl. 5) merely requires that the declarant had special means of knowledge of the relationship, and that the statement was made before the question in dispute was raised. In India, therefore, the statements made by servants, friends and neighbours, as to relationship, and statements made by a deceased person asserting his own illegitimacy, would be admissible. How doubtful this is in England, see Taylor, § 637.

Statements by deceased persons.

- 9. Under the Evidence Act, sec. 32, cl. (7), statements made by deceased persons and contained in documents relating to any transaction by which any right was created, etc., are admissible upon questions of mere private rights. In England such evidence does not appear to be admissible. See Tayl. § 615.

- 10. In England, to render entries in public books or registers Entries in admissible, they must have been made promptly, or at least without public such long delay as to impair their credibility, and in the mode required by law, if any has been prescribed (Tayl. § 1594). Evidence Act (sec. 35) contains no such rule...
- 11. Section 36 of the Evidence Act as to maps and charts, and sec. Maps. 38, as to proof of foreign laws, go somewhat beyond the English rules on these subjects. The Indian Act admits statements made in 'published maps or charts generally offered for public sale,' and in 'maps and plans made under the authority of Government.' It Foreign also permits books containing foreign laws to be directly referred to. laws. A munsif's opinion on the state of the Scotch marriage-law, or the meaning of an article of the Code Napoleon, is perhaps not very likely to be correct. The Indian Act, however, dispenses with the necessity of calling professional or official experts to speak on the subject. As to the English rules, see Taylor, §§ 622, 1423, 1425.
- 12. In India judgments in rem are conclusive in criminal, as Judgments well as in civil proceedings (Evidence Act, sec. 41). In England in rem. this seems doubtful; see Taylor, §§ 1680, 1681.
- 13. In England, a party to a suit would not be allowed to defeat a judgment by showing that in obtaining it he had practised an imposition upon the Court (Tayl. § 1713). Under the Evidence Act, however, there is no such restriction, section 44, as now worded, permitting any party to a suit or other proceeding to show that a judgment was obtained by his own fraud or collusion.

14. The opinion of experts only is admissible under the Evi-Opinions dence Act (sec. 45) as to questions of sanity. It is otherwise in astosanity. England, at least in the Probate Court, where witnesses to a will may give their opinion as to the sanity of the testator1. See Tayl. § 1416.

15. Under the Evidence Act (sec. 54) the fact that the accused Previous person has been previously convicted of any offence is relevant, and tions. may be proved in the first instance by the prosecution. When, therefore, a man is tried for forgery, or theft, or burning a ship to cheat insurance companies, the prosecution may prove that he was previously convicted of an assault, or of a dacoity, or of grievous hurt in that he, through motives of jealousy, cut off his wife's nose. On a trial for coining, evidence may be tendered of a conviction for adultery, which is a criminal offence under the Penal

1 Wheeler v. Alderson, 3 Hagg. Ecc. R. 544, 604, 605.

Code; and when a man is tried for waging war against the Queen, proof may be given of a conviction for selling goods with a counterfeit trademark, or for keeping a gambling-house. The object of this strange enactment is expressly declared in the report of the Select Committee, to be to prejudice the prisoner; and the Indian legislature has thus enabled the prosecution to mislead an ignorant magistrate and stupid jurors and assessors into the belief that a man who had (e.g.) cut off his wife's nose would be more likely than other men to commit crimes involving fraud or dishonesty. In England, it is scarcely necessary to say that, except under the Prevention of Crimes Act, 1871 (sec. 191), such evidence can be given only in reply to evidence of good character offered for the defence.

Judicial notice. 16. The provisions in the Evidence Act, sec. 57, clause (7), as to judicial notice of the names etc. of gazetted officers, and the provisions in the same section that 'the Court may resort for its aid to appropriate books or documents of reference,' are in advance of the English law on these subjects. The Act (sec. 61) permits the opinions of experts, expressed in any treatise commonly offered for sale, and the grounds of such opinions, to be proved by the production of the treatise, if the author is dead, etc. This also is in advance of English law. See Taylor, § 1482.

Certified copies of registers. 17. The Evidence Act (sec. 65) makes certified copies of registers of births, deaths, marriages, etc. admissible in criminal as well as in civil proceedings. In England, in criminal proceedings, the original registers must be produced: 3 & 4 Vic. c. 92, s. 17.

Attested instruments. 18. In England, when the validity of an instrument depends on its formal attestation, the attesting witness must always be produced (Tayl. § 1843). In India², the admission of a party to such an instrument of its execution by himself has, since 1855, been sufficient proof of its execution as against him.

Comparison of seals.

- 19. Under the Evidence Act, sees. 47 and 73, comparison of a disputed writing or seal with a genuine writing or seal may be made by witnesses or by the Court in criminal as well as in civil proceedings. There is no such provision in England as to seals. As to writings, see 17 & 18 Vic. c. 125, secs. 27, 103; and 28 & 29 Vic. c. 18, secs. 1 and 8.
- 20. Oral admissions of the contents of a document are not admissible as primary evidence under the Evidence Act (secs. 22, ¹ Previous convictions are proveable under this enactment only as against I of 1872, sec. 70. alleged receivers of stolen goods.

91). In England, on the contrary, the parol admissions of a Oraladmisparty, and his acts amounting to admissions, are received as sions of primary proof against himself and those claiming under him, documents of although they relate to the contents of an instrument, which are directly in issue in the cause (Tayl. § 410). As Parke B. said in Slatterie v. Pooley 1, what a party himself admits to be true may reasonably be presumed to be so.

21. In England, the presumption of legitimacy may be rebutted Presumpby proof of the impotency of the husband. Under the Evidence tion of legitimacy. Act (sec. 112) such proof cannot be given.

22. Under sec. 118 of the Evidence Act, a child is competent to Competestify if it can understand the questions put to it, and give tence of children. rational answers thereto. In England, a child, to be a competent witness, must believe in punishment in a future state for lving2.

23. Husbands and wives are competent witnesses for or against Compeeach other in criminal, as well as in civil proceedings (Act I of tence of husbands 1872, sec. 120). This is not so in England in criminal pro- and wives. ceedings, except, of course, when an injury to person or property has been committed by the one against the other. (Tayl. §§ 1371, 1372.)

24. In England, an arbitrator, except under very special Privilegeof circumstances, is privileged as to what passed in his mind when arbitrator. exercising his discretionary powers3. He has no such privilege under the Evidence Act, sec. 121.

25. The privilege as to non-production of title-decds, conferred Non-proby the Act, sec. 130, on witnesses who are not parties to the suit, duction of title-deeds. though unsuitable to India, where there is so much of fraud and forgery, is more extensive than in England. For in England, where a title-deed has been partly set out, or where there is reason to suspect fraud, the production of title-deeds has been ordered (Fisher, secs. 583 et seq., 589). The Indian Act privileges the mortgage-deed, but in England see Fisher, secs. 593, 594. The Indian Act, lastly, ignores implied agreements or trusts to produce title-deeds, which are recognised by English law. Even in England

1 6 M. & W. 669.

² There seems no good ground for holding with Sir James Stephen (Digest, note xl) that the statute 32 & 33 Vic. c. 68 applies to children. The Indian Act II of 1855, sec. 14, contained the sensible rule that children under seven years of age who appear incapable of receiving just impressions of the facts to be deposed to or of relating them truly ought not to be examined. This was repealed by Act I of 1872, and (apparently per incuriam) not re-enacted.

the privilege is more efficient in screening fraud than in protecting honest purchasers or incumbrancers. The best and simplest course would have been to render all documents producible save those specially excepted by other sections of the Act.

Privilege of witness.

26. In England a witness is excused from replying to any question the answer to which would have a tendency to expose him or her, or his or her wife or husband, to any kind of criminal charge, or to any penalty or forfeiture ¹. In India, when the question is as to any relevant matter, the rule is the reverse; see Act I of 1872, sec. 132, which, however, provides that no such answer shall subject the witness to any arrest or prosecution, or be proved against him in any criminal proceeding, except a prosecution for giving false evidence by such answer.

Corroboration in cases of perjury, etc. 27. In England two witnesses are required in case of certain treasons², and corroborative evidence is required in the following cases: cases of perjury where there is only a single opposing witness³; bastardy cases where the mother is the only witness⁴; and suits for breach of promise of marriage⁵. In India a conviction for the offences analogous to treason may be obtained on the testimony of a single witness, and corroborative evidence is not required in any of the three cases last mentioned ⁶.

Impeaching credit of witness. 28. In England the credit of a witness may, amongst other ways, be impeached by evidence of facts contradictory of the evidence given by him. The express provision of the Indian Act, sec. 155, is less extensive. The witness's credit, it is provided, can only be impeached in certain specified ways, that is, by questions or by testimony going directly to his credit, not mediately through a contradiction of the particular matter deposed to by him in the case.

Prior statement of witness.

29. In England evidence of the prior statement of a witness is not generally admissible to corroborate his testimony. But under the Indian Act, sec. 157 (= Act II of 1855, sec. 3), such evidence is admissible if the statement was contemporaneous with the fact stated, or made before some competent authority. It is often important to inquire, even on the examination in chief, what statement a witness, and particularly a complainant, made immediately after the commission of the offence. In cases of dacoity, for instance, the complainant swears in court that he recognised the accused at the time of the robbery, and that he was acquainted with them before. In such a case it is desirable to ascertain whether he immediately mentioned their names to the police, or whether he first identified them after suspicion had been thrown upon them in some other way. So in a well-known suit against a bank in Bombay, where a question arose as to the terms of a loan to Premchand Raichand, which had been agreed upon at a meeting of local financiers. These terms had not been reduced to writing and respectable witnesses greatly varied in stating them. A letter of the agent of the bank, written on the afternoon of the same day, addressed to the head-office in London, and giving a full account of what had taken place, was admitted on behalf of the bank in corroboration of his testimony.

30. In England the Judge may recall a witness at any stage of a Examinatrial and put such legal questions to him as the exigencies of justice tion by require. And in a criminal case, after examination of witnesses on the prisoner's behalf, if the Judge calls and examines a witness for the prosecution, the prisoner's counsel has a right to cross-examine again (Reg. v. Watson, 6 C. & P. 653, Taylor Ev. § 1477.) Under the Indian Act, section 165, the questions put by the Judge need not be legal, and the witness cannot be cross-examined without the leave of the Court.

31. In England, in civil cases, the rules as to admissibility may Relaxing at the trial be relaxed by consent of the parties1. The Indian Act rules as to gives no such power. The insertion of a provision for this purpose bility. was suggested by Mr. Maine to the Indian Law Commissioners; but they replied that it would be superfluous, 'as there is nothing in the rules proposed which would interfere with the inherent right of parties so to consent.'

III. Omissions in the Indian Evidence Act.

When the Indian Evidence Act is next amended it seems desirable to supply the following omissions and to make the changes hereinafter suggested:-

1. The Act (sec. 1) expressly declares that it does not apply Affidavits. 'to affidavits presented to any Court or officer,' words which include the answers to interrogatories. The Civil Procedure Code, sec. 647, empowers the High Courts to make rules providing for the admission 'in proceedings in any Court of civil jurisdiction other than suits and appeals,' of affidavits as evidence, and the Criminal Procedure Code, sec. 539, declares the person before whom affidavits for use on the criminal side of the High Court are to be sworn. But, apart from certain enactments as to the admission of affidavits, the applications to be supported by affidavit, and the answering of affidavits, there is no law as to testimony by affidavit except that contained in the Civil Procedure Code, secs. 194–197. These sections should be transferred to the Evidence Act and applied to both criminal and civil proceedings; and it should also be provided

- (a) that the officer administering the oath shall give notice to every person making an affidavit, before the oath is administered, that he will be liable to cross-examination, and that he subjects himself to a penalty if the statement be wilfully false:
- (b) that such officer shall also ask the deponent whether he has read the affidavit, and if the answer be that he has not, or cannot read, shall then cause him to read, or have it read to him distinctly, and, after giving the notice required by (a), cause him to sign his name or make his mark, opposite to which the officer shall write his name, and, where the deponent is illiterate or blind, add the certificate mentioned supra, p. 539, note 4.

Material evidence.

2. Except in sec. 32 (b), the second proviso to sec. 60, and sec. 65 (d), the Evidence Act is silent as to material evidence, such as, in a criminal case, the instrument with which, or the place in which, an offence has been committed: in civil cases, the mark on a tree, or the number of circles in the wood that has grown over the mark. The following sub-division might be added to the present definition of 'Evidence': '(3) all other material things inspected by, or produced for the inspection of, the Court, the jury, or the assessors, in order to prove or disprove a fact in issue. Such things are called "material evidence." And the body of the Act should declare that, as a rule, material evidence requires oral or documentary evidence for its introduction.

Definitions.

- 3. The terms 'fraud' and 'collusion,' which occur in sec. 44, should be defined: so should 'signature,' which occurs in sec. 69; 'judge,' sec. 121; and 'public officer,' sec. 124.
- 4. Section 45 should be amended by inserting, after 'identity,' in each of the places where that word occurs, the words 'or genuineness.' At present the Act does not provide for admitting the opinion of an expert who, without comparison of writing, can state that a certain document is in a genuine or a feigned hand. See Tayl. Ev., §§ 1417, 1877.
- 5. A second explanation should be added to section 76, enumerating the public documents, which any person has a right to inspect.
- ¹ See the Code of Criminal Provestigation may be made by the Judge cedure, sec. 293. Under the Code of Civil Procedure, sec. 392, a local in-

- 6. The Act should provide for admitting oral evidence where the written deposition of a witness has been informally recorded.
- 7. When an instrument on its production appears to have been altered, the party offering it in evidence must explain this appearance if he be called upon to do so by the issue raised, and if the instrument be not admitted by his opponent under notice (Taylor, Ev. § 1819). The Act should contain such a rule, which is in accordance with Indian practice.
- 8. Section 32, cl. (2) might be amended so as to admit, in suits between Indian traders and their correspondents abroad, invoices, account-sales and accounts current as prima facie evidence of the facts stated therein². This would often dispense with the necessity of a commission to England to supply formal proof of the amount which exported goods realised at home.
- 9. To sec. 110, as to the burden of proof of ownership, a clause should be added showing that the rule does not apply when the possession has been obtained by force or fraud.
- 10. Section 113 should be repealed as ultra vires. It might be replaced by a section corresponding with the English rule that there is an irrebuttable presumption that rape cannot be committed by a boy under fourteen. In India perhaps twelve should be the age³.
- 11. The subject of rebuttable presumptions is treated by the Act, Presumpsec. 114, merely from the point of view of an English lawyer tions. Illustrations should be added dealing with the presumptions as to the existence of facts peculiar to India, which have been recognised by the Judicial Committee and the Indian High Courts. The following list of such presumptions is not exhaustive 4:—
- a. The presumptions that a Hindú family is joint in food, worship, and estate (12 Moo. I. A. 523; and see 3 ibid. 229: 9 ibid. 66: 10 ibid. 403: 11 Ben. 193); that a family once joint retains its status (11 Moo. I. A. 369); and that the acquisition of property by a member of the family is made by means of the joint estate (14 Moo. I. A. 412: 13 ibid. 333). As to rebutting these presumptions, see 12 Ben. 326, 327 (P. C.): 10 Bom. H. C. 453: but see 11 Moo. I. A. 369: 14 ibid. 412: Marshall, 1: 7 Suth. Civ. R. 451: 8 ibid. 270.

⁴ For a complete account of the numerous cases on the subject, see Mr. Field's Law of Evidence in British India, 4th ed. pp. 562-574.

- b. The presumption of partition from separate possession of a portion of the ancestral estate (1 Bom. H. C. 43).
- c. The presumption that an endowment made for the worship of an idol is intended to preserve the shebá in the donor's family, rather than confer a benefit on an individual (11 Ben. 114). As to rebutting this presumption, see ibid.
- d. The presumption in favour of the continuance of an ancient family custom, even though the family have migrated (1 Ben. P. C. 26: 8 Suth. Civ. R. 261). As to rebutting this presumption, see 6 Suth. Civ. R. 295.
- e. The presumption that when immovable property is purchased by a Hindú or Muhammadan in the name of his son, it is a benámi purchase only, and the property belongs to the father (6 Moo. I. A. 53: 13 Moo. I. A. 232: 6 Bom. 717: 20 Suth. Civ. R. 269). So where a Hindú buys land in the name of his own idol which no one except himself has the power or right to worship, 20 Suth. Civ. R. 95. As to purchases in the name of a wife, see 8 Cal. 545, where the purchaser was a Hindú, and 9 Suth. Civ. R. 338, where the purchaser was a Muhammadan. As to rebutting this presumption, see 13 Moo. I. A. 401: S. C. 5 Ben. 578.
- f. The presumption that a tenure is hereditary when it has descended from father to son and the enjoyment has been long and uninterrupted (10 Moo. I. A. 191: 11 ibid. 465: 14 ibid. 247: and see as to zamíndárís, 14 Ben. 139: S. C. L. R. 1 I. A. 282).
- g. The presumption that all land is liable to assessment to Government revenue (4 Moo. I. A. 497).
- h. The presumption that an adoption was duly made (2 Ben. Appx. 51: 3 Ben. A. C. J. 145; and see 13 Moo. I. A. 85: 14 ibid. 67: 7 Ben. 1, 5: West and B. 1094-1096).
- i. The presumption in favour of a Hindú widow's dealings assented to by the persons next in succession when they took place (I Bouln. 120: 3 Suth. Civ. R. 14, col. 2: West and B. 1217).

Estoppel of agent.

- 12. Section 117 should be amended so as to provide for the estoppel of an agent, who is not allowed to dispute his principal's title, or to set up the adverse title of a third person, except where the principal was obtained fraudulently or wrongfully from such third person the subject of the agency 1.
- 13.To sec. 118 should be added a clause providing expressly whether accused persons should or should not be competent witnesses in their own behalf. Where several persons are jointly accused it might be well to declare that any one of them may be called as a witness for or against the co-defendants, except where the charge is so framed as to give him a direct interest in obtaining their acquittal.

- 14. Where facts material to the decision of the cause have come to the notice of the judge, and he is not specially authorised to act on such knowledge², it has been held that he must state the facts in open court upon oath, and is liable to cross-examination like any other witness (4 Ben. App. Cr. 15: 20 Suth. Cr. R. 76). But such a practice seems inexpedient where the Judge, as is usual in India, has no colleagues sitting together with him (2 Cal. 405). A section settling the law should be inserted after section 121.
- 15. A privilege similar to that conferred by section 126 on barristers, attorneys, etc. should be extended to Roman Catholic priests, by whom confession is regarded as a religious duty and concealment of the matter confessed as an obligation of the most sacred kind³.
- 16. Act II of 1855 (sec. 22) enacted that a 'witness, being a party to the suit, shall not be bound to produce any document in his possession or power, which is not relevant or material to the case of the party requiring its production.' Some such provision should be added to section 130 of the Evidence Act, which applies only to witnesses who are not parties.
- 17. Section 132 should be amended so as to show, in accordance with 46 Geo. III, cap. 37, and the New York Civil Procedure Code, sec. 837, that a witness may be compelled to answer a relevant question, the reply to which would subject him to a civil suit or pecuniary loss, or charge him with a debt. It might also be desirable to require the judge to make witnesses understand that their answers to criminating questions cannot be used against them except on a charge of giving false evidence. As Mr. Field observes: 'When the usual inducements to speak the truth are weak, the addition of any apprehension as to the consequences of speaking it, further tends to falsehood, which may be prosecuted by removing the cause of such apprehension 4.'
- 18. The protection afforded by section 132 should be extended to a witness who, either of his own accord or being compelled by the Court, answers a criminating question which is irrelevant, or is relevant only so far as it affects his credit.
- 1 6 Suth. Crim. R. 91, per Glover J., in the belief that he was stating the English law. But now see R. v. Payne, L. R., 1 C. C. 349, where the Court of Criminal Appeal decided that where two prisoners are tried together, one is not a competent witness for the other.
- ² as in cases of interruption to the proceedings, or questions as to the authenticity of a record.
- ^o See Livingston's unanswerable argument, Works, vol. i. 467-8.
- Field, 'On Evidence,' 4th edit. p. 646.

- 19. The judge should have a discretionary power to forbid leading questions to be put to an adversary's witness who shows a strong interest or bias in favour of the cross-examining party, and needs only an intimation to say whatever is most favourable to his cause. A clause to this effect might be added to section 143.
- 20. When the witness neither denies nor admits having made a former contradictory statement, but replies that he does not remember, the Act should declare that proof may be given that he in fact make it; but before such proof can be given, the circumstances of the supposed statement sufficient to designate the particular occasion must be mentioned to the witness, and he must be asked whether or not he made such statement. A clause to this effect might be added to section 145.
- 21. A clause should be added to section 162, showing in accordance with a decision of the Bombay High Court², that a partner may be compelled, in a suit to which his co-partners are not parties, to produce documents belonging to the firm.

So much for desirable additions to the Act. As to changes in its substance, secs. 5-16 should, as Sir James Stephen himself would admit, be replaced either by his latest definition of relevancy or by Mr. Whitworth's rules above quoted, p. 820. The present illustrations to those sections will, with a few slight changes in arrangement and wording, be appropriate to Mr. Whitworth's rules.

The rules as to giving previous convictions in evidence, as to exempting title-deeds from liability to production, and as to admitting the confession of an accused person against his alleged accomplices, should be amended as above suggested.

Section 57, clause (6) and section 82 should be redrawn so as to avoid, in the former section, the reference to the law of England, in the latter, the reference to the law in force for the time being in England or Ireland.

The verbal amendments suggested in the footnotes should also be made; and the arrangement should be improved so as (a) to avoid the numerous forward references³ which now render it impossible to understand the Act without repeated perusal, and (b) to bring together the provisions which deal with the same matter⁴.

⁴ For example, the provisions as to proof of hand-writing in secs. 45, 47, and 73; of character, secs. 54 and 155. The law as to proving evidence given on previous occasions is contained in no less than six sections, viz. 33, 35,

IV. Indian Peculiarities bearing on Evidence.

Lastly, in criticising and revising the Evidence Act the following peculiarities of Indian institutions, Indian morals, and Indian practices should be constantly borne in mind:--

- I. In civil cases, and in most criminal cases, there is no jury, and Absence of English rules of evidence founded on the separation of the functions jury. of the judge and the jury are therefore inapplicable to India.
- 2. The practitioners in many of the mufassal Courts cannot yet be The murelied on to object to improper questions and to the admission of what fassal pleaders. is not evidence, or to take a note of the ground on which a judge has admitted or rejected evidence. And their ideas as to cross-examination are curiously limited. They have two stock questions. One is directed to elicit that the witness has been previously convicted; the other is an attempt to show that he is at enmity with the party against whom he is produced. Of course, if these questions are answered in the negative they simply recoil on the person asking them.

3. The police in India are far more corruptible than they are The Police. in England. They are, moreover, inclined to extract confessions by means of torture; and their object being often, not merely to find out the criminal, but to prove criminality against a particular man, they stimulate the culprit to exculpate himself at the expense of an alleged accomplice. In the mufassal they prepare cases for trial; but they have little detective ability: they do not understand what evidence is legally necessary or admissible; and their procedure is to adopt a theory, to support which they mould the evidence, often manufacturing a necessary link when it cannot be otherwise supplied 1.

4. Witnesses in India are, as a rule, far less truthful, far less Nativewitaccurate in observation, especially as to time and distance, than nesses. the corresponding class of witnesses in England, more timid, more revengeful², more apt to conspire to give false evidence, more prone to raise a false defence, even when not guilty. As to their untruthfulness, it will be enough to quote two authorities, one as to the Natives of the North-western frontiers, and the other as to those of Madras. 'As a general rule,' says Mr. Elmslie 3, 'it is rarely possible in this country to accept and act upon uncorroborated direct testimony. A witness may perhaps be believed if he is corroborated by some circumstance that cannot lie. If there be no such circumstance, there must always be hesitation in accepting his statement.' Still more strongly did the High Court of Madras express itself in the Rámnád case 1: 'Oral evidence is prima facie not entitled to belief; and in this country where in a civil cause we say that we believe, our meaning can only be that, being compelled to come to a conclusion, it is more reasonable to come to one than to another 2.'

Forgery.

5. Forgery is more or less a trade all over India, and, as above remarked, documents are constantly found to have been forged many years before they were intended to be used as evidence. Even when the forgery is recent the water-mark, if the writing be on paper, and the date of the stamp, if the document be stamped, furnish no sure means of detecting the forgery, for it is a common practice, at least in Bengal and Madras, to buy blank stamped papers, and lay them down for future sale or use as an English wine-merchant lays down a stock of wine. Furthermore, in consequence of the great number of languages and alphabets used throughout British India, the detection of forgery is more difficult than elsewhere.

Drilling witnesses.

6. The practice of drilling witnesses is far more frequent in India than in England.

Retracting confessions.

- 7. Genuine confessions are frequently retracted by the Natives. 'There is, I think,' says Duthoit J., 'a great difference in this respect between the East and the West. The Oriental has not the same tenacity of purpose that his western brother has, and the latter is, as a rule, no fatalist. In the parts of India with which I am acquainted, a man who has been guilty of culpable homicide, not unfrequently gives in at once. He looks upon himself as an instrument of fate, and says of the victim of his malice or ungovernable rage "his time had come." He is for the moment in despair, and glad to purchase immediate case by making
 - ¹ 2 Mad. H. C. 233.
- ² Nevertheless in dealing with Native testimony the Anglo-Indian Courts must act as if they believed in the doctrine of the Judicial Committee: 'the ordinary legal and reasonable presumptions of facts must not be lost sight of in the trial of Indian cases, however untrustworthy much of the evidence submitted to the Courts may commonly be; that is, due weight must be given to evidence there as elsewhere, and evidence in a particular case must not be rejected from ageneral distrust of Native testimony, nor perjury widely imputed without some grave grounds to support the imputation. Such a rejection, if sanctioned, would virtually submit the decision of the rights of others to the suspicions, and not to the deliberate judgment of their appointed Judges. Nor must an entire history be thrown aside because the evidence, or some of the evidence, of some of the witnesses is increditable (sic) or untrustworthy' (14 Moo. I. A. 354, 355).

a confession. I believe that confessions are more often induced by these motives than they are by torture and bad usage. Speaking from my own experience, I can say that at a single sessions in the Budaon district (a bi-monthly jail-delivery) I have known quite half a dozen instances of undoubtedly genuine confessions retracted. When a man's confession has been made and he is transferred to the Magistrate's lock-up, the petty indulgences which the police allow to a confessing prisoner cease, his mind recovers its balance, his fellow-prisoners (especially in the lock-up of a district with traditions such as those of the district to which I have referred) prove to him how foolish he has been, and the confession is retracted 1.

- 8. Dying declarations in India are not to be regarded as if Dying dethey were made in England. 'Very often the murdered man clarations, himself before his death implicates every male member of his supposed murderer's family, or of the supposed instigator of the murder, hoping by this means to drink the cup of revenge to its last dregs and to rid his own family of all future annoyance 2.'
- 9. In England, written documents are seldom executed except Ignorance by those who can, at any rate, read and write, and are capable of and help-lessness of looking after their own interests. In India, bonds are daily executants, executed by men, who are either too ignorant to understand the meaning of a written document, or too poverty-stricken and helpless to contend with a mahájan or sahukár on equal terms.
- 10. In India the bulk of the internal trade is in the hands of Mercantile gumáshtas, who are treated as the agents of their employers, and agents. nearly every mercantile transaction is effected through the medium of dalláls. It is, therefore, specially important that the admission of an agent in the matter of his agency should be taken as the admission of his principal ³.

ACT No. I of 1872.

PASSED BY THE GOVERNOR GENERAL OF INDIA IN COUNCIL.

The Indian Evidence Act, 1872.

As AMENDED BY ACTS XVIII OF 1872 AND III OF 1887.

Whereas it is expedient to consolidate, define, and amend Preamble. the law of Evidence; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

PART I.

RELEVANCY OF FACTS. 1

PRELIMINARY.

1. This Act may be called 'The Indian Evidence Act, Short title. 1872':

It extends to the whole of British India2, and applies to all Extent.

² Supra, vol. i. p. 488. It has been expressly declared in force in Upper Burma (Act XX of 1886, sched. II, part I), the Santal Parganas (Reg. III of 1886), the Districts of Hazáribágh, Lohárdaga, and Mánbhum, Pargana Dhálbum, and the Kolhán in the District of Singbhum and the N.W. Provinces Tarai.

Outside British India it is in force in the Haidarábád Assigned Districts; the civil and military station of Bangalore: the parganas in the Rájputána Agency under British administration (Todgarh, Dewair, Saroth, Chang, and Kotkarana): the cantonments of Sikandarábád, Dísah, and, probably, Baroda: the Madras railway (Mysore), the Nágpur and Chhattisgarh state railway (Khairagarh and Nandgaon): the Rájputána-Malwa state railway (Indore, Nabha and Patawai), judicial proceedings in or before any Court, including Courts Martial¹, but not to affidavits² presented to any Court or Officer, nor to proceedings before an arbitrator³;

Commencement of Act. Repeal of enactments. and it shall come into force on the first day of September, 1872.

- 2. On and from that day the following laws shall be repealed:—
- (1) All rules of evidence not contained in any Statute, Act, or Regulation in force in any part of British India ⁴.
- (2) All such rules, laws, and regulations as have acquired the force of law ⁵ under the twenty-fifth section of 'The Indian Councils' Act, 1861,' in so far as they relate to any matter herein provided for; and
- (3) The enactments mentioned in the schedule hereto, to the extent specified in the third column of the said schedule.

But nothing herein contained shall be deemed to affect any provision of any Statute, Act, or Regulation in force in any part of British India and not hereby expressly repealed ⁶.

Interpreta-

3. In this Act the following words and expressions are used

G. I. P. Railway (Karandwar): the Bombay states of Akalkot and Játh (the jágír territories), Mysore (probably), the tract of land in Bhawalpur required for the headworks of the Bhawalpur-Lodran canal; and (under the Zanzibar order in council of 1884, sec. 8) Zanzibar.

1 i. e. Native Courts Martial under Act V of 1869. As to European Courts Martial, see 44 & 45 Vic. c. 58, secs. 127, 128, 163, 164, 165. The Indian Evidence Act, subject to such modifications therein as the Governor General in Council may, by notification in the Gazette of India, direct, shall apply to all proceedings before Indian Marine Courts, Act XIV of 1887, sec. 68.

² See the Code of Civil Procedure, secs. 194-197, supra, p. 538.

⁴ This repeals the English rules of evidence formerly in force, 5 Cal. 754 (S. C., L. R. 7 I. A. 70), for which the Act is assumed to be an adequate substitute. The result is that no one of the numerous points omitted from the Act can be legally supplied by reference to English law of evidence. It would have been better to frame the clause on the model of secs. 2 and 4 of the Penal Code, so that the repeal might only apply to the points dealt with by the Act.

⁵ in the Non-regulation Provinces. ⁶ See, for instance, the notes on secs. 57 and 76, the Code of Criminal Procedure, secs. 161, 287, 288, 298 (a), 339, 342, 467, 473, 475, 533, and the other enactments mentioned supra, pp. 822-827. in the following senses, unless a contrary intention appears from the context:—

'Court' includes all Judges and Magistrates and all persons, 'Court' except arbitrators, legally authorised to take evidence.

'Fact' means and includes-

'Fact.'

- (1) any thing, state of things, or relation of things, capable of being perceived by the senses;
 - (2) any mental condition of which any person is conscious.

Illustrations.

- (a) That there are certain objects arranged in certain order in a certain place, is a fact.
 - (b) That a man heard or saw something is a fact.
 - (c) That a man said certain words is a fact.
- (d) That a man holds a certain opinion, has a certain intention, acts in good faith, or fraudulently, or uses a particular word in a particular sense, or is or was at a specified time conscious of a particular sensation, is a fact.
 - (e) That a man has a certain reputation is a fact.

One fact is said to be relevant to another 2 when the one is 'Relevant.' connected with the other in any of the ways referred to in the provisions of this Act relating to the relevancy of facts 3.

The expression 'facts in issue' means and includes any fact from which, either by itself or in connexion with other facts, the existence, non-existence, nature, or extent of any right, liability, or disability, asserted or denied in any suit or proceeding, necessarily follows.

'Facts in issue.'

Explanation.—Whenever, under the provisions of the law for the time being in force relating to civil procedure 4, any ¹ For instance, a sub-registrar, as he is legally authorised to take evidence, 13 Ben. Appendix, 40. In sec. 30 'Court' seems also to include a jury, 4 Cal. 403.

² The expression 'relevant thereto' occurs in sec. 8: 'relevant to the matters in issue in any suit or any civil or criminal proceeding,' sec. 132: 'relevant to the matter in question,' sec. 32, cl. (8); 'relevant to matters in question,' sec. 145: 'relevant to the suit or proceeding,' secs. 147, 148: 'relevant to the inquiry,' sec. 153. Elsewhere we simply have the word 'relevant' without any mention of the facts to which it is applied.

³ Secs. 5-55, infra. In his Digest, 5th edition, p. 2, Sir J. F. Stephen improves on this as follows: 'The word 'relevant' means that any two facts to which it is applied are so related to each other that according to the common course of events one either taken by itself or in connexion with other facts proves or renders probable the past, present, or future existence or non-existence of the other.'

The expression 'irrelevant' occurs in secs. 24, 29, 43, 52, 54, and 165.

Court records an issue of fact, the fact to be asserted or denied in the answer to such issue is a fact in issue ¹.

A is accused of the murder of B.

At his trial the following facts may be in issue:-

That A caused B's death;

That A intended to cause B's death;

That A had received grave and sudden provocation from B; That A, at the time of doing the act which caused B's death, was, by reason of unsoundness of mind, incapable of knowing its nature.

such statements are called oral evidence3:

- (2) all documents produced for the inspection of the Court; such documents are called documentary evidence 4.

under the direct cognisance of the Court and having a material bearing on the questions in issue. It does not include the absence of producible witnesses or evidence, as to which see sec. 114, ill. facts in issue and relevant facts.

other facts as are hereinafter declared to be relevant, and of no others 1.

Explanation.—This section shall not enable any person to give evidence of a fact which he is disentitled to prove by any provision of the law for the time being in force relating to civil procedure.

Illustrations.

(a) A is tried for the murder of B by beating him with a club with the intention of causing his death.

At A's trial the following facts are in issue-

A's beating B with the club;

A's causing B's death by such beating;

A's intention to cause B's death.

(b) A suitor does not bring with him, and have in readiness for production at the first hearing of the case, a bond on which he relies. This section does not enable him to produce the bond or prove its contents at a subsequent stage of the proceedings, otherwise than in accordance with the conditions prescribed by the Code of Civil Procedure ².

Relevancy of facts forming part of same transaction.

6. Facts which, though not in issue, are so connected with a fact in issue as to form part of the same transaction ³, are relevant ⁴, whether they occurred at the same time and place or at different times and places.

Illustrations.

- (a) A is accused of the murder of B by beating him. Whatever was said or done by A or B or the by-standers at the beating, or so shortly before or after it as to form part of the transaction, is a relevant fact 5 .
- (b) A is accused of waging war against the Queen by taking part in an armed insurrection in which property is destroyed, troops are attacked, and gaols are broken open. The occurrence of these facts
- 1 'and of no others.' This impliedly imposes a duty on the Court to exclude evidence of irrelevant facts, irrespective of objections by the parties. Compare secs. 60, 64, and the last clause of the second proviso to sec. 165. In criminal proceedings this duty is expressly imposed by the Criminal Procedure Code, sec. 298. In civil proceedings see the Code of Civil Procedure, sec. 140, para. 2.
 - ² Secs. 59-63, 138, 139.
- ³ This word, which re-occurs in secs. 13, cl. (a), and 32, cl. 7 ('transacted,' sec. 9), is not defined in the
- Act. In his Digest of the Law of Evidence, p. 4, Sir J. F. Stephen defines it as 'a group of facts so connected together as to be referred to by a single legal name, as a crime, a contract, a wrong, or any other subject of inquiry which may be in issue'—a curious definition.
- i.e. have a certain amount of probative force.
- ⁵ for every part of a transaction is connected with every other part as cause, or effect, or as effects of one cause, Whitworth, p. 13.

is relevant, as forming part of the general transaction, though A may not have been present at all of them.

- (c) A sues B for a libel contained in a letter forming part of a correspondence. Letters between the parties relating to the subject out of which the libel arose, and forming part of the correspondence in which it is contained, are relevant facts, though they do not contain the libel itself².
- (d) The question is, whether certain goods ordered by B were delivered to A. The goods were delivered to several intermediate persons successively. Each delivery is a relevant fact ³.
- 7. Facts which are the occasion, cause, or effect, immediate Facts or otherwise, of relevant facts, or facts in issue, or which which are constitute the state of things under which they happened, cause, or or which afforded an opportunity for their occurrence or transaction, are relevant.

Illustrations.

(a) The question is, whether A robbed B.

The facts that, shortly before the robbery, B went to a fair with money in his possession, and that he showed it, or mentioned the fact that he had it, to third persons, are relevant.

(b) The question is, whether A murdered B.

Marks on the ground, produced by a struggle at or near the place where the murder was committed, are relevant facts ⁵.

(c) The question is, whether A poisoned B.

The state of B's health before the symptoms ascribed to poison, and habits of B, known to A, which afforded an opportunity for the administration of poison, are revelant facts 6.

- ¹ That war was waged is one of the facts in issue. These occurrences are part of that fact.
- ² Parts of the correspondence which do not contain the libel may be causes or effects of the publication, or effects of B's good faith or malice, or effects of the words having been used in a particular sense, or effects of a relationship between the parties showing that the occasion was or was not privileged, Whitworth, p. 14.
- ³ Each delivery is a relevant fact as being part of the fact in issue: Did the goods pass from B to A?
- ⁴ The fact that shortly before the robbery B had money in his possession is relevant as a fact implied by the fact in issue. That B let other persons know that he had the money is relevant as a cause of the fact in issue, Whitworth, p. 14.

- Marks on the ground, produced by a struggle at or near the place where the murder was committed, are relevant facts as effects of parts of the fact in issue.
- ⁶ That B was ill before the symptoms ascribed to poison is relevant as denying the connexion of cause and effect between the fact in issue (the poisoning) and the relevant fact (the death). That B was well is relevant as asserting this connexion. Habits of B known to A which afforded an opportunity for administering poison are, if it is alleged that the opportunity was availed of, relevant as part of the fact in issue. If the opportunity was not availed of, the habits are not relevant, Whitworth, p. 14.

Motive, preparation, and previous or subsequent conduct.

8. Any fact is relevant which shows and constitutes a motive or preparation for any fact in issue or relevant fact.

The conduct of any party, or of any agent to any party, to any suit or proceeding, in reference to such suit or proceeding, or in reference to any fact in issue therein or relevant thereto, and the conduct of any person an offence against whom is the subject of any proceeding is relevant, if such conduct influences or is influenced by any fact in issue or relevant fact, and whether it was previous or subsequent thereto.

Explanation I.—The word 'conduct' in this section does not include statements 4, unless those statements accompany and explain acts other than statements 5; but this explanation is not to affect the relevancy of statements under any other section of this Act.

Explanation II.—When the conduct of any person is relevant, any statement made to him or in his presence and 6 hearing, which affects such conduct, is relevant 7.

² This includes not only the plaintiff and defendant in a civil suit, but parties in a criminal prosecution, as, for instance, a prisoner charged with murder, 7 All. 399.

⁴ As to statements, see infra, secs.

s Those statements are admissible, and those only, 'which are the essential complement of acts done or refused to be done, so that the act itself, or the omission to act, acquires a special significance as a ground for inference with respect to the issues in the case under trial, 3 Bom. 17, per West J. Explanation I points to a case in which a person whose conduct is in dispute, mixes up together actions and statements; and in such a case those actions and statements may be proved as a whole. For instance, a wounded person is seen running down a street and calling out his assailant's name and the circumstances under which the injuries were inflicted. Here what he says and what he does may be taken together and proved as a whole. But the case would be very different if some passer-by stopped him and suggested some name or asked some question regarding the transaction. If a person were found making such statements without any question first being asked, then they might be regarded as part of his conduct. But when the statement is made merely in response to some question or suggestion, it shows a state of things introduced, not by the fact in issue, but by the interposition of something else, 7 All. 396, where it was accordingly held that, in a trial for murder, signs made by the deceased in reply to questions as to the circumstances under which she had been injured, could not be admitted under this section as 'conduct.'

⁶ 'and,' not 'or.' In England see Neile v. Jakle, 2 C. & K. 709.

Illustrations.

(a) A is tried for the murder of B.

The facts that A murdered C, that B knew that A had murdered C, and that B had tried to extort money from A by threatening to make his knowledge public, are relevant ¹.

(b) A sues B upon a bond for the payment of money. B denies the making of the bond.

The fact that, at the time when the bond was alleged to be made, B required money for a particular purpose, is relevant?.

(c) A is tried for the murder of B by poison.

The fact that, before the death of B, A procured poison similar to that which was administered to B, is relevant³.

(d) The question is, whether a certain document is the will of A. The facts that, not long before the date of the alleged will, A made inquiry into matters to which the provisions of the alleged will relate; that he consulted vakils in reference to making the will, and that he caused drafts of other wills to be prepared, of which he did not approve, are relevant.

(e) A is accused of a crime.

The facts that, either before, or at the time of, or after the alleged crime, A provided evidence which would tend to give to the facts of the case an appearance favourable to himself, or that he destroyed or concealed evidence, or prevented the presence or procured the absence of persons who might have been witnesses, or suborned persons to give false evidence respecting it, are relevant ⁵.

(f) The question is, whether A robbed B.

The facts that, after B was robbed, C said in A's presence, 'the police are coming to look for the man who robbed B,' and that immediately afterwards A ran away, are relevant $^{\circ}$.

(g) The question is, whether A owes B rupees 10,000.

The facts that A asked C to lend him money, and that D said to C in A's presence and hearing, 'I advise you not to trust A, for he owes B 10,000 rupees,' and that A went away without making any answer, are relevant facts ⁷.

 7 for A's going away without making any answer is an effect of the fact in issue, and the other two facts are causes of that effect. So where the question was whether A had voluntarily caused hurt to B, the facts that B had in A's presence and hearing stated to C, immediately after the offence, that A had committed it and that A did not deny the commission, are relevant, 10 Cal. 302.

(h) The question is, whether A committed a crime.

The fact that Λ absconded after receiving a letter warning him that inquiry was being made for the criminal, and the contents of the letter, are relevant 1 .

(i) A is accused of a crime.

The facts that, after the commission of the alleged crime, he absconded, or was in possession of property or the proceeds of property acquired by the crime, or attempted to conceal things which were or might have been used in committing it, are relevant ².

(j) The question is, whether A was ravished.

The facts that, shortly after the alleged rape, she made a complaint relating to the crime, the circumstances under which, and the terms in which, the complaint was made, are relevant ³.

The fact that, without making a complaint, she said that she had been ravished is not relevant as conduct under this section, though it may be relevant 4 as a dying declaration under section 32, clause (1), or as corroborative evidence under section 157.

(k) The question is, whether A was robbed.

The fact that soon after the alleged robbery, he made a complaint relating to the offence, the circumstances under which, and the terms in which, the complaint was made, are relevant ⁵.

The fact that he said he had been robbed, without making any complaint, is not relevant as conduct under this section, though it may be relevant ⁶ as a dying declaration under section 32, clause (1), or as corroborative evidence under section 157.

Facts necessary to explain or introduce relevant facts.

- 9. Facts necessary s to explain or introduce a fact in issue or relevant fact, or which support or rebut an inference suggested by a fact in issue or relevant fact, or which establish the identity of any thing or person whose identity is relevant, or fix the time or place at which any fact in issue or relevant fact happened, or which show the relation of parties by whom any such fact was transacted, are relevant in so far as they are necessary for that purpose.
- ¹ The absconding is relevant as an effect of the fact in issue: the contents of the letter as a cause of that effect.
 - ² as effects of a fact in issue.
 - 3 as effects of the fact in issue.
- 'i.e. admissible. The Act contains no definition of 'admissible,' and 'admissibility,' though 'admissible' occurs in sec. 163, 'admissible in proof' sec. 82, and 'admissibility,' sec. 162.
- ⁵ as effects of the fact in issue. See 10 Ben. Appx. 2.
 - 6 i.e. admissible.

- ⁸ The Act gives no test of the necessity. But see infra, sec. 136.

Illustrations.

(a) The question is, whether a given document is the will of A. The state of A's property and of his family at the date of the alleged will may be relevant facts 1.

(b) A sues B for a libel imputing disgraceful conduct to A; B affirms that the matter alleged to be libellous is true.

The position and relations of the parties at the time when the libel was published may be relevant facts as introductory to the facts in issue 2.

The particulars of a dispute between A and B about a matter unconnected with the alleged libel are irrelevant ³, though the fact that there was a dispute may be relevant if it affected the relations ⁴ between A and B.

(c) A is accused of a crime.

The fact that, soon after the commission of the crime, A absconded from his house, is relevant, under section 8, as conduct subsequent to and affected by facts in issue 5.

The fact that, at the time when he left home, he had sudden and urgent business at the place to which he went, is relevant, as tending to explain the fact that he left home suddenly 6.

The details of the business on which he left are not relevant, except in so far as they are necessary to show that the business was sudden and urgent.

- (d) A sues B for inducing C to break a contract of service made by him with A. C, on leaving A's service, says to A—'I am leaving you because B has made me a better offer.' This statement is a relevant fact as explanatory of C's conduct, which is relevant as a fact in issue 8 .
- (e) A, accused of theft, is seen to give the stolen property to B, who is seen to give it to A's wife. B says, as he delivers it—'A says you are to hide this.' B's statement is relevant as explanatory of a fact which is part of the transaction 9.
- ¹ Rather: 'So much of the state of A's property or of his family as shows probable cause for his making the alleged will, or as shows the absence of such cause, is relevant' (Whitworth, pp. 7, 17).
- ² Rather: So much of the position and relations of the parties at the time when the libel was published as shows cause for B's publishing a true libel or a false one, or the absence of such causes, and so much as bears upon the matter asserted in the libel as cause of its truth or otherwise, are relevant.
- ³ because they do not make any fact in issue more or less likely to have happened.

- ⁴ Rather: any part of the position and relations.
- ⁵ It is relevant as an effect of the fact in issue.
- ⁶ It is relevant as denying the connection of cause and effect between the fact in issue and the alleged relevant fact.
- ⁷ Further than that, they do not make the fact in issue more or less likely to have happened.
- ⁸ The statement is relevant as affirming the connexion of cause and effect between the fact in issue (B's persuasion) and the relevant fact (C's leaving A's service).
- 9 It is relevant as an effect of a fact in issue.

(f) A is tried for a riot and is proved to have marched at the head of a mob. The cries of the mob are relevant as explanatory of the nature of the transaction 1.

Things said or done by in reference to common design.

10. Where there is reasonable ground to believe that two or more persons have conspired together to commit an offence conspirator or an actionable wrong, any thing said, done, or written 2 by any one of such persons in reference to their common intention, after the time when such intention was first entertained by any one of them, is a relevant fact as against each of the persons believed to be so conspiring, as well for the purpose of proving the existence of the conspiracy as for the purpose of showing that any such person was a party to it 3.

Illustration.

Reasonable ground exists for believing that A has joined in a conspiracy to wage war against the Queen.

The facts that B procured arms in Europe for the purpose of the conspiracy, C collected money in Calcutta for a like object, D persuaded persons to join the conspiracy in Bombay, E published writings advocating the object in view at Agra, and F transmitted from Delhi to G at Cabul the money which C had collected at Calcutta, and the contents of a letter written by H giving an account of the conspiracy, are each relevant, both to prove the existence of the conspiracy, and to prove A's complicity in it, although he may have been ignorant of all of them, and although the persons by whom they were done were strangers to him, and although they may have taken place before he joined the conspiracy or after he had left it 4.

When facts not relevant become relevant.

- 11. Facts not otherwise relevant are relevant—
- (1) if they are inconsistent with any fact in issue or relevant fact;
- (2) if by themselves or in connexion with other facts they make the existence or non-existence of any fact in issue or relevant fact highly probable or improbable 5.
- ¹ That the riot occurred is a fact in issue, and the cries of the mob are relevant as parts or as effects of the fact: see Lord George Gordon's case, 21 Howell's S. T. 514, 529.

² This admits a letter not written in furtherance of the conspiracy.

4 And any of these facts that are so connected with the other fact in issue, A's complicity, as to make it more or less likely, are relevant for that purpose also. Cf. in England, R. v. Hardy, 24 Howell's S. T. 451-3.

⁵ An adjudication or opinion expressed in a judgment, is not, properly speaking, 'a fact,' and certainly not a fact within the meaning of sec. II, 6 Cal. 171, 188, per Garth C. J. This section must be read with, and its over-extensive terms must be limited by, sec. 54 and the illustra-

(a) The question is, whether Λ committed a crime at Calcutta on a certain day.

The fact that, on that day, A was at Lahore is relevant 1 .

The fact that, near the time when the crime was committed, A was at a distance from the place where it was committed, which would render it highly improbable, though not impossible, that he committed it, is relevant ².

(b) The question is, whether A committed a crime.

The circumstances are such that the crime must have been committed either by A, B, C, or D. Every fact which shows that the crime could have been committed by no one else, and that it was not committed by either B, C, or D, is relevant³.

12. In suits in which damages are claimed, any fact which Relevant will enable the Court to determine the amount of damages which ought to be awarded is relevant 5.

13. Where the question is as to the existence of any right ⁶ Facts relevant when right or custom ⁷, the following facts are relevant—

² as making a part of the fact in issue unlikely.

³ That the crime was committed is adduced as an effect of the fact in issue that A committed it. To show that some other person committed it is relevant as denying the connexion of cause and effect between the fact in issue and relevant fact; and to show that no other person committed it, is relevant as affirming that connexion, Whitworth, p. 18.

* see as to character, sec. 55.

5 for the amount is a fact in issue, and any fact which will enable the Court to determine it is connected with the fact in issue as a cause or an effect or having a common cause.

⁶ This probably means only a public or private incorporeal right, such as a right of fishery, 6 Cal. 186, 23 Suth. Civ. R. 311, though it has been held to include the proceedings in suits to establish a right to certain lands, 22 Suth. Civ. R. 365. And the Bombay High Court has ruled that judgments and decrees recognising rights between parties to a suit or between persons whom they represent, even if the parties to the former suit be strangers, are admissible under this section, 3 Bom. 3, following the decision of Couch C.J. in 22 Suth. W. R. 365. But, according to Garth C.J., 6 Cal. 186, the decision of a Court is not a 'transaction,' and in the Bombay case, the former decisions were admissible under sec. 40. See as to 'right' and 'transaction,' 10 Boin. 442.

8 Accordingly, when a set of plaintiffs come into Court claiming a right question was created, claimed, modified, recognised, asserted, or denied, or which was inconsistent with its existence:

(b) Particular instances in which the right or custom was claimed, recognised, or exercised, or in which its exercise was disputed, asserted, or departed from.

The question is, whether A has a right to a fishery. A deed conferring the fishery on A's ancestors, a mortgage of the fishery by A's father, a subsequent grant of the fishery by A's father irreconcileable with the mortgage, particular instances in which A's father exercised the right, or in which the exercise of the right was stopped by A's neighbours, are relevant facts 1 .

Facts showing existence of state of mind, or of body or bodily feeling.

14. Facts showing the existence of any state of mind—such as intention, knowledge, good faith, negligence, rashness, ill-will or good-will towards any particular person, or showing the existence of any state of body or bodily feeling—are relevant, when the existence of any such state of mind or body or bodily feeling is in issue or relevant.

See also 20 Suth. Civ. R. 345: 23 ibid. 162: 24 ibid. 265, 284, 431.

² This applies to the class of cases discussed in Taylor on Evidence, 8th ed. §§ 342-346, that is to say, cases when a particular act is more or less criminal or culpable, according to the state of mind or feeling of the person who does it. For instance, in actions of slander, or false imprisonment or malicious prosecution, where malice is one of the main ingredients in the wrong which is charged, evidence is admissible to show that the defendant was actuated by spite or enmity against the plaintiff: or again, on a charge of uttering counterfeit coin, evidence is admissible to show that the prisoners knew the coin to be counterfeit, because he had other similar coin in his possession, or had passed such coin before or after the particular occasion which formed the subject of the charge. But the section does not extend to cases where the question of guilt or innocence depends upon actual facts, and not upon the state of a man's mind or feeling. We have no right to prove that a man committed theft or any other crime by showing that he committed similar crimes on other occasions, 6 Cal. 660, per Garth C.J.

The words 'or habit' should apparently be inserted after 'state of mind.' In illustration (a) the fact that A was, at the same time, in possession of many other stolen articles is relevant as proving a habit which Explanation.—A fact relevant as showing the existence of a relevant state of mind must show that it exists, not generally, but in reference to the particular matter in question.

Illustrations.

(a) A is accused of receiving stolen goods knowing them to be stolen. It is proved that he was in possession of a particular stolen article.

The fact that, at the same time, he was in possession of many other stolen articles is relevant, as tending to show that he knew each and all of the articles of which he was in possession to be stolen ¹.

(b) A is accused of fraudulently delivering to another person a piece of counterfeit coin which, at the time when he delivered it, he knew to be counterfeit.

The fact that, at the time of its delivery, A was possessed of a number of other pieces of counterfeit coin, is relevant?

(c) A sues B for damage done by a dog of B's, which B knew to be ferocious.

The facts that the dog had previously bitten X, Y, and Z, and that they had made complaints to B, are relevant 3 .

(d) The question is, whether A, the acceptor of a bill of exchange, knew that the name of the payer was fictitious.

The fact that A had accepted other bills drawn in the same manner before they could have been transmitted to him by the payee if the payee had been a real person, is relevant, as showing that A knew that the payee was a fictitious person 4 .

(e) A is accused of defaming B by publishing an imputation intended to harm the reputation of B.

The fact of previous publications by A respecting B, showing ill-makes the receiving with guilty knowledge more likely than it would be without proof of the habit. (Whitworth, p. 8.)

² The fact that, at the time of its delivery, A was possessed of a number of other pieces of counterfeit coin is relevant as effects of a habit, which habit is relevant as a cause of his delivering the particular piece with a knowledge that it was counterfeit, Whitworth, p. 19. See sec. 15, ill. (c) infra, and Reg. v. Foster, 24 L. J. M. C. 134.

³ as the causes of a fact in issue, i.e. B's knowledge that the dog was ferocious. See Thomas v. Morgan, 2 C. M. & R. 496.

A's knowledge on the previous occasions is a cause of his knowledge on the occasion in question: that there was not time for the previous bills to be transmitted to him by the payee if the payee had been a real person is a cause of A's knowledge on previous occasions; and the fact that A accepted the bills is an affirmation of the connexion of cause and effect between the fact concerning time and the fact of A's knowledge. See Gibson v. Hunter, 2 H. Bl. 288.

will on the part of A towards B, is relevant, as proving A's intention to harm B's reputation by the particular publication in question 1 .

The facts that there was no previous quarrel between A and B, and that A repeated the matter complained of as he heard it, are relevant, as showing that A did not intend to harm the reputation of B^2 .

(f) A is sued by B for fraudulently representing to B that C was solvent, whereby B, being induced to trust C, who was insolvent, suffered loss.

The fact that, at the time when A represented C to be solvent, C was supposed to be solvent by his neighbours and by persons dealing with him, is relevant, as showing that A made the representation in good faith 3 .

(g) A is sued by B for the price of work done by B, upon a house of which B is owner, by the order of C, a contractor.

A's defence is that B's contract was with C.

The fact that Λ paid C for the work in question is relevant, as proving that Λ did, in good faith, make over to C the management of the work in question, so that C was in a position to contract with B on C's own account, and not as agent for Λ ⁴.

(h) A is accused of the dishonest misappropriation of property which he had found, and the question is whether, when he appropriated it, he believed in good faith that the real owner could not be found.

The fact that public notice of the loss of the property had been given in the place where A was, is relevant, as showing that A did not in good faith believe that the real owner of the property could not be found 5.

² The fact of previous publications by A respecting B showing ill-will on the part of A towards B is relevant as an effect of the same cause as that of which the fact in issue is an effect.

The fact that there was no previous quarrel between A and B is relevant as alleging absence of fact in issue. The fact that A repeated the matter as he heard it is relevant as denying the connexion of cause and effect between the two facts, the malicious intention and the publication, Whitworth, p. 20.

³ A's good faith is in issue, i. e. Did A, when he represented C as solvent, think him solvent? is an issue. As C's insolvency may be put forward on one side as a cause of A's thinking him not solvent, so the fact that his neighbours and persons dealing with him supposed him to be solvent may be put forward as effects of causes which are causes also of A's thinking him solvent. Thus the suppositions are effects of causes of a fact in issue, Whitworth, p. 20. See Sheen v. Bumpstead, I Hurlst. & C. 358.

⁵ It is relevant as a cause of A's knowledge that the real owner could be found.

The fact that A knew, or had reason to believe, that the notice was given fraudulently by C, who had heard of the loss of the property and wishing to set up a false claim to it, is relevant, as showing that the fact that A knew of the notice did not disprove A's good faith 1 .

(i) A is charged with shooting at B with intent to kill him. In order to show A's intent, the fact of A's having previously shot at

B may be proved 2 .

(j) A is charged with sending threatening letters to B. Threatening letters previously sent by A to B may be proved, as showing the intention of the letters ".

(k) The question is, whether A has been guilty of cruelty towards B, his wife.

Expressions of their feeling towards each other shortly before or after the alleged cruelty, are relevant facts 4.

(l) The question is, whether A's death was caused by poison.

Statements made by A during his illness as to his symptoms, are relevant facts 5.

(m) The question is, what was the state of A's health at the time when an assurance on his life was affected.

Statements made by A as to the state of his health at or near the time in question, are relevant facts 6.

(n) A sues B for negligence in providing him with a carriage for hire not reasonably fit for use, whereby A was injured.

The fact that B's attention was drawn on other occasions to the defect of that particular carriage, is relevant 7 .

The fact that B was habitually negligent about the carriages which he let on hire, is irrelevant.

(o) A is tried for the murder of B by intentionally shooting him dead.

The fact that A, on other occasions, shot at B is relevant, as showing his intention to shoot $B^{\mathfrak{g}}$.

1 It is relevant as showing that the alleged cause of the fact in issue had not the effect of causing the fact in issue, Whitworth, pp. 20, 21.

² The fact of A's having previously shot at B is relevant; for A's intention is a fact in issue. The fact is one which may continue through a space of time, and the previous shooting is an effect of it, Whitworth, p. 21: see R. v. Voke, R. & R. 531.

⁵ They are relevant as effects of the fact in issue.

6 Aveson v. Lord Kinnaird, 6 East, 188. They are relevant as effects of the fact in issue.

⁷ as a cause of B's knowledge, which is a fact in issue.

⁸ apparently because it is not connected with the fact in issue. But see note on sec. 14, ill. (a).

⁹ in other words, as an effect of a fact in issue, A's intention.

The fact that A was in the habit of shooting at people with intent to murder them, is irrelevant 1.

(p) A is tried for a crime.

The fact that he said something indicating an intention to commit that particular crime, is relevant 2.

The fact that he said something indicating a general disposition to commit crimes of that class, is irrelevant 3.

Facts bearing on question whether act was acintentional.

15. When there is a question whether an act was accidental or intentional, the fact that such act formed part of a series of similar occurrences, in each of which the person doing the act cidental or was concerned, is relevant.

Illustrations.

(a) A is accused of burning down his house in order to obtain money for which it is insured.

The facts that A lived in several houses successively, each of which he insured, in each of which a fire occurred, and after each of which fires A received payment from a different insurance office, are relevant, as tending to show that the fires were not accidental 4.

(b) Λ is employed to receive money from the debtors of B. It is A's duty to make entries in a book showing the amounts received by him. He makes an entry showing that on a particular occasion he received less than he really did receive.

The question is, whether this false entry was accidental or intentional.

The fact that other entries made by Λ in the same book are false, and that the false entry is in each case in favour of A, are relevant 5.

(c) A is accused of fraudulently delivering to B a counterfeit

The question is, whether the delivery of the rupee was acci-

The facts that, soon before or soon after 6 the delivery to B, A delivered counterfeit rupees to C, D, and E are relevant as showing that the delivery to B was not accidental 7 .

¹ because he has in each case a definite intention of killing the particular person shot at, and there is no ulterior common object to connect together the fact of the previous shooting and the fact in issue, Whitworth, p. 22.

2 as an effect of the cause of his committing the crime.

3 as it is not connected with the fact in issue, namely, whether he committed the particular crime.

⁴ They are relevant as effects of the cause of the fact in issue: see R. v. Gray, 4 F. & F. 1102; but see the remarks on this case in Stephen's Digest, p. 19 n.

5 as effects of the cause of A's making the particular false entry intentionally: see R. v. Richardson, 2 F. & F. 343.

7 They are relevant as effects of the cause of the intentional delivery of the rupee in question. See Taylor, § 322.

16. When there is a question whether a particular act was Existence done, the existence of any course of business, according to of business which it naturally would have been done, is a relevant fact.

when relevant.

Illustrations.

(u) The question is, whether a particular letter was desputched. The facts that it was the ordinary course of business for all letters put in a certain place to be carried to the post, and that that particular letter was put in that place, are relevant 1.

(b) The question is, whether a particular letter reached A. The facts that it was posted in due course, and was not returned through the Dead Letter Office, are relevant?

ADMISSIONS.

- 18. Statements made by a party to the proceeding, or by Admission an agent 4 to any such party, whom the Court regards, under by party to the circumstances of the case, as expressly or impliedly or his authorised by him to make them 5, are admissions.

⁵ Thus a party is bound by an admission of fact made by his vakil, 2 Moo. I. A. 253. But the guardian of a minor cannot bind his ward by admissions of previous transactions, 10 C. L. R., cited by Field, 118; and of course an admission by one of several defendants in a suit is no evidence against another defendant, L. R., 2 I. A. 129.

Admissions by persons whose position must be proved as against party to suit.

19. Statements made by persons whose position or liability it is necessary to prove as against any party to the suit, are admissions, if such statements would be relevant as against such persons in relation to such position or liability in a suit brought by or against them, and if they are made whilst the person making them occupies such position or is subject to such liability 3.

A undertakes to collect rents for B.

A denies that rent was due from C to B.

A statement by C that he owed B rent is an admission, and is a relevant fact as against A, if A denies that C did owe rent to B.

Admis sions by ferred to by party to suit.

proper course.

 \bar{A} produces a book kept by him in the ordinary course of his business, showing observations alleged to have been taken by him from day to day, and indicating that the ship was not taken out of her proper course. A may prove these statements, because they would be admissible between third parties, if he were dead, under section 32, clause (2).

(c) A is accused of a crime committed by him at Calcutta.

He produces a letter written by himself and dated at Lahore on that day, and bearing the Lahore post-mark of that day.

The statement in the date of the letter is admissible, because, if A were dead, it would be admissible under section 32, clause 2.

(d) Λ is accused of receiving stolen goods knowing them to be stolen.

He offers to prove that he refused to sell them below their value.

A may prove these statements, though they are admissions, because they are explanatory of conduct influenced by facts in issue.

(e) A is accused of fraudulently having in his possession counterfeit coin which he knew to be counterfeit.

² See sec. 6 supra.

He offers to prove that he asked a skilful person to examine the coin, as he doubted whether it was counterfeit or not, and that that person did examine it and told him it was genuine.

A may prove these facts for the reasons stated in the last preceding illustration.

When oral admissions as to contents of documents are relevant.

22. Oral admissions 1 as to the contents of a document are not relevant2, unless and until the party proposing to prove them shows that he is entitled to give secondary evidence of the contents of such document under the rules hereinafter contained 3, or unless the genuineness of a document produced is in question 4.

Admissions in civil cases. when relevant.

23. In civil cases no admission is relevant², if it is made either upon an express condition that evidence of it is not to be given, or under circumstances from which the Court can infer that the parties agreed together that evidence of it should not be given.

Explanation,—Nothing in this section shall be taken to exempt any barrister, pleader, attorney, or vakil from giving evidence of any matter of which he may be compelled to give evidence under section 126.

⁷ The explanation seems intended to do away with the objection that in criminal cases, the Crown is the prosecutor. This section does not apply to the deposition of a witness in a former suit when the witness is himself a defendant in the subsequent suit, and the deposition is sought to be used against him, not as evidence given between the parties, one of whom called him as a witness, but as a statement made by him, which would be evidence against him, whether he made it as a witness or on any other occasion, 14 Ben. Appendix 5, per Couch C. J.

The reason for admitting the statements mentioned in secs. 32 and 33 is that in the cases in question no better evidence is to be had.

8 Sections 34-38 deal with statements made under circumstances which in themselves are a strong reason for believing the statements to be true. In such cases there is generally little use in calling the person by whom the statement was made, Stephen, Evidence Act, p. 126.

The list is far from complete; for instance, the Anglo-Indian Courts take judicial notice of the ordinary course of nature, the meaning of English words, and all other matters which they are directed by any Act to notice, such as, in Bengal, lists of landholders who have not made roadcess returns (Ben. Act IX of 1880, s. 19 ; in Madras, bye-laws Provided also that, if oral evidence refers to the existence or condition of any material thing other than a document, the Court may, if it thinks fit, require the production of such material thing for its inspection.

CHAPTER V.

OF DOCUMENTARY EVIDENCE.

Proof of contents of documents.
Primary evidence.

- 61. The contents of documents may be proved either by primary or by secondary evidence.
- 62. Primary evidence means the document itself produced for the inspection of the Court.

Explanation I.—Where a document is executed in several parts, each part is primary evidence of the document:

Where a document is executed in counterpart, each counterpart being executed by one or some of the parties only, each counterpart is primary evidence as against the parties executing it 4.

Explanation II.—Where a number of documents are all made by one uniform process, as in the case of printing, and secondary evidence as against the other parties, sec. 63, cl. (4).

lithography, or photography, each is primary evidence of the contents of the rest; but where they are all copies of a common original, they are not primary evidence of the contents of the original.

Illustration.

A person is shown to have been in possession of a number of placards, all printed at one time from one original. Any one of the placards is primary evidence of the contents of any other, but no one of them is primary evidence of the contents of the original.

63. Secondary evidence means and includes—

Secondary evidence

- (1) Certified copies given under the provisions hereinafter evidence. contained 2;
- (2) Copies made from the original by mechanical processes which in themselves insure the accuracy of the copy, and copies compared with such copies;
 - (3) Copies made from or compared with the original;
- (4) Counterparts of documents as against the parties who did not execute them ³:
- (5) Oral accounts of the contents of a document given by some person who has himself seen it 4.

Illustrations.

(a) A photograph of an original is secondary evidence of its contents, though the two have not been compared, if it is proved that the thing photographed was the original.

(b) Λ copy compared with a copy of a letter made by a copying machine is secondary evidence of the contents of the letter, if it is shown that the copy made by the copying machine was made from the original.

(c) A copy transcribed from a copy, but afterwards compared with the original, is secondary evidence; but the copy not so compared is not secondary evidence of the original, although the copy from which it was transcribed was compared with the original.

(d) Neither an oral account of a copy compared with the original, nor an oral account of a photograph or machine-copy of the original, is secondary evidence of the original.

64. Documents must be proved by primary evidence except Proof of documents by primary evidence.

When secondary evidence relating to documents may be given.

- 65. Secondary evidence may be given 1 of the existence, condition, or contents of a document 2 in the following cases:—
- (a) When the original is shown or appears to be in the possession or power of the person against whom the document is sought to be proved, or of any person out of reach of, or not subject to³, the process of the Court, or of any person legally bound to produce it, and when, after the notice mentioned in section 66, such person does not produce it 4;

- (b) When the existence, condition, or contents of the original have been proved to be admitted in writing by the person against whom it is proved or by his representative in interest;
- (c) When the original has been destroyed or lost ⁵, or when the party offering evidence of its contents cannot, for any other reason not arising from his own default or neglect, produce it in reasonable time ⁶;
- (d) When the original is of such a nature as not to be easily moveable ⁷;
- (e) When the original is a public document within the meaning of section 74;
 - (f) When the original is a document of which a certified

² i.e. a document admissible in evidence. If it is inadmissible in consequence of not being registered (6 Mad. 117) or not being properly stamped, secondary evidence cannot be given of its existence, etc.

This seems intended to include the case of a person not legally bound to produce the document, who refuses to produce it: Miles v. Oddy, 6 C. & P. 732: Marston v. Downes, 1 A. & E. 31.

4 This seems to mean: 'When any person in whose possession or power the original may be, after receiving the notice (if any) required by sec. 66, does not produce such original,' see R. v. Watson, 2 T. R. 201. There need be no evidence of refusal

⁶ 22 Suth. Civ. R. 303: 5 Cal. 886: 7 Cal. 98. The rule in the Limitation Act, sec. 19, as to acknowledgments is an exception to this clause.

Mortimer v. McCallan, 6 M. & W. 68, where Lord Abinger mentioned a case in which a libel was written on the wall of a jail, and the writer was convicted on mere proof of his handwriting. The case where the original is in a country from which it is not permitted to be removed (Alivon v. Furnival, 1 C. M. & R. 277, 291) is not provided for, unless perhaps by the latter part of clause (c).

copy is permitted by this Act, or by any other law in force 1 in British India 2, to be given in evidence:

(g) When the originals consist of numerous accounts or other documents which cannot conveniently be examined in court, and the fact to be proved is the general result of the whole collection 3.

In cases (a), (c), and (d), any secondary evidence of the contents of the document is admissible 4.

In case (b), the written admission is admissible.

In case (e) or (f), a certified copy of the document, but no other kind of secondary evidence 5, is admissible.

In case (g), evidence may be given as to the general result of the documents by any person who has examined them, and who is skilled in the examination of such documents.

66. Secondary evidence of the contents 6 of the documents Rules as to referred to in section 65, clause (a), shall not be given unless notice to the party proposing to give such secondary evidence has previously given to the party 7 in whose possession or power the document is, or to his attorney or pleader, such notice to produce it as is prescribed by law 8; and if no notice is prescribed by law, then such notice as the Court considers reasonable under the circumstances of the case:

Provided that such notice shall not be required in order to render secondary evidence admissible in any of the following cases, or in any other case in which the Court thinks fit to dispense with it9:-

- (1) When the document to be proved is itself a notice;
- (2) When, from the nature of the case, the adverse party must know that he will be required to produce it 10;

Such maps may be admissible under sec. 13, 5 Cal. 287. The presumption under this section '83' is in no way affected

Books, maps and charts. 87. The Court may presume that any book to which it may refer for information on matters of public or general interest, and that any published map or chart, the statements of which are relevant facts, and which is produced for its inspection, was written and published by the person, and at the time and place, by whom or at which it purports to have been written or published ³.

Explanation.—Documents are said to be in proper custody if Proper they are in the place in which, and under the care of the custody person with whom, they would naturally be ⁵; but no custody is improper if it is proved to have had a legitimate origin, or if the circumstances of the particular case are such as to render such an origin probable ⁶.

This explanation applies also to section 81.

(c) A, a connection of B, produces deeds relating to lands in B's possession, which were deposited with him by B for safe custody. The custody is proper.

² 5 Cal. 887, where Wilson J. held that the explanation of the section was not limited to cases in which the document is actually produced in Court.

4 See Tayl. § 598: 4 Bom. H. C. A. C. J. 60: 5 ibid. 135: 6 ibid. 90: 11 Bom. 89, 98. But when a document more than thirty years old purports to be signed by an agent on behalf of a principal, there is no presumption as to the agent's authority, 3 Cal. 557: 6 Cal. 209.

5 The 'custody' of course is matter to be established by evidence, 10 Suth. Civ. R. 1: 12 ibid. 472: 21 ibid. 45: 24 ibid. 428, col. 2. But the mere fact that a document is filed by a party to a suit is sometimes accepted by the provincial courts as sufficient to show the previous custody, and thus fictitious documents are introduced without any one having incurred the responsibility of pledging his oath to the genuineness.

OF THE EXCLUSION OF ORAL BY DOCUMENTARY EVIDENCE.

Evidence contracts etc. reduced to form of

91. When the terms of a contract, or of a grant, or of any of terms of other disposition of property, have been reduced 1 to the form of a document, and in all cases in which any matter is required by law to be reduced to the form of a document², no evidence document. shall be given in proof of the terms of such contract, grant, or other disposition of property, or of such matter, except the document itself, or secondary evidence of its contents in cases in which secondary evidence is admissible under the provisions hereinbefore contained 3.

> Exception I.—When a public officer is required by law to be appointed in writing, and when it is shown that any particular person has acted as such officer, the writing by which he is appointed need not be proved 4.

> Exception II.—Wills admitted to probate in British India may be proved by the probate 5.

> Explanation I.—This section applies equally to cases in which the contracts, grants, or dispositions of property referred to are contained in one document, and to cases in which they are contained in more documents than one.

> Explanation II.—Where there are more originals than one, one original only need be proved.

> Explanation III.—The statement, in any document whatever, of a fact other than the facts referred to in this section, shall not preclude the admission of oral evidence as to the same fact.

3 But the existence of a promissory note does not preclude the payce from resorting to his original consideration and giving evidence of an oral admission of the debt, 4 All. 135: 7

Cal. 256: but see 10 Mad. 94, 96. The existence of an instrument whereby A relinquishes to his landlord B his right of occupying certain land, and requests B to register the land in the name of A's vendee C, does not exclude oral evidence of the transaction between A and C, 2 Mad. 117.

(b) If a contract is contained in a bill of exchange, the bill of exchange must be proved.

(c) If a bill of exchange is drawn in a set of three, one only need be proved.

(d) A contracts, in writing, with B, for the delivery of indigo upon certain terms. The contract mentions the fact that B had paid A the price of other indigo contracted for verbally on another occasion.

92. When the terms of any such contract, grant, or other Exclusion disposition of property, or any matter required by law to be of oral reduced to the form of a document, have been proved ac-agreement. cording to the last section, no evidence of any oral agreement or statement shall be admitted, as between the parties to any such instrument or their representatives in interest, for the purpose of contradicting, varying ¹, adding to, or subtracting from, its terms ²:

Sections 91 and 92 contain with slight modifications the rule of the English common law. But when subsequently dealing with the equitable jurisdiction of the Courts the legislature has shown the clearest intention to relax the provisions of those sections, so as to bring them into conformity with the practice of the Court of Chancery. Thus the Specific Relief Act, sec. 26, clause (c), would enable a defendant in a suit for specific relief to prove an oral agreement for reconveyance, in bar of the plaintiff's conveyance, 4 Bom. 607, and see vol. I of this work, p. 969, note 1. It has, accordingly, been held that section 92 does not exclude evidence of subsequent conduct and surrounding circumstances in order to show (as against a person fraudulently claiming to be an absolute purchaser) that a document purporting to be a conveyance is really a mortgage deed, 9 Cal. 900: 4 Bom. 594. Nor does it prevent a party to a contract from showing that there was no consideration, or that the consideration differed from that described in the contract, 3 Bom. 159. But in a prosecution under the Penal Code, sec. 492, the effect of sec. 92 of the Evidence Act is to preclude a charge for breach of anystipulation not contained in the writing.

Proviso (2).—The existence of any separate oral agreement as to any matter on which a document is silent, and which is not inconsistent with its terms, may be proved ⁸. In considering whether or not this proviso applies, the Court shall have regard to the degree of formality of the document.

Proviso (3).—The existence of any separate oral agreement, constituting a condition precedent to the attaching of any obligation of under any such contract, grant, or disposition of property, may be proved ¹⁰.

Proviso (4).—The existence of any distinct subsequent oral agreement to rescind or modify any such contract, grant, or disposition of property, may be proved, except in cases in which such contract, grant, or disposition of property is by law required to be in writing, or has been registered according

- ² See the Contract Act, secs. 14, 17, and 19; see also 9 Cal. 528, following 4 Bom. 594, and dissenting from 5 Cal. 300. In I Bom. 333 the Court held that the fraud here mentioned must be fraud contemporaneous with, and not subsequent to, the making of the document. And in 6 Cal. 338, Garth C.J. held that proviso (1) applied to cases where evidence is admitted to show that a contract is void or voidable, or subject to reformation upon the ground of fraud, duress, illegality, etc. in its inception; and not to cases where the agreement being in itself perfectly valid and free from any taint of that kind, one of the parties attempts to make a fraudulent use of it, as against the other. But in 4 Bom. 608, M. Melvill J. seemed to think that the proviso was large enough to let in evidence of such subsequent conduct as, in the view of a Court of Equity, would amount to fraud, and would entitle a grantor to a decree restraining the grantee from proceeding on his document.

(b) A sues B for the money due on a bond.

The execution of the bond is admitted, but B says that it was obtained by fraud, which A denies.

¹ So when A hires a horse which when delivered to him was sound, but when returned was foundered, the burden of proving how the horse was foundered lies on A, Collins v. Bennet, cited in 9 All. 406. So in a suit against a zamíndár to recover the sale of a patní tenure on the ground of non-service of the notice required by Ben. Reg. VIII of 1819, sec. 8, cl. (2), the burden of proving service lies on the zamíndár, 21 Suth. Civ. R. 397. So in cases between mortgagor and mortgagee, where there is no evidence as to the amount of the debt, as the mortgagee would naturally have the mortgage deed, it lies upon him to prove that such amount is larger than that stated by the mortgagor, L. R., 3 I. A. 85: 5 All. 186. So in a suit to enforce a right of preemption, in which the plaintiff impugns the correctness of the price stated in the instrument of sale, very slight evidence is ordinarily sufficient to establish a primâ facie case in his favour, and when such case is established, it rests upon the defendants, vendor and vendee, to prove that the price was larger than that stated by the preemptor, 5 All. 184, 187.

The Act should have here laid down some rule as to the duty of the party offering in evidence an instrument which, on its production, appears to have been altered, see Taylor, §§ 1819-1821, and 1 Moo. I. A. 420: 9 ibid. 1.

The latter part of the section seems to require qualification. Regard should be had to the physical condition of the husband, and the proof should not be conclusive if the circumstances of the access were such as to render it improbable that sexual intercourse took place when the access occurred.

(h) That if a man refuses to answer a question which he is not compelled to answer by law, the answer, if given, would be unfavourable to him.

(i) That when a document creating an obligation is in the hands of the obligor, the obligation has been discharged ².

But the Court shall also have regard to such facts as the following, in considering whether such maxims do or do not apply to the particular case before it:—

As to illustration (a)—A shop-keeper has in his till a marked rupee soon after it was stolen, and cannot account for its possession specifically, but is continually receiving rupees in the course of his business:

As to illustration (b)—A, a person of the highest character, is tried for causing a man's death by an act of negligence in arranging certain machinery. B, a person of equally good character, who also took part in the arrangement, describes precisely what was done, and admits and explains the common carelessness of A and himself:

As to illustration (b)—A crime is committed by several persons. A, B, and C, three of the criminals, are captured on the spot and kept apart from each other. Each gives an account of the crime implicating D, and the accounts corroborate each other in such a manner as to render previous concert highly improbable:

As to illustration (c)—A, the drawer of a bill of exchange, was a man of business. B, the acceptor, was a young and ignorant person, completely under A's influence:

As to illustration (d)—It is proved that a river ran in a certain course five years ago, but it is known that there have been floods since that time which might change its course:

C. 174. Statutory estoppels by words or conduct will be found in the Contract Act, secs. 237, 245, 246.

Appx. 29: and many other cases of benámi transactions: 6 All. 24 (fraudulent sale by trustee): 1 Agra, 71 (fictitious sale to evade revenue process). A large collection will be found in Field's Evidence, pp. 579-586.

⁴ For instances of estoppel by omission, see 3 Ben. A. C. J. 407 and 1 Bom. 314. The case of Young v. Grote, 4 Bing. 454 (where a husband left with his wife blank cheques ready signed), is a good English illustration of estoppel by negligence.

⁵ 4 Cal. 787. The expression 'intentionally' was substituted for 'wilfully' in the rule stated in Pickard v. Sears, 6 A. & E. 469, and explained in Freeman v. Cooke, 2 Ex. 654, and Cornish v. Abington, 7 H. & N. 549, apparently in order to exclude from the operation of the rule cases to which it might have been applied in India if expressed in the terms used by the English Courts, 7 Mad. 8. See ibid. 110 and 2 All. 809. As to constructive fraud, I All. 306.

⁶ The altering of his position by the person pleading estoppel is an essential part of the rule, 7 All. 515. Sec. 115 implies that no declaration, act, or omission will amount to an estoppel, unless it has caused the person whom it concerns to alter his

3 The words 'at the beginning of the tenancy' can only apply to cases in which the tenants are put into possession of the tenancy by the person to whom they have attorned, and not to a case where the tenants have previously been in possession, 11 Cal. 523.

⁴ This does not, of course, debar one who has once been a tenant from contending that his landlord's title has been lost, or that his tenancy has determined, 2 Mad. 226. The tenant should give up possession, and then if he has any title aliunde, that title may be tried in a suit of ejectment brought by him against his late landlord, 8 Bom. H. C., A. C. J. 175, citing Doe v. Lady Smythe, 4 M. & S. 347. Mere payments of rent do not operate as an estoppel debarring the person making the payments from questioning the right of the payee. They cannot have such effect unless the person paying was let into possession by the payee, and even then their effect as estoppel would be confined to the title of the payee at the time possession was given, 6 N. W. P. 337, per Turner J.

⁵ Doe v. Baytup, 3 A. & E. 188. See as to licenses, Act V of 1882, secs. 52-64, supra, vol. I, pp. 924-927. The principle of the rule extends to persons coming into possession as mere lodgers or servants (Tayl. § 102).

Explanation I. The acceptor of a bill of exchange may deny that the bill was really drawn by the person by whom it purports to have been drawn.

Explanation II.—If a bailer delivers the goods bailed to a person other than the bailor, he may prove that such person had a right to them as against the bailor².

² And in England a bailee may show that his bailor wrongfully and without notice to the bailee obtained the goods from a third person, who has claimed them from such bailee; see cases in Stephen's Digest, art. 105. There is no provision in the Evidence Act as to the estoppel of an agent, whose position in this respect resembles that of bailee. The Act is also silent as to the estoppel of a master signing a bill of lading (18 & 19 Vic. c. 111, sec. 3).

³ 14 Ben. 54, 295 (children too young to understand the nature of an oath). Section 118 does not render an accused person competent to testify on his own behalf; see the Code of Criminal Procedure, sec. 345. But it was held in 1866 that, where there is no community of interest, he may testify for or against a co-defendant, 6 Suth. Cr. R. 91, citing Reg. v. Stevenson, Tayl. Ev. § 1357, note 1. CHAPTER X

OF THE EXAMINATION OF WITNESSES

135. The order in which witnesses are produced and Order of examined shall be regulated by the law and practice for the production time being relating to civil and criminal procedure respectively 3, nation of and in the absence of any such law, by the discretion of the witnesses. Court.

136. When either party proposes to give evidence of any Judge to fact, the Judge may ask the party proposing to give the decide as to admissi evidence in what manner the alleged fact, if proved, would be bility of relevant; and the Judge shall admit the evidence if he thinks evidence. that the fact, if proved, would be relevant, and not otherwise.

1 The jury in cases tried by jury, and the Court in cases tried by assessors, may no doubt presume that an accomplice is unworthy of credit unless corroborated (sec. 114, ill. b); but before acting on the presumption the Court or jury is required by sec. 114 and the sequel to the illustrations to consider certain facts with the view to ascertain the possibility of the story told. The rule in sec. 133 is thus brought to coincide with the English rule that, though the tainted evidence of an accomplice should be carefully scanned and received with caution. and may be treated as unworthy of credit, yet, if the jury in the one case, or the Court in the other, credits the evidence, a conviction proceeding upon it is not illegal, I Mad. 395, per Morgan C.J. And see 9 All. 528, per Edge C.J. As to the desirability of corroboration see 5 Suth. Cr. 80: 4 Mad. H. C. Appx. 7: 3 Bom. H. C., C. C. 57: 6 ibid. 57.

The uncorroborated evidence of a single witness, if believed, is therefore sufficient, under this Act, to convict a man of perjury or of an offence against chap, vi of the Penal Code: to authorise a magistrate to make under the Code of Criminal Procedure, c. 36, an order against the alleged father of a bastard child: to justify a judge in giving a decree in favour of the plaintiff in a suit for breach of promise of marriage, or to establish a claim on the estate of a deceased person.

³ See the Civil Procedure Code, sees. 179, 180; and the Criminal Procedure Code, secs. 286, 287, 289, 290.

If the fact proposed to be proved is one of which evidence is admissible only upon proof of some other fact, such lastmentioned fact must be proved before evidence is given of the fact first mentioned, unless the party undertakes to give proof of such fact and the Court is satisfied with such undertaking.

If the relevancy of one alleged fact depends upon another alleged fact being first proved, the Judge may, in his discretion, either permit evidence of the first fact to be given before the second fact is proved, or require evidence to be given of the second fact before evidence is given of the first fact.

Illustrations.

(a) It is proposed to prove a statement about a relevant fact by a person alleged to be dead, which statement is relevant under section 32.

The fact that the person is dead must be proved by the person proposing to prove the statement, before evidence is given of the statement.

(b) It is proposed to prove, by a copy, the contents of a document said to be lost.

The fact that the original is lost must be proved by the person proposing to produce the copy, before the copy is produced.

(c) A is accused of receiving stolen property knowing it to have been stolen.

It is proposed to prove that he denied the possession of the property.

The relevancy of the denial depends on the identity of the property. The Court may, in its discretion, either require the property to be identified before the denial of the possession is proved, or permit the denial of the possession to be proved before the property is identified.

(d) It is proposed to prove a fact (A) which is said to have been the cause or effect of a fact in issue. There are several intermediate facts (B, C and D) which must be shown to exist before the fact (A) can be regarded as the cause or effect of the fact in issue. The Court may either permit A to be proved before B, C or D is proved, or may require proof of B, C and D before permitting proof of A.

The examination and cross-examination must relate to relevant facts⁴, but the cross-examination need not be confined to the facts to which the witness testified on his examination-in-chief⁵.

The re-examination shall be directed to the explanation of Direction matters referred to in cross-examination; and if new matter of re-examination, is, by permission of the Court, introduced in re-examination, the adverse party may further cross-examine upon that matter ⁶.

143. Leading questions may be asked in cross-examination ².

144. Any witness may be asked, whilst under examination, whether any contract, grant or other disposition of property, as to which he is giving evidence, was not contained in a document, and if he says that it was, or if he is about to make any statement as to the contents of any document, which, in the opinion of the Court, ought to be produced, the adverse party may object 3 to such evidence being given until such document is produced, or until facts have been proved which entitle the party who called the witness to give secondary evidence of it.

Explanation.—A witness may give oral evidence of statements made by other persons about the contents of documents if such statements are in themselves relevant facts ⁴.

Illustration.

The question is, whether A assaulted B.

C deposes that he heard A say to D—'B wrote a letter accusing me of theft, and I will be revenged on him.' This statement is relevant, as showing A's motive for the assault, and evidence may be given of it, though no other evidence is given about the letter.

Cross examination as to previous statements in writing.

- 145. A witness may be cross-examined as to previous statements made by him in writing or reduced into writing, and relevant to matters in question 5, without such writing
- ¹ So where the questions are for the purpose of identification, or after a witness' memory has been fairly exhausted, and he does not recollect without its being refreshed (Tayl. §§ 1404, 1405).
- ² But see Taylor, § 1431, for two qualifications: (1) the question must not put into the witness' mouth the very words which he is to echo back again, and (2) the question must not assume that facts have been proved which have not been proved or that particular answers have been given contrary to the fact. The judge has no power to prohibit leading questions from being put to an ad-
- versary's witness who shows a strong interest or bias in favour of the cross-examining party. Such a power, according to Mr. Taylor, § 1431, exists in America.

- (1) Such questions are proper if they are of such a nature that the truth of the imputation conveyed by them would seriously affect the opinion of the Court as to the credibility of the witness on the matter to which he testifies:
- (2) Such questions are improper if the imputation which they convey relates to matters so remote in time, or of such a character, that the truth of the imputation would not affect, or

- (3) Such questions are improper if there is a great disproportion between the importance of the imputation made against the witness's character and the importance of his evidence:
- (4) The Court may, if it sees fit, draw, from the witness's refusal to answer, the inference that the answer if given would be unfavourable.

Question not to be asked without reasonable grounds. 149. No such question as is referred to in section 148 ought to be asked, unless the person asking it has reasonable grounds for thinking that the imputation which it conveys is well-founded.

Illustrations,

- (a) A barrister is instructed by an attorney or vakil that an important witness is a dacoit. This is a reasonable ground for asking the witness whether he is a dacoit.
- (b) A pleader is informed by a person in Court that an important witness is a dacoit. The informant, on being questioned by the pleader, gives satisfactory reasons for his statement. This is a reasonable ground for asking the witness whether he is a dacoit.
- (c) A witness, of whom nothing whatever is known, is asked at random whether he is a dacoit. There are here no reasonable grounds for the question.
- (d) A witness, of whom nothing whatever is known, being questioned as to his mode of life and means of living, gives unsatisfactory answers. This may be a reasonable ground for asking him if he is a dacoit.

Procedure when question asked without reasonable grounds.

150. If the Court is of opinion that any such question was asked without reasonable grounds, it may, if it was asked by any barrister, pleader, vakil or attorney, report the circumstances of the case to the High Court or other authority to which such barrister, pleader, vakil or attorney is subject in the exercise of his profession.

Exception 11.—If a witness is asked any question tending to impeach his impartiality, and answers it by denying the facts suggested, he may be contradicted 4.

Evidence is offered to show that he did make such a claim.

The evidence is inadmissible.

(b) A witness is asked whether he was not dismissed from a situation for dishonesty. He denies it.

Evidence is offered to show that he was dismissed for dishonesty. The evidence is not admissible.

(c) A affirms that on a certain day he saw B at Lahore.

A is asked whether he himself was not on that day at Calcutta.

Evidence is offered to show that A was on that day at Calcutta. The evidence is admissible, not as contradicting A on a fact

- 1 Thus, when A is prosecuted for committing a rape on B, if B is asked on cross-examination whether she had not illicit intercourse with other men, evidence to contradict her answer is inadmissible.
- The words 'but if he answers falsely he may afterwards be charged with giving false evidence' were apparently inserted in forgetfulness of the fact that the Indian law as to false evidence differs from the English law as to perjury in not requiring that the matter charged as false should have been material to the issue, supra, vol. i, p. 164.

He denies it. He may be contradicted on the ground that the question tends to impeach his impartiality.

Question by party to his own witness.

154. The Court may, in its discretion, permit the person who calls a witness to put any questions to him which might be put in cross-examination by the adverse party².

Impeaching credit of witness.

- 155. The credit of a witness may be impeached in the following ways by the adverse party, or, with the consent of the Court, by the party who calls him:—
- (1) By the evidence of persons who testify that they, from their knowledge of the witness, believe him to be unworthy of credit;
- (2) By proof that the witness has been bribed, or has accepted the offer of a bribe, or has received any other corrupt inducement to give his evidence;
- (3) By proof of former statements inconsistent with any part of his evidence which is liable to be contradicted ⁴;
- (4) When a man is prosecuted for rape or an attempt to ravish, it may be shown that the prosecutrix was of generally immoral character ⁵.

Explanation.—A witness declaring another witness to be unworthy of credit may not, upon his examination-in-chief, give reasons for his belief, but he may be asked his reasons in cross-examination, and the answers which he gives cannot be contradicted ⁶, though, if they are false, he may afterwards be charged with giving false evidence.

When witness may use copy of document to refresh memory.

Whenever a witness may refresh his memory by reference to any document, he may, with the permission of the Court, refer to a copy of such document³: provided the Court be satisfied that there is sufficient reason for the non-production of the original⁴.

OF IMPROPER ADMISSION AND REJECTION OF EVIDENCE.

INTRODUCTION TO THE LIMITATION ACT.

The objects of the Indian Limitation Act, 1877, are two: first, to limit the time at the expiration of which a civil right cannot be enforced; secondly, to prescribe the length of user by which a right to property may be acquired. The law is founded on public policy, its aim being to secure the quiet of the community, to suppress fraud and perjury, to quicken diligence, and to prevent oppression. Useful in Europe and America, it is still more needed in India, where, from climatic and other causes, documentary evidence of title perishes with unusual rapidity. The law of Limitation, as affecting the form of the remedy, comes under the head of adjective law. The law of Prescription, as affecting the substance of the right itself, comes under the department of substantive law; and when, if ever, the Indian statute-book is re-arranged on a scientific basis, section 28 of the Limitation Act will take its place among the laws contained in the first volume of this work.

Native rules of limitation: The Hindú law contains several texts relating to limitation and prescription, which will be found in Colebrooke's Digest, vol. i. p. 190, and Upendra Nath Mitra's Law of Limitation and Prescription, pp. 19-27. The Muhammadans², like the Jews³, seem to have had no law of limitation or prescription. But to the Indian lawyer these matters are now of merely antiquarian interest, the vague and imperfect Native rules having long since been superseded by English statutes or Anglo-Indian Regulations and Acts.

Of these Regulations, the first was the Bengal Reg. III of 1793, sec. 14, under which, as a rule, all suits must be brought within twelve years of the time at which the cause action arose.

Limitation law of Bengal.

Ben. Reg. II of 1805 fixed sixty years as the period of limitation in respect of suits by Government. It also dealt with suits for immoveable property, suits for penalties, and summary suits for arrears of rent. It declared that, as a rule, no length of time should bar a suit for the recovery of property mortgaged or deposited.

Ben. Reg. II of 1819, sec. 24, fixed one year as the time within which suits to contest certain decisions of the Board of Revenue in lákhiráj cases must be instituted.

Ben. Reg. V of 1831, sec. 5, extended to the Courts of Munsifs the limitation-rules in force in the District Courts.

Ben. Reg. VIII of 1831, sec. 6, prescribed a period of one year to regular suits for contesting the summary awards of the Revenue authorities in matters connected with rent.

Act IV of 1840, secs. 4 and 6, provided a limitation for complaints of dispossession of lands, etc.

Acts I of 1845, sec. 24, and XI of 1859, sec. 33, prescribed a limit of one year to suits to set aside sales for arrears of revenue.

Acts XIII of 1848 fixed a period of three years for suits to contest certain awards made by the Revenue authorities.

As to appeals, limitation-rules were prescribed by Ben. Reg. Appeals. VII of 1832, sec. 2, and by Act XXV of 1837, sec. 9. As to applications, the only rules were those in Ben. Reg. VI of 1813, Applicasec. 3, which prescribed a period of six months for summary tions. applications for execution of awards, and Act XIX of 1841, sec. 14, which fixed a like period for applications to the judge in cases of disputed succession, and Act XVI of 1845, which fixed a period of three months for applications to readmit a dismissed appeal.

The Regulations contained no rule as to applications for the Execution execution of decrees; but the twelve years' limitation was adopted in of decrees. the Bengal mufassal by analogy to the general law for the trial of suits: and such applications might, under slight restrictions, be renewed every twelve years 1. There seems to have been no such rule in the Madras or the Bombay mufassal.

In the Madras Presidency, Mad. Reg. II of 1802, sec. 18, pre-Limitation scribed a rule substantially the same as that laid down by Ben. law of Reg. III of 1793, sec_14. But exceptions were made in the case of claims founded on certain bonds, and also on mortgages, 'the period for rendering which obsolete and unactionable is to be determined by the laws of the country,' which, probably, meant local No time was fixed for suits by Government. appeals, limitation-rules were prescribed by Mad. Regs. IV of 1802, sec. 12, V of 1802, sec. 10, XII of 1802, sec. 10, XV of 1816, sec. 5, VI of 1828, secs. 3 and 4, and by Acts XXXV of 1837, sec. 3, VII of 1843, secs. 8 and 9. The only limitation-rule as to applications was that contained in Act XVI of 1845, which prescribed a period injury to the person and reputation, and for the recovery of the privileges of caste, were limited to twelve months (sec. 2). Suits for debts not founded upon or supported by writing, and for damages other than those above specified, were limited to six years (sec. 3). Suits for the recovery of immoveable property and hereditary offices were barred after thirty years (sec. 1), and all other suits after twelve years (sec. 4). Where the possession of immoveable property had been acquired by fraud, the period of limitation was extended to sixty years (sec. 1).

There was no limitation for suits to recover mortgaged property, unless where it had been held for more than thirty years 'by a bona fide possessor as proprietor' (sec. 8). There were rules as to the effect of oral and written admissions by the defendant (sec. 7, cl. 1), and of proceedings in court or before an arbitrator (sec. 7, cl. 2). The claimant's minority or insanity was also provided for (sec. 7, cl. 3).

For suits before Collectors provision was made by Bom. Reg. XVII of 1827, sec. 31.

No period of limitation was prescribed for suits by Government. For appeals, limitation-rules were provided by Bom. Regs. IV of 1827, secs. 73 and 99, and VII of 1827, sec. 10, and VII of 1831, secs. 3 and 4. For applications to replace suits struck off the file, a rule was prescribed in Bom. Reg. IV of 1827, sec. 21.

As to prescription, bond fide possession 'as proprietor' of land etc. for more than thirty years conferred a right of property therein (sees. 1 and 8).

The Nonregulation Provinces. These Regulations did not apply to the Non-regulation Provinces, such as the Panjáb and Oudh. The so-called Panjáb Civil Code, part 2, sec. 1, clauses 6–10, contained some limitation-rules, which were modified by various letters from the Government of India and circulars of the Judicial Commissioner ¹. In Oudh I believe that certain circular orders of the Judicial Commissioner were enforced, until Act XIV of 1859 was extended to that province by the Executive Government.

The Presidency towns.

The Supreme Courts in the three Presidency towns adopted the English law of limitation as contained in the 21 Jac. I, c. 16, and 4 Anne, c. 16, and such adoption was recognised by the Judicial Committee in the East India Company v.Oditchurn Paul² and in Ruckmaboye v. Lulloobhoy Mottichund³. The Supreme Courts at Calcutta and Bombay, after some hesitation, decided that the English law of limitation, as being part of the lew fori, was applicable to Hindű suitors in those Courts; and the Judicial Committee affirmed these decisions. The English statute 9 Geo. IV, c. 14, was extended to India by Act XIV of 1840; but 2 & 3 Will. IV, c. 71, as to the acquisition of easements by prescription; 3 & 4 Will. IV, c. 27, for the limitation of actions relating to real property; and 3 & 4 Will. IV, c. 42, providing limitations for actions on specialties, were never extended to India.

It will thus be seen that, neglecting the rules in force in Oudh Act XIV and the Panjab, four different systems of limitation-laws were in of 1859. force in British India down to 1859. In that year a Bill, which had been framed in 1842 by the Indian Law Commissioners, was passed (with some amendments by Sir James Colvile and Sir Barnes Peacock) as Act XIV of 1859. It provided one uniform law of limitation for all the Courts in British India, except as to proceedings for the execution of decrees in the three Supreme Courts, certain suits by mortgagees in those Courts, and suits for public claims under Ben. Reg. II of 1805. A period of twelve years was fixed for suits relating to immoveable property, specialties governed by English law, and legacies: six years for other personal demands: three years for suits for money lent, for breaches of unregistered contracts, for rent, for hire and for the recovery of property comprised in certain possessory awards; one year for suits for pre-emption, for penalties, for injury not affecting immoveable property, for wages, and for setting aside public sales and summary orders. The period in the case of many of these suits, and of all suits not expressly provided for, was declared to run 'from the time the cause of action arose.' The grounds of exception to the ordinary rules were declared to be; (1) the plaintiff's legal disability, including minority, idiocy, lunacy, and in cases govern by English law, coverture; (2) ineffectual proceedings bona fide taken by the plaintiff in a Court without jurisdiction; (3) the defendant's absence from British India; (4) written acknowledgments of liability to pay a debt or legacy, signed by the defendant; (5) concealed fraud of the defendant; (6) the relation of trustee and beneficiary. The Act also rendered verbal acknowledgments of liability or payments by the debtor ineffectual to keep alive or revive the debt.

Sir James Colvile proposed to enact specific rules for the acquisition and extinction of rights by prescription: but the Act of 1859 provided for the limitation of suits only, and as such left untouched the rule of prescription contained in Bom. Reg. V of 1827, secs. 1 and 8.

Notwithstanding the ability and learning of the framers of Defects of Act XIV of 1859, the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council Act XIV of 1859.

characterised it as an 'inartificially drawn statute'.' This description is justified by the great number of the reported decisions on the Act during its short life of ten years. On considering these cases, which had been carefully collected and discussed by Mr. Ninian Thomson², a judge of the Court of Small Causes at Calcutta, it seemed to the writer (then secretary to the Government of India in the legislative department) that, apart from the defects of drafting above referred to, the bulk of the litigation on the Act was occasioned by the absence of any specific declaration as to when in each case the fixed period of limitation should be deemed to commence.

The Act of 1859 in many places 3 declared that the period of limitation was to run from the time when the 'cause of action arose.' But 'cause of action' is an ambiguous term. It is often, even to professional lawyers and trained judges, difficult to determine at what precise period in a transaction the cause of action does arise, and most of the difficulties connected with statutes of limitation in England and in India have been produced by the necessity of answering this question. Take as illustrations the simple cases of a promissory note payable with interest on demand, or by instalments, or given by the maker to a third person to be delivered to the payee after a certain event should happen. When, in each of these cases, does the cause of action arise in favour of the payee? When does the cause of action arise on a dishonoured foreign bill when protest has been made and notice given? When does it arise in the case of the acceptor of an accommodation bill as against the drawer? It occurred to me therefore that the best way of framing a Limitation Act likely to be practically useful in India would be to throw the bulk of it into a tricolumnar schedule, specifying in the first column the commonest suits, appeals and applications: in the second, the period of limitation appropriate to each of these proceedings; and in the third, the specific date from which the time is to begin to run, which, in the case of a suit, would generally, though not necessarily4, be identical with the time when the cause of action arose. The body of the Act was to contain the necessary rules as to dismissing time-barred suits. legal disability and computing periods of limitation. It was also (but this was an after-thought) to contain rules as to the -acquisition of prescriptive titles to easements, etc., as to which, except in Bombay, there was nothing but some vague and inconsistent judge-made law¹. Mr., now Sir James, Stephen, then law-member of the Governor General's Council, approved of the idea; and I thereupon, with the aid of the Indian cases collected by Mr. Thomson and the English cases collected by Messrs. Darby and Bosanquet, drew the Bill which afterwards became Act IX of 1871.

The following are the principal amendments made by this Act:

- a. The Courts are required to give effect to the law, whether the defence of limitation be pleaded or not.
- b. An extension of time is allowed when the period of limitation expires on a day when the Court is closed.
- c. The limitation-clauses of several special laws are repealed and re-enacted. All other such clauses are expressly saved from the general Act.
- d. Express provision is made for co-existing or double disabilities.
- e. In suits on foreign contracts the lex fori is to be preferred to the limitation law of the country where the contract was entered into. Such law, however, may be pleaded when it has extinguished the contract, and the parties were domiciled in such country during the prescribed period.
- f. In computing the period of limitation, the day on which the right to sue accrued is to be excluded.
- g. The time during which the commencement of a suit has been stayed by injunction is to be excluded ².
- h. Except in the case of suits for the possession of land and hereditary offices, a right to sue is not to accrue unless there is at the time a person in existence capable of suing, as also a person in existence capable of being sued.
- i. Acknowledgments must be made before the expiry of the period of limitation. The terms of a lost written acknowledgment may not be proved by parol evidence ³.
- j. The effect of substituting or adding a new plaintiff or defendant is declared.
- k. The English rule of computing time when there are successive breaches of contract, a continuing breach or a continuing nuisance, is adopted.
 - l. The rule in Backhouse v. Bonomi as to suits for compensation for an act which becomes actionable in case it causes damage, is declared (sec. 25).

m. All instruments are for the purposes of the Act to be deemed to be made with reference to the Gregorian calendar.

- n. Rules for the acquisition of casements by positive prescription (analogous to those contained in 2 & 3 Will. 1V, c. 71) are contained in secs. 5, 27, 28.
- o. An express rule of extinctive prescription, resembling that in 3 & 4 Will. IV, c. 27, sec. 34, is applied to lands and hereditary offices.
- p. An application to execute a decree within the limited time keeps alive the decree, and a new period is allowed from the date of the application or the issue of a notice to the judgment-debtor.
- q. The time allowed for the execution of a decree or order of which a certified copy has been registered is extended to six years.
- r. To suits by Government the sixty years limitation is applied in all the Courts and in all the Presidencies.

Act IX of 1871 greatly diminished litigation of the kind above referred to, and in other respects was, on the whole, a successful measure. But during the six years that it was in operation several amendments occurred to Mr. Hobhouse (Mr. Stephen's successor) and myself, and some valuable suggestions as to the third column of schedule II were made by Sir Richard Garth, then Chief Justice of Bengal. Moreover, a new Civil Procedure Code had been drafted, which would alter the periods of time provided for making divers applications to the Courts, create certain new applications, and thus render the Limitation Act of 1871 to some extent incorrect and incomplete.

Act XV of 1877.

Under these circumstances, I prepared a new draft, which was settled by Sir Arthur Hobhouse, and introduced by him into the Governor-General's Council on 21 February, 1877. It was passed (as Act XV of 1877) after Sir Arthur Hobhouse had left India, and it came into force on the 1st October 1877, contemporaneously with the Civil Procedure Code of that year.

The following are the principal amendments made by the Limitation Act of 1877.

- a. Successive or supervenient disabilities, as well as the disability of legal representatives, have been provided for.
- b. Suits to enforce rights of pre-emption have been excluded from the operation of the exceptions as to legal disabilities and the non-existence of a legal representative capable of suing and being sued (secs. 7, 17). This was done on the recommendation of Sayyid Mahmud, now on the bench of the High Court at Allahabad, who said that, under Muhammadan law, it was very doubtful whether the right of pre-emption was ever intended to be conferred on persons suffering from legal disability.

- c. A purchaser for valuable consideration from an express trustee, whether he had or had not notice of the trust at the time of the purchase, is protected by twelve years' possession (sec. 10). Here the Indian agrees with the English law as altered by 37 & 38 Vic. c. 57.
- d. The time of a defendant's absence from British India is excluded in computing the period of limitation, whether a summons could or could not be served upon him during such absence (sec. 13). Here the Indian Act agrees with the English law as to persons absent beyond seas (4 Anne, c. 16, sec. 19).
- e. A written acknowledgment in respect of any matter of right gives a fresh starting-point ¹.
- f. The effect of a part-payment has been extended to all debts, whether arising out of a contract in writing or not (sec. 20). Joint contractors and joint mortgagors, as well as several partners or executors, are freed from liability by reason only of an acknowledgment or payment made by one of them (sec. 21). This is in accord with 19 & 20 Vic. c. 57, sec. 14, and 3 & 4 Wm. IV, c. 27, sec. 28.
- g. The right to sue is renewed from day to day in the case of all continuing wrongs, not merely in the case of a continuing nuisance (sec. 23).
- h. The rules as to the estate of Hindú widows and Hindú managers of joint estates are extended to Muhammadans where they have adopted, or, in the case of Hindú converts to Islém, have retained, the Hindú law of property, schedule II, arts. 107, 125, 141. In the greater part of the Panjáb, Muhammadan widows succeed to their husbands' lands where there are no sons or descendants in the male line, and they hold such lands for life or till they marry again, exactly in the same way as Hindú widows succeed. Suits to set aside alienations made by Muhammadan widows or to have them declared void, except for the life, or till the remarriage, of the widow, are quite as numerous in the Panjáb as suits to set aside alienations made by Hindú widows?

² Mr. J. W. Smyth, cited in the Abstract of Proceedings of the Council of the Governor-General, Calcutta, 1878, p. 468. These facts, coupled with the existence of the undivided family system among the Muhammadans of the Lower Provinces of Bengal, shows how cartious we should be in assuming that the profession of Islâm involves the adoption of the Muhammadan law of property.

- i. As to appeals and applications, the Act has been extended to appeals from, and applications to review, decrees and orders of the High Courts in the exercise of their original jurisdiction, schedule II, arts. 151, 162. These appeals had been formerly regulated by rules made under the Charters of 1865, rules which were insufficient and needlessly different.
- j. The exceptions on account of legal disability, ineffectual but bona fide proceedings in a Court without jurisdiction, concealed fraud, written acknowledgments, and the non-existence of a person capable of suing or being sued, have been extended to applications (secs. 7, 14, 17, 18, 19).

k. The starting-point of limitation has been altered in the following cases; suits to enforce a right of pre-emption, schedule II, no. 10, where, in the case of reversionary interests, rights to redeem etc., time now runs from the registration of the saledeed; the suits referred to in arts. 32, 48, 90, 91, 92, 114, 118, 127, in which the plaintiff's knowledge of certain facts is now made an ingredient of his cause of action; suits for money payable on demand, arts. 59, 73, where the time now runs in India, as in England 1, from the date of the transaction instead of from the demand 2: suits for redemption, art. 148; and suits in the mufassal, by mortgagees for possession of mortgaged immoveable property, art. 135. The period of limitation has been lengthened in arts. 37, 38, 40, 48, and shortened in arts. 118, 119, 146.

Amendments of Act XV of 1877. The amendments of Act XV of 1877 have been few and slight. They were made by Acts XII of 1879, sec. 108, VIII of 1880, V of 1881 (sec. 156), IX of 1887, and VII of 1888, and will be found in their proper places. But Act XV of 1877 requires several other amendments. 'Time,' said Lord Plunket, speaking of the law of prescription,—'Time holds in one hand a scythe, in the other an hour-glass. The scythe mows down the evidence of our rights, the hour-glass measures the period which renders that evidence superfluous.' The great orator, had he been familiar with Indian legislation, might have rendered his metaphor complete by adding that the frame-work of the hour-glass would certainly decay, the glass be broken, and the sand escape.

Further amendments suggested. In the present instance, the terms 'possession' (arts. 3, 47, 48, 49, 134-1423), 'actual possession' (art. 10), 'adverse possession,' 'dispossession,' and 'discontinuance of possession,' which occur in schedule II, articles 124, 142, 144, should be defined.

So also 'debt' (in sec. 20) should be defined so as to exclude De unliquidated damages and money which will become due only on the tion happening of a future uncertain event 1, and 'paid' should be defined so as to exclude involuntary payments as, for instance, by means of an execution-sale of the defendant's property. The expression 'continuing breach of contract' in sec. 23 has also given rise to difficulty and should be explained. So 'accounts stated' (art. 64) should either be defined or be replaced by some less technical expression.

It should also be expressly declared that the English rule of strict Th interpretation is inapplicable to the Act. 'Statutes of limitation,' of a said the Judicial Committee, reversing a decision of the Calcutta tion. High Court², 'like all others, ought to receive such a construction as the language in its plain meaning imports. They are in their nature strict and inflexible enactments. The object of the legislature in passing them is to quiet long possession and to extinguish stale demands.' But this decision has apparently been overlooked, and the opposite doctrine has been maintained, not only by the Calcutta High Court itself³, but also by the High Courts of Madras⁴ and Bombay⁵.

For the purposes of schedule II, arts. 32, 48, 90, 91, 92, 94, 95, Wi 96, 113, 114, 118 and 127, it should be declared that wilful nor ignorance is equivalent to, or carries with it the consequences of, knowledge 6. It should also be declared that persons cannot by agreement withdraw themselves from the operation of the Act 7.

The following applications should be expressly excluded from the Approperation of the Act: applications for certificates under Acts tion XXVII of 1860 and XL of 1858; applications for probate or letters or certificates of administration; applications which the Court has no discretion to refuse; applications for the exercise of functions of a ministerial character. It should also be declared that the provisions as to applications extend to Government.

So much for desirable additions to the preliminary part of the Act. To section 7 a clause should be added fixing a certain period (say eighteen years *) after which limitation should not be suspended by any disability.

sec. 17 (40 years), and 37 & 38 Vic. c. 37, sec. 5 (30 years). Eighteen years was the limit proposed by Sir James Colvile.

Section 11 should be extended to all obligations, not merely to those arising from contract.

In section 13 provision should be made for the case of several defendants, one of whom only has been absent from British India during the currency of the period of limitation.

Sections 13 and 16 should provide (as is done by secs. 14 and 15) that the day on which the state of things causing the suspension of limitation begins to exist, as well as the day on which it ceases to exist, should be counted among the days to be excluded in the plaintiff's favour.

Section 19 should provide for the case of an acknowledgment or payment made in favour of a person under disability, or by a person absent from British India.

Section 20 should declare the effect of part-payment of principal on the claim for interest: in the second clause the words 'as such' should be inserted after 'paid'; and the last clause should expressly provide for the receipt by the mortgagee of rent of mortgaged land'.

Section 28 should be expressly confined to corporeal property, and there should be an exception as to suits under schedule II, art. 3. Furthermore, words should be added showing distinctly that the legislature intend that the extinction of the right of the dispossessed owner shall involve the creation of a right of the person in possession when the period of limitation expires 3. And there should be a clause providing for the case of a succession of independent trespassers, each for less, though in the aggregate for more, than the full period 4.

As to the second schedule, the suits mentioned in its first division might in some instances be grouped more conveniently. Art. 40 should be extended to suits for an account of the profits obtained by infringing a copyright or patent. Art. 43 should be made to apply expressly to suits under the Probate and Administration Act, 1881, secs. 139, 140. Art. 44 should be extended to mortgages and leases. The starting-point fixed by art. 78 should be altered, and the wording of arts. 121, 132 should be made more precise. There should be special articles for the following suits: on a guarantee 5: for arrears of interest due on money charged upon land 6: for wrongful conversion by a bailee 7:

for the possession of lands sold by the defendant to the plaintiff: by the vendor of land for the purchase-money: on the quasi-contracts mentioned in the Contract Act, secs. 68-72. On the other hand, art. 65 should be omitted as covered by arts. 115, 116. In the third division, art. 179 should be provided with an explanation or illustrations founded on the numerous decisions of the High Courts on the words 'to take some step in aid of execution,' which have sometimes been construed in a singular manner?

Some of the limitation-rules relating to civil suits, and contained Spe in special and in local laws, might be repealed and inserted in the atic general Act³. The following is a list of the chief of these rules as t relating to suits: those relating to appeals and applications are too numerous to be here stated ⁴.

So much for civil suits. Although it may be inexpedient in India to provide a general law of limitation for criminal prosecutions, the statute-book might be much shortened by inserting in the second schedule to Act XV of 1877 articles condensing the enactments specified in pp. 15 and 61 supra, which provide limitation-rules for prosecutions under the laws relating respectively to municipalities, police, excise and salt.

We may conclude by quoting two remarks of the Judicial Committee in Ruckmaboy v. Lulloobhoy: 'It has become almost an axiom in jurisprudence that a law of limitation is a law relating to procedure, having reference only to the lex fori.' Courts of almost all civilised countries entertain causes of action which have originated in a foreign country, and adjudicate upon them according to the law of the country in which they arose, yet such Courts respectively proceed according to the prescription of the country in which it exercises its jurisdiction 1.7 This doctrine is embodied in the first clause of sec. II of the Act. second clause declares, in accordance with the opinions of Story 2 and of Blackburn and Lush JJ. 3, that a foreign rule of limitation may be a defence to a suit on a foreign contract, when the rule has extinguished the contract, and the parties were domiciled in the locus contractûs during the prescribed period.

From the circumstance that this Act prescribes a limitation to the Government for the institution of suits and presentation of criminal appeals the Madras High Court infers that the Government is not exempt from the provisions as to applications, 4 Mad. 156,

Notwithstanding anything herein contained, any suit mentioned in No. 146 of the second schedule hereto annexed may be brought within five years next after the said first day

1 Outside British India the Limitation Act is in force in the Haidarábad Assigned Districts, the civil and military station of Bangalore, the cantonments of Sikandarábád, Dísah, and Abu: in the lands in Native States occupied by the following railways: the Great Indian Peninsula Railway (Kurundwar), the Madras Railway (Mysore), the Nagpur and Chhattisgarh State Railway (Khairagarh and Nundgaon), and the Rajputana Malwa State Railway; in the jágír territories of the State of Jath; Mysore; the head-works of the Bhawalwah-LodranCanal (Bhawalpur Territory): see of October, 1877, unless where the period prescribed for such this Act is suit by the said Indian Limitation Act, 1871, shall have than that expired before the completion of the said five years; and any prescribed other suit for which the period of limitation prescribed by Act IX of 1871. this Act is shorter than the period of limitation prescribed by the said Indian Limitation Act, 1871, may be brought within two years next after the said first day of October, 1877, unless where the period prescribed for such suit by the same Act shall have expired before the completion of the said two years ¹.

3. In this Act, unless there be something repugnant in the Interpretasubject or context—

'plaintiff' includes also any person from or through whom a plaintiff derives his right to sue; 'applicant' includes also any person from or through whom an applicant derives his right to apply²; and 'defendant' includes also any person from or through whom a defendant derives his liability to be sued:

'easement' includes also a right, not arising from contract, by which one person is entitled to remove and appropriate for his own profit any part of the soil belonging to another, or anything growing in, or attached to, or subsisting upon, the land of another ³:

'bill of exchange' includes also a hundí and a cheque:

'bond' includes any instrument whereby a person obliges himself to pay money to another, on condition that the obligation shall be void if a specified act is performed, or is not performed, as the case may be ⁴:

Acts of limitation, like other laws relating to procedure, apply immediately to all steps taken after they have come into force, except when some provision is made to the contrary. Every one seeking the aid of a Court seeks it on the terms from time to time imposed by the legislature. He has not the privilege of making any application in any way and at any time. Other interests than his are at stake; and the Courts are not to exercise their coercive power at his request over another person, except under such regulations as shall make their action compatible with the general welfare, 7 Bom. 462, per West J.

² As to the title of purchasers at an execution-sale, see 16 Suth. P. C. 19, 20.

⁴ See infra, arts. 66, 67, 68, 74, 75, 80.

'promissory note' means any instrument whereby the maker engages absolutely to pay a specified sum of money to another at a time therein limited, or on demand, or at sight:

'trustee 1', does not include a benámídár 2, a mortgagee remaining in possession after the mortgage has been satisfied 3, or a wrong-doer in possession without title 4:

'suit' does not include an appeal or an application:

'registered' means duly registered in British India under the law for the registration of documents in force at the time and place of executing the document, or signing the decree or order referred to in the context:

'foreign country' means any country other than British India;

This section applies to a suit against trustees for the purpose of charging certain property with the trusts declared by the author of the trust in respect of that property and for an account, 8 Cal. 766.

But it does not apply to a claim to vindicate a trustee's personal right to the possession of immoveable property against another person claiming that right in the same character (7

A. 90): nor to a suit against a trustee, not to recover trust-property in specie, but only for an account, 5 Cal. 910 (see however 8 Cal. 766, cited supra): nor, apparently, to cases where the trustee actually disavows his trust and sets up an adverse title, 3 Ben. Continuing breaches and wrongs.

23. In the case of a continuing breach of contract 2 and in the case of a continuing wrong independent of contract3, a fresh period of limitation begins to run at every moment of the time during which the breach or the wrong, as the case may be, continues 4.

Suit for compensaable withdamage.

24. In the case of a suit for compensation for an act compensa-tion for act which does not give rise to a cause of action unless some not action- specific injury actually results therefrom, the period of limiout special tation shall be computed from the time when the injury results.

Illustrations.

- (a) A owns the surface of a field. B owns the subsoil. B digs coal thereout without causing any immediate apparent injury to the surface, but at last the surface subsides. The period of limitation in the case of a suit by A against B runs from the time of the subsidence 5.
- (b) A speaks and publishes of B slanderous words not actionable in themselves without special damage caused thereby. C in consequence refuses to employ B as his clerk. The period of limitation in the case of a suit by B against A for compensation for the slander does not commence till the refusal 6.

Computation of time mentioned in instruments.

- 25. All instruments shall, for the purposes of this Act, be deemed to be made with reference to the Gregorian calendar 7.
- 1 This section does not apply to a case in which the person to whom a right of suit is assigned after the institution of the suit obtains leave to carry on the suit, 5 Cal. 720. Nor does it apply to appeals, 2 All. 107.

PART IV 3.

ACQUISITION OF OWNERSHIP BY POSSESSION 4.

26. Where the access and use of light or air 5 to and for any Acquisition building have been peaceably enjoyed therewith, as an easement, of right to easements, and as of right 6, without interruption, and for twenty years, and where any way or watercourse, or the use of any water, or any other easement (whether affirmative or negative) has been peaceably and openly enjoyed by any person claiming

- ¹ This applies even where it appears on the face of the note that lunar months were intended by the parties, 6 Bom. 83, 85. A fortiori when the note bears an English as well as a Native date, as in 7 Bom. H. C. A. C. J. 77.
- ² See note 7, previous page.
 ³ Of this Part, sees. 26 and 27 have, in the Madras Presidency, the Central Provinces and Coorg, been repealed and reenacted with some change, by the Easements Act, V of 1882, supra vol. I. pp. 893, 904, 905.
- 4 This Act 'has nothing to do with prescription,' which 'implies a grant.' But rights of way, as well as other easements, may still be claimed in India by prescription, 5 Mad. 226: 6 Cal. 304, 812; and when so claimed the conditions of their acquisition in England (the knowledge on the part of the servient owner and his capacity to obstruct) will be recognised in India, 10 Cal. 218, per Garth C.J. That the non-statutory law of prescription applicable to India is the English law before the Prescription Act, 2 & 3 Will. IV, c. 71, see 6 Ben. 85: 12 Ben. 406: 3 Ben. O. C. J. 41.

The enjoyment of apertures admitting light and air is an enjoyment 'as of right' when it is open and manifest, not furtive or invisible, and when it is not had in such wise as to involve the admission of an obstructive right in the owner of the alleged servient tenement. The phrase does not mean a right acquired through grant from the servient owner, though the presumption of a grant from an enjoyment for 20 years was the basis of the English law on the subject, 7 Bom. 524, 525.

- ⁸ I Cal. 422: 10 Cal. 214. The enjoyment need not be actually known to the servient owner, ib. 218.

title thereto as an easement and as of right, without interruption, and for twenty years, the right to such access and use of light or air, way, water-course, use of water, or other easement, shall be absolute and indefeasible.

Each of the said periods of twenty years shall be taken to be a period ending within two years next before the institution of the suit wherein the claim to which such period relates is contested ¹.

Explanation.—Nothing is an interruption within the meaning of this section, unless where there is an actual discontinuance of the possession or enjoyment by reason of an obstruction by the act of some person other than the claimant, and unless such obstruction is submitted to or acquiesced in for one year after the claimant has notice thereof and of the person making or authorizing the same to be made ².

Illustrations.

(a) A suit is brought in 1881 for obstructing a right of way. The defendant admits the obstruction but denies the right of way. The plaintiff proves that the right was peaceably and openly enjoyed by him, claiming title thereto as an easement and as of right, without interruption, from 1st January 1860 to 1st of January 1880. The plaintiff is entitled to judgment.

(b) In a like suit also brought in 1881 the plaintiff merely proves that he enjoyed the right in manner aforesaid from 1858 to 1878. The suit shall be dismissed, as no exercise of the right by actual user has been proved to have taken place within two years next before the institution of the suit3.

(c) In a like suit the plaintiff shows that the right was peaceably and openly enjoyed by him for twenty years. The defendant proves that the plaintiff on one occasion during the twenty years had asked his leave to enjoy the right. The suit shall be dismissed.

² As to the issues to be framed under this section, see 6 Cal. 812.

The provisions of section 26 do not exclude, or interfere with, the acquirement of title otherwise than under them. The Act is remedial, not prohibitory or exhaustive, 6 Cal. 394: L. R., 7 I. A. 240, 246-247.

3 Illustrations ought never to be allowed to control the plain meaning of the section itself, and certainly they ought not to do so when the effect would be to curtail a right which the section in its ordinary sense would confer. This illustration, therefore, so faras it seems to imply that, in the case of discontinuous easements, actual user is to continue for the whole period of twenty years, must be rejected, 7 Cal. 135, 136.

from which any easement has been enjoyed or derived has Exclusion been held under or by virtue of any interest for life or any in favour term of years exceeding three years from the granting thereof, sioner of the time of the enjoyment of such easement during the tenement. continuance of such interest or term shall be excluded in the computation of the said last-mentioned period of twenty years, in case the claim is, within three years next after the determination of such interest or term, resisted by the person entitled, on such determination, to the said land of water.

Illustration.

A sues for a declaration that he is entitled to a right of way over B's land. A proves that he has enjoyed the right for twenty-five years; but B shows that during ten of these years C, a Hindú widow, had a life interest in the land, that on C's death B became entitled to the land, and that within two years after C's death he contested A's claim to the right. The suit must be dismissed, as A, with reference to the provisions of this section, has only proved enjoyment for fifteen years.

28. At the determination of the period hereby limited Extinguishment to any person for instituting a suit for possession of any of right to property. property, his right to such property shall be extinguished 1.

¹ Compare 3 & 4 Wm. IV, c. 27, sec. 34. Neither a special mode of devolution, nor an incapacity for alienation, will prevent limitation from operating against an estate, even in the case of sacred property, which is generally inalienable, 9 Bom. 231, per West J., citing Austin v. Llewellyn, o East, 276: Mayor of Brighton v. Guardians of Brighton, L. R., 5 C. P. 368, and the Indian cases in 6 Bom. 299, 300: 7 Bom. 188, and 7 Mad. 337. When the principal demand is lost, suits for accessory liabilities, such as interest on arrears, are lost also, I Mad. 231, per Holloway J., citing Savigny Syst., v. § 311.

As regards debts the Indian laws of limitation merely bar the remedy, but do not extinguish the right, 5 Cal. 897: 6 Cal. 340: and this view is certainly supported by the Contract Act, sec. 25, cl. (3). But see the same Act, sec. 2, cl. (j). The Bombay High Court seems to doubt, 5 Bom. 647.

As to acquisitive prescription, see 8 Bom. H.C. A. C. J. 171, and 9 Bom. 227, per West J. The Calcutta High Court has held that twelve years' continuous possession of land by a wrongdoer not only extinguishes the title of the rightful owner, but confers a good title upon the wrongdoer. It has, further, held (in 11 Ben. 237) that the title of the wrong-doer can be transferred to a third person while it is in course of acquisition and before it has been perfected by a twelve years' possession, 3 Cal. 226, citing 11 Moore, I. A. 345: 8 Ben. 540; and 20 Suth. Civ. R. 104. As to acquiring possessory title to a mortgaged estate, see 7 Mad. 26.

It does not apply to a suit brought upon a verbal contract, 3 Cal. 619, nor to a case where the note or bond gives the creditor the option of suing or waiting, 3 Cal. 619, 5 Cal. 21. The question arising under art. 75 resembles the question arising under a decree for the recovery of a sum by instalments, the decree providing that if default is made in paying any instalment the whole sum shall become due, viz., whether the decree-holder did, at the time default was made, waive his right to the whole sum decreed to him, or whether he did not? 14 Cal. 354, per Petheram C.J.

* Subsequent acceptance of an instalment in arrear operates as a waiver (see, however, 2 All. 863, per Straight J.; but not merely allowing the default to pass unnoticed, 5 Cal. 97; nor mere abstinence from suing, 7 Mad. 577 and 584, or from enforcing a condition, 14 Cal. 397. Purchasers of trust-property are entitled to the protection afforded by arts. 133 and 134 without showing that they bought without notice of the trust. Where the plaintiff is a remainderman or reversioner, article 140 would apply.

In 6 Cal. 315 Garth C.J. said that the words 'dispossession' and 'discontinuance apply only to cases where the owner of land has, either by his own act or that of another, been deprived altogether of his dominion over the land itself or the receipt of its profits. Art. 142 was suggested by the English statute 3 & 4 Wm. IV, c. 27, sec. 4, and the meaning is this: when there has been possession followed by a discontinuance of possession, time runs from the moment of its discontinuance, whether there has or has not been any adverse possession, and without regard to the intention with which, or the circumstances under which, possession was discontinued, 5 Cal. 683. That dispossession partly effected by fraud does not, for the purpose of art. 142, differ from other dispossession, нее 3 Св. 504.

A, a Hindú widow, agrees with her co-sharer B that the property to which they are jointly entitled shall remain in equal shares in their joint possession and enjoyment, but that she shall have no power to alienate the same property, and that, after her death, it shall pass to B. In 1845 A sells her share to C, and delivers possession to him. A dies in 1862. As regards B's heirs there is no adverse possession until A's death in 1862, L. R., 8 I. A. 210. See as to the beginning of adverse possession, L. R., 7 I. A. 1: L. R., 12 I. A. 188; see also 7 Cal. 394 and 3 All. 24.

Where the Collector in possession of A's land for the purpose of protecting the Government revenue pays the surplus proceeds of the land to B, an adverse claimant, the Collector's possession does not thereby become adverse to A, L. R., 9 I. A. 99: S. C., 5 All. 1.

pation allowed on ground of charity or relationship).

That the adverse possession of the defendant must be of the same nature as the possession sought by the plaintiff, see 3 All. 24.

In the case of a lessor, possession does not become adverse until after the determination of the tenancy, even though the tenant has purported to sublet or to sell the property leased, or has been evicted by a stranger, 8 Suth. Civ. R. 55, or has omitted to pay his rent, 7 Suth. Civ. R. 400: 7 Bom. 34. That the possession of a tenant by sufferance is not adverse to the landlord, see 8 Mad. 426. But there may be adverse possession where the defendants set up a pretended tenancy which the plaintiff throughout denied. See 7 Bom. 99, following 12 Ben. 280, per Mitter J.

Application by judgment-creditor to allow sale of attached property subject to a mortgage, 15 Cal. 363.

But opposition by judgment-creditor to appeal by judgment-debtor is not an application 'to take some step,' &c., 5 Cal. 595: nor is an application by a decree-holder for postponement of an execution-sale, 3 All. 757; and see 7 Bom. 296, where the execution-process applied for is distinct in its nature from a former one: nor is the mere paying court-fee in respect of execution-proceedings, 9 Cal. 730: nor isan application by a judgment-creditor to take money out of court deposited by the judgment-debtor, 8 Cal. 89.

³ An actual date must have been specified either absolutely or in relation to some contingency: it is not enough that the payment has been ordered to be made monthly or annually, 7 Mad. 83.

⁴ 4 All. 84: 5 All. 292: 7 Cal. 60. As to decrees payable by instalments, there is no provision like that in art. 75 as to promissory notes and bonds. Therefore, a decree payable by annual instalments, with a proviso that, in default of payment of any one instalment, the whole amount of the decree shall become payable forthwith, is barred unless application for execution is made within three years from the date on which any one instalment fell due and was not paid. But where the decree or order has been passed jointly against more persons than one, the application, if made against any one or more of them, or against his or their representatives, shall take effect against them all 2.

Explanation II.— Proper Court means the Court whose duty it is whether under section 226 or 227 of the Code of Civil Procedure instalment at the date specified does not give the judgment-creditor a fresh starting-point, 2 Bom. 356, 359.

Had it been intended that the legal representatives of a sole judgment-debtor or of jointly-liable judgment-debtors should have the benefit of a similar provision on the analogous grounds that they are only liable to the extent of the property in their possession, the Legislature would have extended this provision to them. The position, however, of several representatives of a sole judgment-debtor is very different quoad the decree-holder from that of several judgment-debtors with separate liabilities found by the decree, 3 All. 519, per Oldfield J.

¹ See 11 Bom. 138, where West J. held that art. 180 was applicable to a indement entered under sec. 86 of the Indian Insolvent Act (11 & 12 Vic. c. 21), and 8 ('al. 218, where the order of Her Majesty in Council confirmed a decree of the Court below. In F. B. R. 506, the High Court of Bengal held that the Indian legislature had no power to limit the period during which the decrees (meaning orders) of the Queen in Council should be executed, as this would interfere with the prerogative. But this decision is hardly correct. The order in council merely prescribes what shall be the final decree in the cause, leaving it to be executed by the ordinary process of the courts in India. It finally ascertains and defines the rights of the parties without relieving them of the obligation imposed upon them by the general law of enforcing those rights with due diligence, a matter with which the prerogative has no concern, 14 Moo. I. A. 493.

- 2 8 Cal. 218.
- ³ 6 Cal. 504 and see the Code of Civil Proc. sec. 248.
- * Art. 180 is independent of sec. 230 of the Civil Procedure Code and not controlled by it, 6 Bom. 258; and so the Madras High Court has held that the period prescribed by this article is not affected by that section, 7 Mad. 540.

THE FIRST APPENDIX.

The Acts contained in the following Appendix have this in common, that all of them are now used for the purpose of raising money for the general purposes of the State. The Court Fees Act and the Stamp Act are avowedly measures of taxation. But the Registration Act was intended solely to provide safeguards against fraud and to facilitate investigations of title; and it is to be regretted that the financial needs of the Indian Government render it impossible at present to apply the fees levied under that Act, after defraying its necessary expenses, to increasing the number of registration-offices, so as ultimately to have one within easy reach of every inhabitant of British India. If this were done, the Act might be extended to many classes of instruments now excluded from the operation of its compulsory clauses; and the result would be, not merely a diminution of fraud, but a sensible increase to the selling value of land throughout the country.

The Stamp Act.

The Registration

The objects and structure of the four Acts printed in this Appendix being clear and simple, we may dispense with an introduction to each enactment, and here merely state, first, that the Stamp Act is founded partly on the Indian Act XVIII of 1869, partly on the English Statutes 33 & 34 Vie. cc. 97 and 98; and, secondly, that the Registration Act divides all documents into those that must be, and those that may be, registered; and declares that no document required to be registered shall affect any immoveable property comprised therein, or be received in evidence of any transaction affecting such property, unless it has been registered; and that, as a rule, where the registration of a document relating to land is optional, such document, if registered, takes effect against all unregistered documents relating to the same property. Where registration is optional, as it is when the purchase money is less than rs. 100, the ingenious natives of British India avail themselves of this last provision to sell the same property twice over to different people, once by an unregistered conveyance to A, giving him possession, and a second time, when A happens to be out of possession, by a registered conveyance to B^1 . All documents admitted to registration are copied, indexed, and authenticated by the registering officers. An intending purchaser or mortgagee can thus at once find every non-testamentary instrument affecting a particular piece of land, and an effectual safeguard is provided against the suppression. destruction and fraudulent alteration of title-deeds.

We may also mention the previous Indian laws dealing with the Former subjects to which the Stamp Act and the Registration Act respectively relate. The old Regulations and Acts as to court-fees are now more matters of curiosity. But it is often necessary to ascertain registration whether an ancient document has been duly stamped, or whether a tion. conveyance executed between 1793 and 1877 has been duly registered. For these purposes the following lists may be useful.

The State defrayed the expense of all the judicial establishments. An institution fee, in the case of civil suits, was established by [Ben.] Regulation XXXVIII of 1795, not as a source of revenue, but, as appears from the preamble to the regulation, for the purpose of preventing vexatious litigation. By [Ben.] Reg. VI of 1797 the institution fees were converted into stamp duties; the preamble there assigns the same object; but adds also that of increasing the public revenue. The last purpose is the onlyone mentioned in [Ben.] Reg. I of 1814, which further regulates these payments' (First Report of Commissioners appointed to consider the reform of the judicial establishments, etc. of India, 1856, p. 22).

Powers-ofattorney recognisable for purposes of sec. 32.

- 33. For the purposes of section 32, the powers-of-attorney next hereinafter mentioned shall alone be recognised 2 (that is to say),—
- (a) if the principal at the time of executing the power-ofattorney resides in any part of British India in which this Act is for the time being in force, a power-of-attorney executed before and authenticated by the Registrar or Sub-Registrar within whose district or sub-district the principal resides³:
- (b) if the principal at the time aforesaid resides in any other part of British India, a power-of-attorney executed before and authenticated by any Magistrate:
- (c) if the principal at the time aforesaid does not reside in British India, a power-of-attorney executed before and authenticated by a Notary Public, or any Court, Judge, Magistrate, British Consul or Vice-Consul, or representative of Her Majesty or of the Government of India:

Provided that the following persons shall not be required to attend at any registration-office or court for the purpose of executing any such power-of-attorney as is mentioned in clauses (a) and (b) of this section:—

persons who by reason of bodily infirmity are unable without risk or serious inconvenience so to attend; persons who are in jail under civil or criminal process; and persons exempt by law from personal appearance in court.

In every such case the Registrar or Sub-Registrar or Magistrate (as the case may be), if satisfied that the power-of-attorney has been voluntarily executed by the person purporting to be the principal, may attest the same without requiring his personal attendance at the office or Court aforesaid.

To obtain evidence as to the voluntary nature of the execution,

the Registrar or Sub-Registrar or Magistrate may either himself go to the house of the person purporting to be the principal, or to the jail in which he is confined, and 1 examine him, or issue a commission for his examination.

Any power-of-attorney mentioned in this section may be proved by the production of it without further proof, when it purports on the face of it to have been executed before and authenticated by the person or Court hereinbefore mentioned in that behalf.

34. Subject to the provisions contained in this Part and in Enquiry sections 41, 43, 45, 69, 75, 77, 88 and 89, no document shall be gistration registered under this Act, unless the persons executing such docu- by regisment 2, or their representatives, assigns or agents authorised as tering aforesaid, appear before the registering officer within the time allowed for presentation under sections 23, 24, 25 and 26 3:

Provided that if owing to urgent necessity or unavoidable accident all such persons do not so appear, the Registrar, in cases where the delay in appearing does not exceed four months, may direct that on payment of a fine not exceeding ten times the amount of the proper registration-fee in addition to the fine, if any, payable under section 24, the document may be registered.

· Such appearances may be simultaneous or at different times.

The Registering officer shall thereupon-

- (a) enquire whether or not such document was executed by the persons by whom it purports to have been executed,
- (b) satisfy himself as to the identity of the persons appearing before him and alleging that they have executed the document,
- (c) in the case of any person appearing as a representative, assign or agent, satisfy himself of the right of such person so to appear.

Any application for a direction under the proviso in this section may be lodged with a Sub-Registrar, who shall forthwith forward it to the Registrar to whom he is subordinate.

Nothing in this section applies to copies of decrees or orders.

1 after satisfying himself as to the identity of the person purporting to be principal: see 17 Suth. P. C. 523, Procedure on admission of execution.

35. If all the persons executing the document appear personally before the registering officer and are personally known to him, or if he be otherwise satisfied that they are the persons they represent themselves to be, and if they all admit the execution 1 of the document:

or, in the case of any person appearing by a representative, assign or agent, if such representative, assign or agent admits the execution:

or, if the person executing the document is dead, and his representative or assign appears before the registering officer, and admits the execution.

the registering officer shall register the document as directed in sections 58 to 61, inclusive 2.

The registering officer may, in order to satisfy himself that the persons appearing before him are the persons they represent themselves to be, or for any other person contemplated by this Act, examine any one present in his office.

Procedure on denial of execution, etc.

If any of the persons by whom the document purports to be executed deny its execution 3, or if any such person appears to the registering officer 4 to be a minor 5, an idiot, or a lunatic, or if any person by whom the document purports to be executed is dead, and his representative or assign denies its execution, the registering officer shall refuse to register the document as to the person so denying, appearing or dead 1: Provided that, where such officer is a Registrar, he shall follow the procedure prescribed in Part XII of this Act.

Registration of wills and authorities to adopt. 41. A will or an authority to adopt, presented for registration by the testator or donor, may be registered in the same manner as any other document.

A will or authority to adopt presented for registration by any other person entitled to present it, shall be registered if the registering officer is satisfied,

- (a) that the will or authority was executed by the testator or donor, as the case may be;
 - (b) that the testator or donor is dead, and
- (c) that the person presenting the will or authority is, under section 40, entitled to present the same 1.

agreement for sale to B of the same property, A will not be allowed to retain the property as against B: see also 12 Bom. H. C. 179.

Where both documents are registered, see 2 Bom. 299 and 662: 9 Bom. 165.

Where document A executed while Act VIII of 1871 was in force was optionally registrable thereunder, and was not registered, and where document B relating to the same property executed after Act III of 1877 had come into force was compulsorily registrable thereunder, and was registered, see 2 All. 431, 851: 5 All. 593: 7 Cal. 570: 11 Cal. 661.

Fortunately, as above remarked, optional registration is now virtually abolished, by the Transfer of Property Act, except in the Bombay Presidency, the Panjáb and Burma, to which territories that Act has not yet been extended.

That sec. 50 has no retrospective effect, see 4 All. 227: 5 Bom. 442 and 653. But see 3 Mad. 73.

Explanation.—In cases where Act No. XVI of 1864 or Act No. XX of 1866 was in force in the place and at the time in and at which such unregistered document was executed, 'unregistered' means not registered according to such Act 1, and, where the document is executed after the first day of July 1871, not registered under Act No. VIII of 1871 or this Act 2.

Unfortunately these Acts arrived in England after the body of the Code had been printed off, too late, therefore, for the amendments to be inserted in their proper places.

Act VI of 1888 alters the rules relating to imprisonment for debt. Act VI of It prohibits the arrest or imprisonment of women in execution of ¹⁸⁸⁸, decrees for money, and thus makes the law what it is assumed to be in the Married Women's Property Act, 1874, sec. 8. In the case of male debtors, it gives every Court executing a decree a discretionary power to refuse a warrant of arrest at the pleasure of a decree-holder, and section 4 (based on the Presidency Small Cause Courts' Act, 1882, sec. 30, and on the Debtors' Bill, 1886, sec. 4) provides that when a judgment-debtor who has been arrested is brought before the Court before being committed to prison, the Court may order his release if he is unable to pay the amount of the decree and there is no reason to suppose that he has obstructed or will obstruct the decree-holder in the execution of the decree.

Section 8 provides that when a person in ill-health has been arrested, it shall be in the discretion of the Court to refuse to commit him to prison, and that when a person has been released from arrest or imprisonment on the ground of illness, he is liable to be rearrested.

Of Act VII of 1888 the following sections require special notice: — Act VII of Section 3 is intended to preserve the summary character of rent-1888. litigation, which the rulings reported in 9 Cal. 295 and 5 All. 406 would otherwise have destroyed.

Section 5 removes one of the objections to maintaining suits in British India on judgments of foreign Courts.

The need of section 6 is felt where, as in the Panjáb and the Lower Provinces, large areas are subject to fluvial action.

Sections 10, 11, 15 and 16 are intended to accommodate the language of the Code more closely to the system of process-serving which prevails in some parts of India.

Section 12 admits of summonses being sent for service to Superintendents of foreign States and to Courts established or continued by the Governor-General in Council in foreign territory, as well as to British Residents and Agents.

Section 17 empowers the Local Government to require evidence to be recorded in English. It follows the Code of Criminal Procedure, sec. 357 et seq., as well as local provisions in the Central Provinces, Oudh, and Burma.

Section 21 makes sec. 216 of the Code applicable not only to the equitable cases of set-off mentioned in 7 All. 284, but also to any equitable right to set-off a sum which is not a debt.

Section 24 empowers Courts in British India to send decrees for execution to those Courts out of British India which are authorised, by sec. 229 of the Code, to cause their decrees to be executed by British Indian Courts.

Section 28 exempts from liability to sale in execution of a decree of a civil Court any moveable property which any local law exempts from liability to sale in satisfaction of an arrear of land-revenue.

Section 31, sub-section 4, declares Chapter XX of the Code inapplicable to the Presidency towns. The inconvenience of having two different systems of insolvency-law in force in the same place is obvious.

The object of sections 37, 38, 40, and 41 is to remove the difficulties which have recently attended litigation on behalf of the minor Rájá of Kapurthala, one of the ruling chiefs of the Panjáb, and a landholder in that Province and in Oudh.

Sections 49-52 extend the discretion of Appellate Courts, which was thought to be unduly limited by the parts of the Code to which these sections refer.

Section 60 gives power to refer to the High Court questions as to jurisdiction in small causes, and enables the District Courts to submit for revision proceedings had under mistake as to such jurisdiction.

Act VII of 1888 also amends the Limitation Act and the Registration Act. Of these amendments the most important is that made by sections 32, 53, and 66, which extend to six months the period of limitation for applications under sections 365, 366, and 368 of the Code, and provide for such applications being admitted after that period in exceptional cases. They have been made in their proper places, supra, pp. 1000, 1001, 1110, 1120.
